To The Public
Advertising is the art of bringing to the attention of a prospective buyer in a convincing manner, the things which one has to sell.
The best advertisement tells nothing but the truth, in simple, attractive words.
The merchant advertises his wares.
The mechanic his skill as an artisan.
And monied institutions their service and security—which they offer to their patrons in helping them to safeguard their treasure.
We point with just pride to thirty-two years of honest service during which time we have earnestly striven to deserve the confidence of the community and our customers and the result of which effort has been amply demonstrated by our present success.
We can truthfully state that our great desire is not only to uphold the standard which we have raised during these long years, but lift it higher and to render any possible service to others, consistent with safety and justice to ourselves.
Your patronage is respectfully solicited.

BOAT CAPTAINS MUST COLLECT TAX FROM FISHERMEN

Collector of Internal Revenue Samuel Iredell announces that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, D. C., has made the following rules respecting the collection of 8 per cent. War Tax on amounts charged by Boat Captains for carrying Fishermen to the Fishing Grounds. "Under the direct provisions of the law it is held by this Bureau that amounts paid for such transportation of persons from one point in the United States to another when in excess of 42 cents are subject to the tax. The tax applies to chartered or special cars or passenger boats for the purpose of transporting persons whether such charges be lump sums or on a per capita basis. In the administration of the Revenue Acts of 1917 and 1918 it has been consistently held by this office that where fishing parties or other persons are transported from the wharf or other shore point to or through fishing grounds or to other points or places and returned such transportation is from one point in the United States to another within the meaning of the Acts and amounts paid for such transportation are taxable.

The Collector of Internal Revenue at Camden states that there are three general classes of boat owners who charge amounts in connection with the transportation of persons to fishing banks, etc. in his district, viz:

1. Persons owning motor and sail driven boats, who charge a specified sum for rides along the beach and out across the bar and return.
2. Boat owners having motor and sail driven sloops who carry persons desiring to fish off shore for which a specified per capita charge is made for the day's trip.
3. The owners of small boats, motor and sail driven, who take parties to fishing banks and return for which services a lump sum is charged for the trip.

It is considered that amounts paid for all of these services are subject to the taxes imposed by sections 500 of the Revenue Acts of 1917 and 1918."

A Lucky Throw.
I awoke one night just in time to see a man getting out of my window. I picked up an ink bottle, the only thing handy, and threw it at him. Safer Than Ever
A FEW WEEKS ago a small bank in another state closed its doors.
The people of that community became alarmed and started a "run" on the National Bank of that town.
The Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis learned of this and they rushed to the aid of the National Bank with money enough to meet all demands of the depositors.
The trouble quickly melted away when the people learned that the great Federal Reserve Bank was behind their local institution, making it safe even in times like that.
The great banking system now has the power to adjust itself to all problems. That means greater safety and greater service.
Think it over.

Nathan's father has a grocery store and he hears much about business conditions at home. Naturally his conversation is much about it also. The other day his mother took him to the doctor. They sat in the waiting room and waited their turn while several patients preceded them into the inner office.
Finally their turn came and they were ushered in to the doctor. Nathan eyed him a minute. Then he spoke. "You do have a good trade here," he said. "There's a lot more customers still out in that little room out there."

THE SANDMAN STORY

SAVING THE SEEDLINGS

OUTSIDE above the ground it was beginning to be warm and sunny, but under the earth, where lived Mr. Mole, it was still chilly and dark. Old Mrs. Earthworm was just beginning to stretch herself, for she was hungry, but thinking that it must be rather early for the young Seedlings to be in condition for her to enjoy she turned over to take another nap. But the Seedlings were nearer ready than Mrs. Earthworm thought—already their little legs and arms were reaching out and above to get to the light and old Mr. Root, who had weathered many a summer and winter, was warning them to be careful.

"The first thing you know you awake your enemy, Mrs. Earthworm," he told them; "keep quiet and do not kick out with your little fibers or she will be upon you with her whole family and you never will see the light."

But the Seedlings were young; this was their first season and they did not know Mrs. Earthworm, nor did they fear anything, for, of course, they did not know as much as old Mr. Root, so they paid no attention to his warning.

