In letters whih have reached his instance: "I am enclosing a clipping from the Naval Reserve Gazette ncident occurred in our convoy. Note the fact that the storm was one of the worst on record. I feel rather proud of myself, for I was in it for fifteen days and never even became seasick.

The clipping referred to, follows: "Secretary Daniels has issued a statement reporting the receipt of a message on February 26, 1918, telling of the arrival in port of an American built submarine chaser which became separated from her escort in the terrific gale of January 15th and which had not been reported up to that time and it was feared had been lost. This was one of the 110 foot boats which we turned over to the French Government, and was manned by a French crew, which saved the craft by a remarkable feat of navigation. In the storm which was one of the worst on record, the engines became disabled and the boat was left adrift far out at sea. The crew rigged up a sail made from bed coverings, and were able to make two or three knots an hour before the wind. There were no navigating instruments except a compass aboard, and the crew had to estimate their position. They sailed for 39 days on short rations and finally reached port."

Speaking further of the storm, Earl

SUIT FOR OCEAN BATHING

Pelican With Hunlike Proclivities Is Interned

V ORLEANS,—Bill, the only white pelican in captivity in the South, park, is to be interned for the period of the war. Bill is charged with being a slacker, a pro-German, and of openly practicing German frightfulness, In his pelicanesque manner, Bill, for two years, has strutted about the cage. Far from exhibiting the beautiful domestic virtues of the emblematic bird of the state-the brown pelican-Bill has consistently acted in a rude, Hunlike manner and terrorized the other deal-

Bill has been known to chase his inoffensive companions in captivity about the inclosure, pecking at terns, driving ducks below the surface until they were almost suffocated, and climbing with sinister intent to the top of the cage and trying to garrote with enormous beak the innocent birds who had taken refuge there.

He was captured some two years ago down Terrebonne way. A hunter shot Bill in the wing, and moreover cut him out of the airplane service. When retrieved by the dog he fought first the dog and then the hunter. His disposition much resembles that of a Mexican centipede. Finding it almost impos sible to kill Bill short of deliberate murder, he was sent to the state department of conservation, in whose charge he has remained ever since.

The other day, with evident malice aforethought, Bill sought out a little duckling, induced it to go into the water, and then deliberately tried to drown it by holding its head under water for several minutes. Running amuck, Bill then took a fall out of everything in the cage and licked them all.

The "happy family" of the flying cage blew up. It was no longer happy but miserable. So Bill was sentenced to internment. He will spend the rest of his existence in an inclosed lake. It is surrounded by barbed wire.

Bill is peevish, but there is class to him at that, and the children who are old pals of Bill are now notified that all future dates they have with him will have to be kept in the lake and not the cage.

Just a Little Diplomacy, and Behold! Iced Tea

> For two days running a certain man -we will call him Mr. Jones-had gone without ice in his apartment. Appeal to rival icemen brought forth answers aplenty, but no ice. As for going out in the street and beseeching icemen to let him have some frozen water, Mr. Jones was above that. "I'll die of thirst before I'll do that," he said. And, what's more, he meant it, and stuck to it.

hither and yon. Not an ice wagon was to be seen on the horizon. Suddenly rumble was heard up the street. Nearer and nearer it came. It was an ice wagon-an emergency wagon!

Up the staircase came a colored boy lugging a great chunk of ice. "Gee, if I can only get that," sighed Mr. Jones.

The boy came past. "Who is it for?" asked Jones, a gleam of hope appearing.

"Well, now, I've forgot exactly who it is for," answered the boy. "Man by the name of Jones, wasn't it?" asked Jones. "It might have been Jones," said the boy, hesianting.

NEW YORK.—Prunella, a cat at 665 Cauldwell avenue, could not for the nine lives of her understand why residents of Cauldwell and Westchester avenues did not appreciate her supercontralto voice which she raised nightly above the tenors, basses, sopranos, etc.,

of her alley quartet. Nor could Prunella discern the reason why neighbors showered her and her band with milk bottles, brickbats and flowerpots when she serenaded nightly with purely American cat music, while Beauty, a thoroughly yellow German canary bird belonging to Mrs. Helen Dwinell of 67 Cauldwell avenue, was permitted to warble night and day only those airs she learned in the Harz mountains,

Last Thursday, with murder in her eye, Prunella decided to end Beauty's life. But Beauty had been taken from the front window and was warbling a German melody from the kitchen window. With a few swift movements Prunella reached the window, sprang upon the ledge, and with her claws she opened Beauty's cage. Maybe Beauty thought Prunella was inviting her to join a songfest. At any rate Beauty hopped out of the cage and into Prunella's jaws. Mrs. Dwinell had only one recourse-the law. She filed suit in the municipal court of the Bronx, asserting that Mr. Samson, being the owner of Prunella, is responsible for the deeds of the cat and seeks to recover $25 damages for Beauty's death. Prunella has left the neighborhood, evidently in search of some place where she can preserve that ninth life.

punctured fingers and overtaxed eyes, he told her that it was intended for another woman, there was some thing of a scene. It was the basis of a divorce suit in which a decree was granted by Circuit Judge Dingeman. "We had an arrangement with a family of neighbors that when there was sickness in one family the other family should give all possible assistance," Mrs. Ruffery explained.

"Fred got sick and a young woman from the neighborhood came in and took care of him. She was a good-looking young woman about twenty-one years old, and Fred seemed entirely satisfied with the care he was getting. "After he got well, he went to a store and bought the silk. I was a little surprised, and I was more surprised at the interest he took in the making of

Big Chief Bender Makes Lucky "Find" at Hog Island

PHILADELPHIA.—Two weeks ago a short, husky, sunburned individual walked into the employment office at Hog island. He stood in line with the other applicants for employment and when his turn came he said: "Have you a job that I can fill?"

"What can you do?" asked the employment_clerk.
"Anything at all. Just give me a job," was the reply.

The applicant was sent to the ship-ways and put to work as a bolter on. Last Saturday Chief Bender was walking through the yards and thought the overall-clad figure on the side of the ship looked familiar. The chief fixed his eagle eyes on the man and

Every woman with her eyes open ust have noticed that button sh are little worn, and no doubt the fact that lace shoes are, as a general thing, neater and trimmer and more easily kept in condition has a good deal to do with this, declares a fushion writer. The fact that button shoes use up quite a little bit more leather than face shoes is the big reason behind their disappearance from fashion, say those who know. It does seem a very little leather to save, doesn't it? But then this is the day when we appreciate the mportance of very small things; the saving of a slice of bread a day, a lump of sugar or a half pound of meat -trifles that we are assured amount to enormous proportions in the aggre gate. From the point of view of good sense pure and simple, we might wish that shoes for autumn were not going to be so thinly soled. Thicker soles are warmer and dryer and do not need re pairing so often, but the government has decreed that for civilians no soles shall be of more than very moderate thickness, the exact thickness being set down by the rules in definite terms.

Since the height of shoes is to be imited to eight and a half or nine nches, there is every reason to believe that low shoes will be worn to a very great extent, even in cool weather. We re not in love with a low high shoe, though we find the Oxford entirely satisfactory; and, of course, if the nine-inch shoe is a conservation and patriotic shoe, the low shoe is even more so. To prevent the low shoe from being the cause of colds and chills, women will wear spats again as ondly as they did two seasons ago, or perhaps they will take to heavier stockings. Some women, you know, wore knitted woolen stockings last winter with low shoes, and found the combination warmer than high shoes and the usual thin stockings.

LEGHORN HAT IS A FAVORITE

Some of This Season's Styles Are Embroidered Directly Upon the Hat-Other Decorations.

Exquisitely simple was a leghorn hat of the ever-pleasing "picture" shape, with a flat crown and drooping brim. A wide blue ribbon of silver luster and velvety softness was drawn around the high crown, covering it at one side and crushed at the other end in a loose bow with scarf ends which hung over the brim. Tucked in about the lower edge of the ribbon were roses, alternating with tiny clusters of grapes. A very nar-row binding of the blue edged the

Upon another large leghorn was laid, to all appearances, an entire hat of lavender georgette crepe. The crown was soft; the brim, stiffened with tlny wires, reached almost to the edge of the leghorn brim and was fastened se-curely to it. About the crown were more soft folds of the crepe. In front was a large cluster of lilacs, reddish Persian blooms and purple blossoms, opened to disclose their bluish petals.

JAPAN AFTER OUR FAN TRADE

New Creations Open in Regular Shape, With Pictures Depicting Western Manners and Customs.