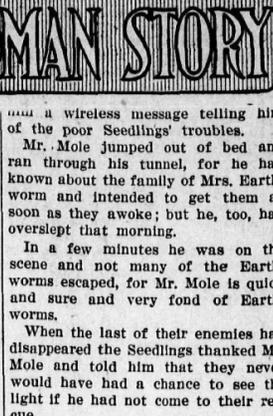

If Mrs. Earthworm had not made her bed so close to that of the Seedlings it might not have happened, but she did, and by and by the Seedlings got so squirmy and reached out so far with their little fiber legs and arms that they tickled Mrs. Earthworm, and over she flopped.

"What was that?" she said, wiggling and stretching herself. "Well, if I haven't overslept; here it is time I was up and eating; come, come," she called to her family; "get up, the Seedlings are almost ready to go out and there you are all sleeping."

In a few minutes all of Mrs. Earthworm's family were nipping the legs and arms of the young Seedlings who now were really frightened and calling for help.

Old Mr. Root could not help them; there was only one who could and that was Mr. Mole and Mr. Root knew where he lived; it was not far from his home, and he managed to send

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

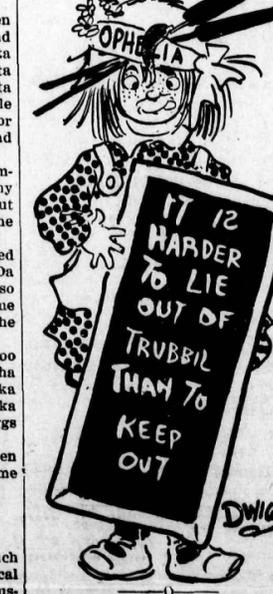

By C. N. LURIE
Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

'AGGRAVATED' AND 'PROVOKED'.
"I WAS so aggravated that I almost became ill," said a woman to whom something vexatious had happened. She was guilty of an error of speech which is quite common, and which is condemned by all authorities on English. The word "aggravate" is derived from a Latin word meaning "to increase in weight," and in English usage should be employed only to mean "to increase in gravity or severity, to become worse." Therefore, it is correct to say that a disease or a misfortune may be aggravated, but not the person who has the disease or is subject to the misfortune.

But this is drifting somewhat from our subject. It is to be borne in mind that "aggravated" does not mean and should never be used in the sense of "angry," "waxed," "exasperated," "irritated," etc. In the sentence with which this article began any of these four words, or a word of similar meaning, should be substituted for "aggravated."

How It Started

TOUCHING GLASSES.
IN THE days of the "code of honor," when duelling was as formal as the opening of a peace conference, it was the custom to drink a glass of wine before fighting. To make sure the wine was not poisoned (Those were the good old days!) each contestant poured a little of his wine into the glass of the other. The custom survives in the form of touching glasses before drinking.

Phosphorus Found by Accident.
Phosphorus was discovered accidentally while Brand, a Hamburg alchemist, was experimenting with liquids to find some element that would help transform silver to gold. The discovery, made in 1868, was not regarded then as important, but later developed an importance that was very great.

What's in a Name?

By MILDRED MARSHALL
Facts about your name; its history; meanings; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

DOROTHY
ONE of the quaintest and most whimsical of origins is that from which Dorothy sprang. Theos and Zeus, father of the gods, were identical terms in ancient Greece. From Theos came many masculine names and one feminine, Theodora, which signified "gift of God" or "living gift." Curiously enough, the reversal of the name or Dorothea was speedily accomplished and, though absolutely incorrect, gained more prevalence in the Western world than Theodora has ever achieved.
The beautiful legend of St. Dorothea helped to give her name widespread fame. It is the story of the Cappadocian maiden who sent the roses of Paradise by angelic hands as testimony of the joy she was reaping. Dorothea became a patron saint in Germany and England straightway adopted her name because of Massinger's powerful drama. Dorothy was the next step in her evolution and Dolly became a popular diminutive. Indeed, so common was it in usage that it became the generic term for wooden children or puppets in the time of Elizabeth Stuart, and hence our own "dolly," or doll, beloved of the small girl.
Dorothy became a Puritan name at the height of the reign of the house of Hanover, and was used by Mrs. Dorothy Cromwell and other Roundhead daughters. France called her Dorothea, while Germany preferred the original Dorothea, and Italy omitted the aspirate and made her Dorothea. England and America favor Dorothy, with its fluffy diminutive Dolly. Russia, by some mysterious translation, claiming that the patroness of Darjia was an Athenian lady martyred with her husband Chrysanthus at Rome and buried in a catacomb which was opened in the reign of Constantine the Great. The modern Greek rendition of the name is Thorothea.
Dorothy's talismanic gem is the diamond. It is said to afford her protection from evil and bring her great happiness. As the old legend goes: "The Evil Eye shall have no power to harm Him that shall wear a diamond as a charm."
Saturday is her lucky day and 2 her lucky number, while the flower assigned to her is the daisy, signifying innocence.