Japan has been swift to profit by the fact that Europe is not producing and selling to America all the things has for centuris famed. One of the commodities that she has been especially quick in sending us is a supply of fans of various sorts, notes a fashion critic. Real Japanese fans and Chinese fans, too, are charming, and really much more attractive than some of the later ones that she has so cleverly sent us. These new ones open in regular fan shape, and are printed or painted with scenes supposedly depicting Western manners and customs. No more wistaria and chrysanthemums, no more almond-eyed maidens in soft kimonos. No: these new fans show supposedly American women. One fan shows two women sitting by a table in chairs. them is actually clad in a skirt and shirtwalst quite in the most Western fashion possible, and if one may judge by appearances, she is trying to run Western world according to her own plans, for she is most domineer ng in appearance.

Do not let the surplus apples go to waste, make them into apple butter. Summer apples make splendid apple butter, even without the use of boiled cider, which, however, is a desirable addition if it can be obtained. U.S. GOVERNMENT MEANS US

Old-Time Extravagano Must Be Dropped.

By JOHN PALMER GAVIT. One of the good results that will ac-crue to the American people from their participation in the war is a better understanding of the purpose and function of money. Also, they will more fully appreciate their relation to the government and the fact that it is government—as much theirs as homes and farms and factories. for purposes of poetry and centiment it is well enough to talk about "Uncle Sam," your devotion to him, your willingness to lend to him by the purchase of bonds, War Savings Certificates and Thrift Stamps, and to give your own iffe and the lives of your sons on the actual fighting front; but you must not lose sight of the fact that after all, the United States, "Uncle Sam," U. S.," "Our Country," and so on—whatever coatle phases we are to represent the poetic phrase we use to represent the nation in its united action and aspiration—is just US, ourselves in our own proper persons, working and saving and applying our joint strength, for ourselves, our children and our children's children.

Too much have we thought of the government, the nation, Uncle Sam, and so on, as something separate from ourselves; something to which we give and lend, eagerly or willingly or grudgingly or under compulsion, as the case may be. We have had too little of the practice of team work for a great common purpose-our own pur

The Liberty Bond campaigns furnish occasion for reminding ourselves that it is our country, ourselves in our organized capacity, that is engaged in the war to abolish autocracy; that "Uncle Sam" is us, in common de-termination to do and give all of ourselves to an enterprise as thoroughly worth while as the American Revolution or the war to preserve the Union and free the slaves. And one of the ways in which we can participate directly and actively in this enterprise is to turn our money—all of it that is not absolutely and honestly necessary to the essential purposes of living and keeping well and efficient for the other things we have to do to help along the enterprise-over to ourselves in our organized capacity; that is, to the government, for the work of the war which it is conducting for us.

Money Useful Only for Exchange. Money is nothing in itself-just paper and metal. It is useless unless omebody else will accept it in exhange for something he has or some thing he can do. The measure of its ralue to you is the other fellow's need of the materials or the labor which it will in turn command for him. Spending money is the way we have of get have or the work they can do-"Goods Our responsibility, therefore, lies in the question of the kind of things for which we choose to exchange money, and the time and circumstances in which we exert that Thousands and thousands of people, says Peterson, are learning every week that one 30 cent box of Peterson's Ointment will abolish Eczema and banish piles, and the grateful letters I receive every day are worth more to me than money.

"I and Eczema for many years on my head and could not get anything to do it any good. I saw your ad and got one box and I owe you many thanks for the good it has done m There isn't a blotch on my head now, and I couldn't help but thank Peterson, for the cure is great "—Mrs.
Mary Hill, 420 Third Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. "I have had itching piles for 15 years and Peterson's is the only ointment that relieves me, besides the piles seem to have lieves me, besides the piles seem to have of waste and extravagance that mankind has devised, comes along to take workers out of industry and off the farms, and to turn them from production to high-power consumption and destruction-no matter if the ultimate purpose of the war be quite worth its cost in life and property—there simply are not material and labor enough in the country to permit both the continuance of the old kinds of expenditure and the taking on of the new.

Why We Must Do Without.