MAPLE TREES OFFER WEALTH OF SWEETS

Farmers Overlook Opportunities to Obtain Sirup.
Industry Not Confined to Circumscribed Areas in New England and New York—Experience Necessary to Boil Sirup.

Many thousands of American farmers throughout a score of states are overlooking opportunities to secure delicious maple sugar and sirup for home use, as well as for sale, at very little cost. This statement, of interest because of the approach of "sugar weather," is based on data compiled by experts of the United States Department of Agriculture who have made a special study of the maple-sirup industry. While Americans commonly think of this industry as being confined largely to circumscribed areas in New England and New York, there are, as a matter of fact, many potential "sugar bushes" throughout eastern and northeastern United States; in other words, throughout a region extending south to include North Carolina and Tennessee and west to include northern Missouri, Iowa, and Minnesota. There are also a considerable number of maple trees of sugar-yielding species in Washington and Oregon.
While some experience is necessary to boil the sap down to sirup and sugar properly, the process is not complicated and may be learned readily. A United States Department of Agriculture bulletin, "Production of Maple Sirup and Sugar," gives the necessary information, and will be sent free to any person addressing the department at Washington.
A clump of 10 to 15 trees usually will yield enough sirup for family use to make tapping worth while, and in many cases will afford a surplus which can be sold at remunerative price.

Confine Them in Slat-Bottomed Coop for Two or Three Days—Will Mate Soon Afterward.
Turkey hens can easily be broken of their broodiness by confining them for two or three days to a coop with a slat bottom. They will mate soon after being let out of the coop and begin laying in about a week.

FARMER SHOULD WEIGH DIFFERENT FINANCIAL PROBLEMS CAREFULLY

Taking the Farm Car Out of the Nonproduction List.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Credit is always a good thing to have, and under certain conditions a very good thing to use, but just now it seems in most cases to be much more desirable to have it than actually to use it. The United States Department of Agriculture warns farmers that the present is a particularly unfavorable time to borrow for any purpose that does not promise naturally to increase the productiveness of the farm enterprise. This applies particularly to long-time loans. Interest rates are at present considerably above normal, and the payment of these rates is in itself a heavy burden to assume.
When to Borrow.
It is furthermore pointed out that while at the beginning or early in the progress of a period of rising prices it is generally highly profitable to borrow for productive purposes, the case is quite different in time of falling prices. When prices go up the value of money goes down, and a debt contracted on a low market can be settled on a high market with money representing correspondingly less labor and smaller quantities of products per dollar. Thus, with rising prices all loans that would be safe on a steady market stand to yield handsome profits. In a period of peak prices, however, or of falling prices, such as farmers are facing now, the shoe is on the other foot. At such a time it is advisable to use great caution in borrowing since there is a probability of having to pay back the loan in dearer dollars than those obtained from the loan.
For those who find that they must borrow at this time in order to avert disaster, or are so situated that by a reasonable amount of additional capital they can naturally increase their earnings, the office of farm management and farm economics offers certain simple rules to be kept in mind.
The first and most important rule is that only as much money be borrowed as can be put to a decidedly productive use. With the rate of interest high and prices falling, only an important use of borrowed capital is likely to make a loan prove profitable or even a safe venture for the borrower. The borrowing of money for the purchase of power machinery, for example, can be justified under present conditions only where farming is done on a considerable scale, and where such machinery can be used a considerable number of days during the year to save time and labor needed elsewhere on the farm.

The second rule to be considered by the farmer concerns the time when the loan shall be repaid. If he borrows money to purchase fertilizer and agrees to repay it before a crop is harvested and sold, he may have difficulty in discharging the debt. If he arranges, however, to pay after the borrowed fertilizer has brought returns, he will be relieved of the possible embarrassment of asking for a renewal of the note and the resultant injury to his credit.
The third consideration is closely related to the second, and has to do with the duration of the loan. Generally speaking, the length of time the debt is allowed to run should be closely related to the productive life of the farm implement or improvement for which the money is employed. If the money is to build a silo that will last ten years, the loan should not run more than ten years, because, if a silo cannot pay for itself in its own lifetime it is plain that it would be folly to borrow to build it. On the other hand, such a loan should run long enough to give the farmer a good chance to meet it when due.
Provision should be made in a long-time loan for the gradual reduction of the principal. This can be done by wording the note so that a part of the principal can be paid on any interest date, or by providing for a definite annual or semi-annual payment covering the interest due and allowing a gradually increasing amount to be paid against the principal. Each of these methods prepares for the payment of the interest as it comes due and automatically disposes of the principal in a stated time.
Total Annual Payments.
On a $1,000 loan to run for 15 years at 5 per cent interest, the farmer could arrange a total annual payment of $100. Of his first $100 payment, $50 would settle the interest and leave $50 to be paid against the principal. The next year interest could be charged for only $50, the amount of the reduced principal, and his annual payment would be divided into $47.50 to care for the interest, and $52.50 to be applied on the principal. By this method the debt and its interest are gradually reduced until in the fourteenth year $57.20 would be paid as interest on a principal amounting to only $114.35. The next year the borrower would make a total payment of $21.07, $1 for interest charges and $20.07 to pay off the last of the debt itself.

USING COWPEAS FOR SILAGE
Best Plan in Cutting for Silage to Wait Until Pods First Begin to Turn Yellow.
For silage, cowpeas should be cut when the pods first begin to turn yellow. In many sections alternate rows of cowpeas and corn are put in the silo, but the most common method, perhaps, is one load of cowpeas to two or three loads of corn. This mixture is easily handled, packs quite satisfactorily, keeps well, and makes a superior quality of palatable silage. Although the vines may be put in the silo without cutting, they will pack much closer if run through a silage cutter. Much care should be taken to see that the silage is well distributed and well packed.

TOO BAD ABOUT HER MEMORY

And Really Opera Goer Should Not Be Expected to Remember Details That Are Trifling.

"You were at the opera last evening?"
 "Yes; perfectly delightful time!"
 "What did you hear?"
 "Hear? Oh—Madge Gray is engaged at last, and the Billy Brews are going to get a divorce, and Bertie Baxby has lost all his money in Wall Street, and Sue Cathro has a baby, and Mrs. Sylee was lurching with another man while her husband was out of town, and—"
 "But—you don't understand! What did you see?"
 "See? Why, that Kate Kady has turned her old rose gown, and that those wonderful Van Gruber diamonds we read of are only paste, and that the Adleys are hardly on speaking terms, even in public, and—"
 "But—but—what was the name of the opera?"
 "Name of the opera? Oh—why, I did see it on the program, but really I've forgotten—I've such a poor memory for details; really it is quite a cross!"

STRICTLY ACCORDING TO RULE

No One Could Deny That Candidate, in His Entrance Examination, Made 50 Per Cent.