For the purposes of the war the government of the United States must have stupendous amounts of materials and work, and there is not enough of these to give the government what it must have and at the same time allow the people generally to have as much material and work for their private uses as they have in ordinary times. Therefore we must to the greatest

I beckoned to the chauffeur to go with me up to the office, as I had no when he got to the consulate I told them that if they would pay the taxi fare I would tell them who I

They knew at once that I was an escaped prisoner and they readily paid the chauffeur and invited me to give some account of myself.

They treated me most cordially and account I gave them of my adven-tures. Word was sent to the consu general and he immediately sent for me. When I went in he shook hands with me, greeting me very heartily and offering me a chair.

He then sat down, screwed a moncle on his eye and viewed me from top to toe. I could see that only good the spectacle I presented. I could see

"Go ahead and laugh!" I said. "You offend me the way I feel this blessed day!" and he needed no second Incidentally it gave me chance to laugh at him, for I was bout as much amused as he was.

After he had laughed himself about sick he got up and slapped me on the back and invited me to tell him my

"Lieutenant," he said when I had concluded, "you can have anything you want. I think your experience entitles you to it."

"Well, consul," I replied, "I would like a bath, a shave, a haircut and some civilized clothes about as badly as a man ever needed them, I suppose, but before that I would like to get a cable off to America to my mother telling her that I am safe and on my way to England!"

The consul gave me the necessary information and I had the satisfaction of knowing before I left the office that the cable, with its good tidings, was on its way to America.

Then he sent for one of the naval men who had been interned there since the beginning of the war and who was able to speak Dutch and told him to take good care of me. After I had been bathed and shaved and had a haircut I bought some new clothes and had something to eat, and

I felt like a new man. As I walked through the streets of Rotterdam breathing the air of freedom again and realizing that there was no longer any danger of being captured and taken back to prison it was a wonderful sensation.

I don't believe there will ever be a country that will appear in my eyes as good as Holland did then had to be somewhat careful, however, because Holland was full of German spies and I knew they would be keer to learn all they possibly could about my escape and my adventures so that authorities in Belgium could mete out punishment to everyone who was in any respect to blame for it. As I was in Rotterdam only one day, they didn't have very much opportunity to learn anything from me.

The naval officer who accompanied me and acted as interpreter for me introduced me to many other soldiers and sailors who had escaped from Belgium when the Germans took Antwerp, and as they had arrived in Holland in uniform and under arms, the laws of neutrality compelled their internment and they had been there ever

If he ngland that is not so bad. but if he happens to live farther away, the time he has to spend with his folks is very short, as the month's leave does not take into consideration the time consumed in traveling to and from Holland.

The possibility of escape from Holland is always there, but the British authorities have an agreement with the Dutch government to send refugees back immediately. In this respect, therefore, the position of a man who is interned is worse than that of a prisoner who, if he does succeed celved with open arms in his native land. Apart from this restraint, however, internment, with all its draw-backs, is a thousand times, yes, a million times, better than being a prisoner of war in Germany.

It seems to me that when the war is over and the men who have been imprisoned in Germany return home. they should be given a bigger and greater reception than the most victorious army that ever marched into a city, for they will have suffered and gone through more than the world will ever be able to understand.

No doubt you will find in the German prison camps one or two fainthearted individuals with a pronounced yellow streak who voluntarily gave up the struggle and gave up their liberty rather than risk their lives or limbs. These sad cases, however, are, I am sure, extremely few. Nine hunof the men fighting in the allied lines fighting every day, with all the horrors and all the risks, than be a prisoner of war in Germany, for the men in have a very keen realization of what that means.

But to return to my day in Rotter-

After I was fixed up I returned to the consulate and arrangements were made for my transportation to England at once. Fortunately there was a boat leaving that very night and I was allowed to take passage on it. Just as we were leaving Rotterdam the boat I was on rammed our own convoy, one of the destroyers, and injured it so badly that it had to put back to port. It would have been a strange climax to my adventure if the disaster had resulted in the sinking of my boat and I had lost my life while on my way to England after having successfully outwitted the Huns. But my luck was with me to the last, and while the accident resulted in some delay our boat was not seriously damaged and made the trip over in schedule time and without further accident, another destroyer having been assigned to escort us through danger zone in place of the one which had been put out of commis-

When I arrived in London, the reaction from the strain I had been under for nearly three months imme distely became apparent. My nerve were in such a state that it was absolutely impossible for me to cross the street without being in deadly fear of being run over or trampled. I stood at the curb, like an old woman from the country on her first visit to the city, and I would not venture across until some knowing policeman, recognizing my condition, came to my assistance and convoyed me across. Indeed, there was a great number of English officers at home at all times "getting back their nerves" after a long spell of active service at the front, so that my condition was any-thing but novel to the London bob-

It was not many days, however, be fore I regained control of myself and felt in first-class shape.