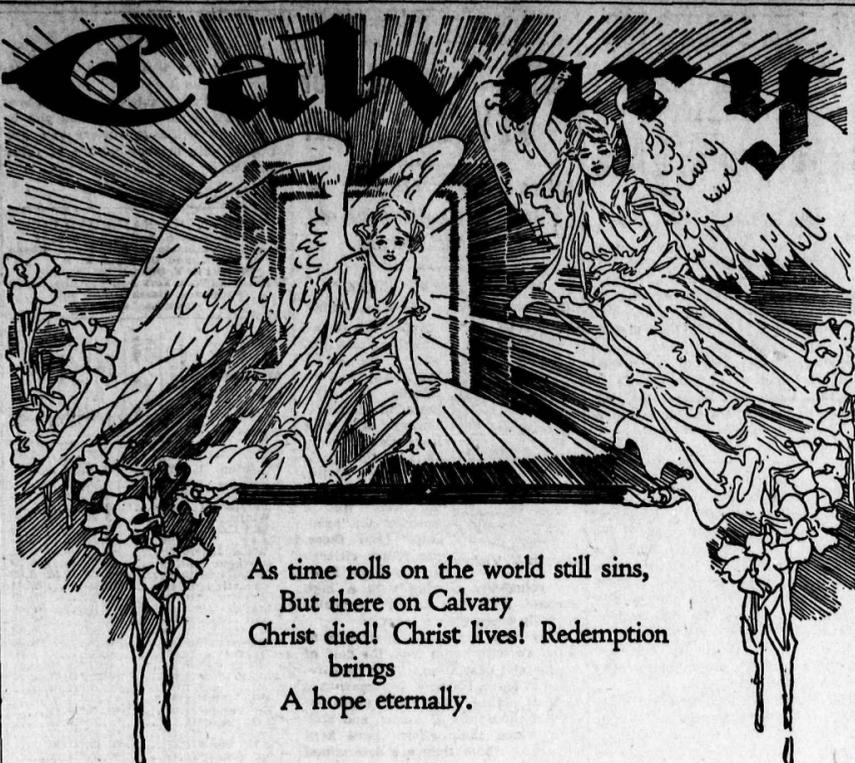

An examination story from the London Morning Post: They wanted him badly at the college, but unfortunately there was an entrance examination from which not even the most promising of Rugby three-quarters could claim complete exemption. It was only an oral questioning—and yet one had to get 50 per cent to pass. The matter was left in the hands of a sporting young don, and his protegee got through. Later on it appeared that only two questions had been asked. "The first," said the examiner, "was the date of Trafalgar; he got that wrong. Then I asked him what the chemical formula for sulphuric acid was. He said: 'I don't know—really I don't.' Well, that was right, for it was obvious that he didn't know. So I passed him with 50 per cent."—Christian Register.

Appropriate Meeting Place.
 Rev. Ambrose Dunkel, pastor of the Tabernacle Presbyterian church, had occasion Sunday to make an announcement regarding a meeting of some of the young folk immediately after church. The church is occupying a temporary building at Thirty-fourth and Central, so that mentioning a stove in his story must not be construed as lack of progress.

"The young folk who were to have met last Wednesday will meet in the chapel immediately after church. Mr. Wood will meet you at the stove in the chapel—a very appropriate meeting place."—Indianapolis News.

Famous Paintings of Our Savior's Agony and Death.

It seems fitting that at Easter time one's thoughts should turn to the art galleries which contain the famous paintings portraying the crucifixion and resurrection of our Savior. For generations most of them have hung upon the walls of museums of Europe and have been an inspiration not only to lovers of art, but to all Christians as well who have studied and admired the conception of the artist and the manner in which that conception has been portrayed on the canvas.

RUBENS.
 One of the world's most noted paintings showing Christ on the Cross is by Peter Paul Rubens. It has but the one figure—the dying Christ, hanging on the cross. The background is dark, the sky being almost black, which brings out more fully the real beauty and richness of the work. The head of Christ has fallen against the right arm and a peaceful expression is on the face, showing that the agony has passed. The body has sagged and the muscles of the arms are prominent. Blood trickles from the nail holes in the hands and feet, while that from the wound in the side has dripped on the loin cloth, which is draped in graceful fashion. The figure is well drawn, being a perfectly natural form of a tall slender man of the age of Christ at the time of His crucifixion.

Rubens painted many pictures of the Christ, but this one is by far the most striking and beautiful. He was the chief master of the Flemish school of painting, and was one of the most versatile artists of all times. Beginning the study of art early in life he worked under many famous painters, particularly in Venice and Rome. He was a man of scholarly attainments, speaking six languages, and was intimately acquainted with nearly every ruler in Europe, the majority of whom gave him commissions for pictures. He died at Antwerp in 1640.

DURER.
 Another great canvas showing Christ on the Cross is the work of Albrecht Durer, and like the one of Rubens shows only the figure of the Savior. The background is an almost inky cloud with the fading sunset sky near one foot of the cross, and a few trees standing in the foreground. The figure is stretched on the cross and there is no wound in the side, the only blood showing being a few drops on the right hand. The body has sagged slightly and the loin cloth flutters in the wind. The crown of thorns is pressed down on the head, the sweet sad face is upraised, the eyes are turned toward heaven in the agony, and the mouth slightly opened as if He were in the act of speaking. The real beauty of the canvas is in the face of Christ, and it has never been excelled in its sweet, spirituelle portrayal. The painting hangs in the National gallery at Dresden.

Durer was born at Nuremberg in 1471. At an early age he displayed great talent in drawing and in 1485 his father apprenticed him to the great painter Wohlgemuth, with whom he studied several years. Later he studied in Venice and traveled to all the art centers, where he made friends with the most noted men of his time, being particularly friendly with Martin Luther. His coloring is faultless and the faces, especially in his religious pictures, are regarded as almost sublime in their dignity. He was a man of great piety and in sympathy with the reformation movement. He died in 1528.

FRA ANGELICO DA FIESOLE.
 Still another Christ on the Cross stands out in the art world—that canvas by Fra Angelico da Fiesole, a circular picture, which hangs in the Academy at Florence.
 His Christ on the Cross is considered by art connoisseurs as one of his best. It contains three figures, the Christ on the Cross, the Virgin and the Magdalen. Christ, wearing the crown of thorns, hangs on the cross. His head surrounded by a curious fan-shaped golden halo with three red stripes. The face shows sadness and is well drawn. The picture is rich in color, the background being a blue sky of the most vivid shade. The blood on the hands, side and feet which trickles down in three straight streams is a brilliant red, forming a strong contrast to the sky.

MURILLO.
 Ecce Homo (Behold the Man), by Murillo, is regarded by many as the most beautiful painting of Christ in existence. This artist is noted for the sweetness of his faces, always with a touch of sadness, and in this he has excelled himself, for the whole make-up of the picture is sublime. A simple head of the Christ wearing

 From the Father to the Son,
 A reminder, down the ages,
 Of the Victory He won.

the crown of thorns. The clear cut nose, delicate mouth and lowered eyes portray a pathos and spirituality rarely found on canvas. The background is dark brown, while the robe is a rich red. The painting hangs in the Prado gallery at Madrid.

Murillo was born in Seville in 1617, and although a poor boy became the chief master of the School of Seville. His early life was a struggle and it was not until after he married a lady of wealth that he was able to carry out his work to perfection. He painted many religious pictures, especially of the Virgin and scenes of the crucifixion. He died in 1682.

SOLARIO.
 Ecce Homo (Behold the Man) by Andrea Solario, presents an entirely different conception of Christ. A bleeding head crowned with thorns is against a black background. The red robe has fallen from one shoulder, leaving the arm and part of the chest nude. The hands are tied together, one holding a long thin pointed stick. The face is almost stern with its tightly drawn mouth. The eyes are lowered and there is a tear drop falling from the left one. Indeed so remarkable is this painted tear drop that people stand fascinated before the picture, some of them declaring it is a real tear. The face shows the Man in deep thought. The picture is in the gallery at Milan and is by far the most striking of the entire collection.

Andrea Solario, who is responsible for the work, was a painter of Milan, born in 1460. He studied in Venice for a time and on his return to Milan fell under the influence of Leonardo da Vinci and was sent by the latter to complete some of the former's work for Cardinal d'Amboise. His work was so like that of da Vinci, both in drawing and coloring, that it is sometimes difficult to tell it apart. Ecce Homo, his masterpiece, was painted in 1515, shortly before his death.

OLD BELIEFS ABOUT EASTER

Deep-Rooted Ideas That Have Been Current From the Earliest Days of the Celebration.

There is an old weather superstition to the effect that if the sun shines on Easter it will shine on Whitsunday.

If you bathe with cold water on Easter day, you will keep well all the year.

There is another old superstition about eggs, and that is to rub over the face an egg that has been colored for Easter to have a nice complexion. To cry on Easter is a sign you will cry the following Sunday, too.

If a rabbit runs across your path on Easter Sunday it is a good luck sign.

For the lovers, there is a warning that one should not get engaged on Easter Sunday, else the engagement will be broken.

"Give a man a red egg at Easter to secure his love," is an old gypsy amendment.

EARTH'S TIME TO REJOICE

Easter Festival Particularly Commemorates the Assured Triumph of Life Over Death.

Easter is the festival that commemorates the triumph of life over death, the birth of new hopes. Its traditions and its place upon the calendar of the year symbolize the upspringing of new aspirations and new forces in the soul of man and in the world of nature.

Never before has this festival of life and of hope had so dramatic and so significant a setting as it has at the present moment in history. The world, by a supreme rallying of its spiritual and physical powers, has conquered the Imminent Dread that had hung over it. It has dissipated the fiery cloud that had menaced its life. It has emerged from the great shadow that shut out the light of day.