Although the British authorities in Holland had wired my mother from Holland that I was safe and on my way to England, the first thing I did when we landed was to send her a cable result. cable myself. The cable read as follows:

"Mrs. M. J. O'Brien, Momence, Ill., U. S. A. "Just escaped from Germany. Let-

As I delivered it to the cable dispatcher I could just imagine the exultation with which my mother would receive it and the pride she would feel as she exhibited it among her neighbors and friends.

It was all very amusing and gratifying to me and I must confess I felt quite cocky as I walked into the war department to report.

For the next five days 1 was kept very busy answering questions put to me by the military authorities regarding what I had observed as to conditions in Germany and behind the lines.

What I reported was taken down by a stenographer and made part of he official records, but I did not give them my story in narrative form. The naturally of interest to various in every line of government work took t in turns to question me. One morning would be devoted, for instance, nature-German methods behind the front line trenches, tactics, morale of troops and similar matters. Then the viation experts would take a whack observed of German flying corps methods and equipment. Then, again, the food experts would interrogate me as to what I had learned of food conditions in Germany, Luxembourg and Belgium, and as I had lived pretty lose to the ground for the best part of seventy-two days I was able to give them some fairly accurate reports as many of the things I told them probably having more significance to

One of the most amusing incidents of my return occurred when I called at my bankers in London to get my personal effects.

The practice in the Royal Flying corps when a pilot is reported mis-sing is to have two of his comrades assigned to go through his belongings, check them over, destroy anything that it might not be to his interest to preserve, and send the whole bustness to his banker or his home, as the case may be. Every letter is read through, but their contents is never afterwards discussed or revealed in any way. If the pilot is finally reported dead, his effects are forwarded to his next of kin, but while he is officially only "missing," or is known to be a prisoner of war, they are kept either at the squadron headquarters or sent to his bankers.

In my case as soon as it was learned that I had fallen from the sky, it was assumed that I had been killed and my chum, Paul Raney, and another officer detailed to check over my ef-The list they made and to which they affixed their signatures, being presented to the king a man is as I have previously mentioned, is conched carefully as to just how he is now in my possession and is one of to act and what he is to say and do. the most treasured souvenirs of my adventure.

He looked at me carefully through the latticed window, then jumped down from the high chair and came outside to clasp me by the hand.

"Good heavens, leftenant!" he exclaimed, as he pumped my hand up and down, "how did you ever get away?" and I had to sit right down and tell him and half a dozen other people in the bank all about my experiences. I had been in England about five days when I received a telegram which, at first, occasioned me almost as much concern as the unexpected sight of a German spiked helmet had caused me in Belgium. It read as follows

"Lieut. P. A. O'Brien, Royal Flying Corps, Regent's Palace Hotel, Lon-

"The king is very glad to hear of your escape from Germany. If you are to be in London on Friday next, December 7th, His majesty will receive you at Buckingham palace at 10:30 a. m. Please acknowledge. "CROMER." Of course, there was only one thing to do and that was to obey orders. I was an officer in the army and the king was my commander in chief, I had to go, and so I sat down and sent off the following answer: "Earl Cromer, Buckingham Palace,

In the interval that elapsed, I must confess, the ordeal of calling on the king of England loomed up more dreadfully every day, and I really believed I would rather have spent an other day in the empty house in the big city in Belgium or, say, two more days at Courtral, than to go through

CHAPTER XIX.

I Am Presented to the King. When the dreaded 7th of December arrived. I halted a taxicab and in as command, directed the chauffeur to drive me to Buckingham palace, as though I was paying my regular morn-

My friends' version of this incident, I have since heard, is that I seated myself in the taxi and leaning through the window said: "Buckingham palace!" whereupon the taxi driver got down, opened the door and exclaimed threateningly:

But I can only give my word that nothing of the kind occurred.