RESOLUTION INTRODUCED BY OUR ASSEMBLYMAN

Memorial to The Congress of the United States from the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, To the Congress of the United States.

The following resolution was introduced in the House of Assembly by W. S. Cramer.

WHEREAS, it appears that funds have not been by Congress provided nor authorization made for the purchase by the War Department of the tract of land occupied by the Chemical Warfare Service near Lakehurst, New Jersey as a Proving Ground for Chemical Warfare material; and

WHEREAS, it appears, further, that the War Department will, lacking such provisions of funds and authorization, abandon said Chemical Warfare Service Proving Ground at Lakehurst; and

WHEREAS, the residents of the community and section of the State in which said Proving Ground is situated have by petitions to their representatives in this body requested its influence toward the retention of said Proving Ground by the National Government; and

WHEREAS, by report of reputable citizens of the State who have appeared before this body, the War Department has an investment of approximately $2,500,000.00 in improvements at said Proving Grounds at Lakehurst, and an abandonment of said Proving Ground would result in loss of said investment except such small salvage value as would accrue from wreckage and disposal, and the expense of removal and transfer of equipment and machinery to another point would approximate the cost of the site occupied by said Proving Ground; Now, therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED by the General Assembly of the State of New Jersey the Senate concurring that the Congress of the United States be and the same is hereby requested to consider the advantage of enabling the War Department to retain said Proving Ground, and the appropriations of such sums as in the circumstances may be met, and be it further

RESOLVED, that a copy of the memorial be sent to the Honorable John W. Weeks, Secretary of War, the Honorable Walter E. Edge, the Honorable Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, United States Senators, and the Honorable T. Frank Appleby, Member of the House of Representatives from the Third Congressional District of the State of New Jersey.

The officers were not slow in getting to the fires and we think they were glad that the boys had disobeyed orders. No Johnny Reb disturbed us. They, too, were trying to keep from freezing. That night spent in the open without shelter, sent many of our boys to the hospital and later to their graves on the hillsides along the Rappahannock River. Had we obeyed orders, many more would now be sleeping down in Dixie.

VACATION BANKS FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

Suggestions For Earning Money.

MOTHERS KEEN OVER IDEA

That school children may keep up their good habits of thrift and saving during the summer vacation, the Savings Division is now distributing attractive pasteboard banks into which the little thrifty savers may deposit their pennies, nickels and dimes.

In addition to the banks, the Savings Division is distributing a list of suggested methods for the little vacationists to earn money when there are no school worries. A wide and choice variety has been prepared for boys and girls of different ages and inclinations. Projects for boys range from selling newspapers and delivering groceries to raising poultry and calves.

The benefits of such vacation work will have far-reaching results. Children not only learn the value of money by actually working for it and earning it, but they acquire good business experience and form judgments. They gain ability and courage to attack larger business projects and to earn more money. The community and the country must of necessity profit by their thrift and their production, which in the long run will help to lower the cost of living.

These banks are extremely popular and in great demand, and the Savings Division is shipping thousands of them daily to teachers who are interesting their pupils in them. Mothers of families heartily endorse them, realizing the benefits to their little ones. They are very enthusiastic over the project and are introducing them in their children's school room where the teachers were not acquainted with the idea.

BUY THRIFT AND SAVINGS STAMPS

W. S. S. A BADGE OF CITIZENSHIP

Jersey Judge Refuses Papers to Woman Who Refuses to Buy Government Securities.

The possession of Thrift and Savings Stamps is a part of Americanism, according to Judge William Watson, of the Common Pleas Court, of Passaic, N. J.

He recently refused the application for citizenship of Mimi Bevar, of Paterson, because she was shown to have refused to buy Savings Stamps or to support the American Red Cross during the war.

Not only do Savings Stamps give the owner a partnership with the government, but they entail the duties of a partner on the part of the possessor.

For that reason Judge Watson considers them reliable evidence of qualification for citizenship.

THRIFT SPARKS

Money talks and the easiest thing it says is "good-bye."

Thrift, like charity and good manners, begins at home.

Benjamin Franklin said: "A rolling stone gathers no moss." A careless spender gets no W. S. S.

A fool and his money are soon parted. Are you proud of yourself?

Reducing the waist line to meet the new 1920 spring models is not nearly so important to the housewife this year as reducing her "waste" line.