When I arrived at the palace gate, the sentry on guard asked me was and then let me pass at once up to the front entrance of the palace. There I was met by an elaborately uniformed and equally elaborately decorated personage who, judging by the long row of medals he wore, must have seen long and distinguished service for the king.

I was relieved of my overcoat, hat and stick and conducted up a long stairway, where I was turned over to another functionary, who led me to the reception room of Earl Cromer, the king's secretary.

There I was introduced to another earl and a duke, whose name I do not remember. I was becoming so bewildered, in fact, that it is a wonder that I remember as much as I do of this eventful day.

I had heard many times that before

He was very positive about it all, where I supposed I was at last to rewhere I supposed I was at last to receive my coaching, but I observed the earl bow to a man standing there and realized that I was standing in the presence of the king of England.

the earl announced, and then immediately backed from the room. I believed I would have followed right behind him, but by that time the king had me by the hand and was congratulating me, and he spoke so very cordially and democratically that he put me at my ease at once. He then asked me how I felt and whether I was in a condition to converse, and when I told him I was, he said he would be very much pleased to hear my story in detail.

"Were you treated any worse by the Germans. leftenant?" he asked, "on account of being an American? I've heard that the Germans had threat ened to shoot Americans serving in because America was a neutral country and Americans had no right to mix in the war. Did you find that to be the case?"

I told him that I had heard similar reports, but that I did not notice any appreciable difference in my treat-ment from that accorded Britishers.

The king declared that he believed my escape was due to my pluck and will power and that it was one of the most remarkable escapes he had ever heard of, which I thought was quite matter-of-fact tone of voice as I could a compliment, coming as it did from the king of England.

"I hone that all the as you have, leftenant," he said, "and I feel quite sure they will. I fully appreciate all the service rendered us by Americans before the States entered the war."

I had not expected to remain more than a few minutes, as I understood that four minutes is considered a long audience with the king. Fifty-two minutes elapsed before I finally left there!

During all this time I had done most of the talking, in response to the king's request to tell my story. Occasionally he interrupted to ask a question about a point he wanted me to make clear, but for the most part he was content to play the part of a lis-

He seemed to be very keen on everything and when I described some of the tight holes I got into during my escape he evinced his sympathy. Oc-casionally I introduced some of the few humorous incidents of my adventure and in every instance he laughed heartily.

Altogether the impression I got of him was that he is a very genial, gracious and alert sovereign. I know I have felt more ill at ease when talking to a major than when speaking to the king-but perhaps I had more cause to. During the whole interview we

Home Again.

That same day, in the evening, I was tendered a banquet at the Hotel Savoy by a fellow officer who had bet three other friends of mine I would be home by Christmas. This wager had been made at the time he neard that I was a prisoner of war, and the dinner was the stake.

The first intimation he had of my

His mystification was quite explicable. The last time he had seen me i was going down to earth with a builet in my face and my machine doing a spinning-nose dive. He was one of my comrades in the flying corps and was in the fight which resulted in my capture. He said he had read the report that I was a prisoner of war, but he had never believed it, as he did not think it possible for me survive that fall.

He was one of the few men living out of eighteen who were originally in my squadron—I do not mean the eighteen with whom I sailed from Canada last May, but the squadron joined in France.

As we sat on the deck exchanging experiences, I would frequently notice him gazing intently in my face as if he were not quite sure that the whole proposition was not a hoax and that I was an imposter. Outside of this unexpected meeting, my trip was uneventful. I arrived at St. John, New Bruns-wick, and eventually in the little town of Momence, Ill., on the Kankakee river.

I have said that I was never so happy to arrive in a country as I was when I set foot on Dutch soil. Now, I'm afraid I shall have to take that statement back. Not until I finally landed in Momence and realized that I was again in the town of my childhood days did I enjoy that feeling of absolute security which one never really appreciates until after a visit to foreign parts.

Now that I am back, the whole adventure constantly recurs to me as a dream, and I'm never quite sure that I won't wake up and find it so. (THE END)

American Navy Aviation Camp. Somewhere in Italy.—Back there at home you have all heard by this time of the thrilling exploits of American aviators on the Piave river-the army aviators who dropped their bombs on the frail Austrian pontoon bridges and helped turn the enemy invasion into a disastrous retreat. It is now permitted to announce that American paval aviators are also aiding the Italian de-

For more than three months now these bronzed boys of ours, skimming the air in their flying boats, have kept their constant vigil of coast patrol along the Italian seashore, watching for the stealthy moving blur beneath the waves that means one of the foe's submarines, scanning the horizon for the specks which might be overbold Austrian destroyers, or rising beyond the clouds that screen the enemy's seaplanes.

As a matter of fact, American naval flyers are co-operating with the navies of all the great allies in Europe. Numberless "eyes" are required down the long coasts from the North sea to the Mediterranean, and the United States is furnishing its share as fast as possible. This work, of course, is all under Admiral Sims, but there is special headquarters for American naval aviation, under Capt, H. I. Cone, in Paris.

This system of American co-operation has been developing since last August, and naturally will extend in the future as our naval forces grow. In France naval aviators were the first to fly beneath our flag. But in Italy the effort of the American navy is comparatively new. The number of ur men now there is a matter of military information-therefore a secret. But there are enough to have done plenty of useful work.

FRENCH SCOUTS GREET US

The scout program as taught to the routh of this country through the Boy Scouts of America has proved to be so effective in the making of good sol-diers and in actual warfare that the French government has decided to prepare a system of physical and moral training based on it.

SCOUT SAVES ARMY CAPTAIN

In saving Capt. Miller R. Taylor from drowning, Edgar Woodward, a boy scout, has added prestige to his organization.

Captain Taylor with 128 men of the

One Hundred and Eighty-ninth aero squadron had gone into camp near Kemah, Tex., on Clear Creek.

Captain Taylor attempted to swim across, but was seized with a cramp. He tells of his rescue as follows: "After I was within twenty or thirty yards of the bank I felt my legs cramp and realized that I was near to drowning. The cramp extended to my arms, and I went down. Half conscious, I struggled to the surface, expelled some of the water from my lungs, but was unable to swim, and again went down. Once more I came to the surface of the water long enough to get one breath before I again sank. Then when I had given up the struggle I felt a hand grab mine. I owe my life to the quick headwork and heroism of this boy scout, who had been watching me from the bank and who started for me as soon as he saw I was in distress."

To sail a boat, however, scouts nust be fourteen and first-class swimmers and lifesavers, gain parents' special permission and qualify in sea scout requirements.

They must also recruit the company to three or four boats' crews, and be under an adult officer known as the 'sea scoutmaster" who is a registered scoutmaster, assigned to this branch,

SCOUT USES HIS TRAINING.

Practical results of the value of first aid work was exemplified by boy scouts of Mitchell, S. D., while on a hike to Firesteel Creek. Corwin Wright, a twelve-year-old boy, stumbled and fell upon a thick piece of without the slightest hesitation, Wesley Walker, age 14, took Wright's legging and stocking off and doctored the injury. Water was boiling over a this to cleanse the wound thoroughly. From a scout kit, he took a sterilized bandage and had the wound dressed within ten minutes after the accident

SCOUTS HUNT FARM WORKERS.

Six thousand boy scouts are enrolling business men of Philadelphia as farm workers. In business offices and factories the boys will enroll men who have had much farm experience, those who have had little and those who have had none. When the recruits have been classi-Vancouver, B. C.—County police in day to farm work will be put in one tire vacation of more than a week in

Because of the shortage of labor the boy scouts of Georgia will rally to the aid of the peach growers.

There are no more efficient workers Georgia than the boy scouts, and if their enthusiasm and energy can be turned to the gathering of peach crops, it will save the high cost of the fruit to the public because of scarcity, will conserve it for canning ourposes, thereby making it a part of the food reserve of the nation, and will save the situation for the growers.

BOY SCOUT DOINGS.

One hundred and fifty Lima (O.) boy scouts scoured the streets and al leys, hunting out all unsightly condiions such as broken fences, piles of rubbish, boxes, etc., and reporting the ame to the chamber of commerce, which will see that the owners of such places put them in a more sanitary condition. Boy scouts of Huntington, N. Y., gathered metals and rubber, which sold and the proceeds given to the Red Cross.

Weather and the Moon. "Do you believe the weather is indi-cated by the moon?"

"Looks that way sometimes, stranger," replied the man who evilently did not want to be bothered. Mostly when you can't see the moon it's 'cloudy, and when you can it has leared up.'

"He's a very bright man isn't he?"