Being patriotic only during the war is like being a good citizen while you are in jail. Real patriots are on the job 365 days in the year. Buy government securities.

Practice thrift and save regularly for thirty days, and you will never abandon the habit; in that time you will have learned how much it means to you.

Mothers owe it to their children to instill in them the habit of saving, not only money, but of food, clothes, and other articles.

"But in the last analysis, the factor most influential in determining any man's success must ever be the sum of that man's own qualities, of his knowledge, foresight, thrift and courage."—Theodore Roosevelt.

Cucumbers at any price and at any time disagree with some people, and at 75 cents each they give most all of us a pain.

Old-Time Temperance Pledge.

An interesting relic of bygone days has come into the possession of the Scottish Society of Antiquaries, in the form of a minute book of the burgh of Selkirk which reveals an instance of a burgher who decided to "take the pledge" not to touch drink, so long ago as 1592. The burgher, Thomas Kerr, gave as his bond "one pair of gray russet breeks."

HEROISM SHOWN BY AMERICAN WORKERS OF NEAR EAST RELIEF

Cables Reveal Appalling Armenian Need—Hundreds of Thousands Starving.

By CHARLES V. VICKREY

General Secretary, Near-East Relief

Charles V. Vickrey our fellow citizens are volunteers serving with a high purpose, and they do not recognize hardship when they meet it.

They have had their opportunity to withdraw with honor from the field of famine and desolation. They have refused to leave, because they know that their departure would mean death for tens of thousands of women and children whom their efforts have kept alive and whom they are determined to save for a better future.

A dozen cables are on my desk from various centers in Armenia, Anatolia, Cilicia and Syria pleading piteously for the lives of hundreds of thousands who are homeless: "Sixty-five thousand refugees Constantinople alone;" "Refugees flocking into Aleppo;" "Twenty thousand refugees at Izmid;" "One hundred thousand people at Alexandropol will starve unless relief is provided;" "Refugees arriving from Caucasus, escaping persecution, naked, destitute! Urgent need to save most of them from death;" "Two hundred thousand starving between Ears and Alexandropol! Severe winter adding to distress."

Above all towers the mute appeal of the more than 100,000 little children, orphaned, homeless, whom these American relief workers have saved and whom we here at home must sustain not only through the winter and spring, but through the summer and autumn as well. If we do not provide, they perish! And with them dies the hope of a New Near East.

The Easter season is here—the season that commemorates the Great Sacrifice for mankind. America is known as a Christian nation. She is also the wealthiest nation that history has ever known.

Can we really enjoy our wealth and claim the name of Christian if we turn a deaf ear to the appeal which General Leonard Wood, in behalf of the Near East Relief, has sent forth broadcast for a Lenten Sacrifice Offering to save these little children in Bible Lands?

GEN. LEONARD WOOD MAKES APPEAL FOR NEAR EAST RELIEF

Says Two and a Half Million Starving Armenians Need Help at Once.

Washington, Ill.—Major General Leonard Wood, commanding the Sixth Corps Area, has issued a Lenten sacrifice appeal for funds to save the Armenians from annihilation by starvation and disease.

MAJ. GEN. LEONARD WOOD

ferred and are still suffering the horrors of war. Among the prominent members of General Wood's Committee are Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson, sister of the late President Roosevelt;

General Wood's Appeal As Chairman of a Special Committee of representative men and women of the country, charged with placing before the American people the desperate need of two and a half million Armenians, the remnant of the oldest Christian nation, whose sufferings through sixteen centuries seem to have brought them no nearer peace, liberty or security, I beg your personal co-operation and influence to forward an appeal for a Lenten Sacrifice Offering to enable the Near East Relief to go on with its work of mercy.

Over one hundred thousand little children who have been kept alive by American generosity for the past three years are absolutely dependent upon the support which America gives them through the Near East Relief.

I feel that however many and however worthy the other appeals which are being made to the great heart of America these days may be, this cry from the little children of the land where Christ gave his life for mankind cannot remain unanswered.

Will you help to save this martyred people?

PRESIDENT ENDORSES THE NEAR EAST RELIEF APPEAL

Washington.—President Harding has given his hearty endorsement to the appeal being made by Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood on behalf of the Near East Relief, 1 Madison Avenue, New York City, for a nation-wide Lenten Sacrifice Offering to save the starving Christians of the Near East.

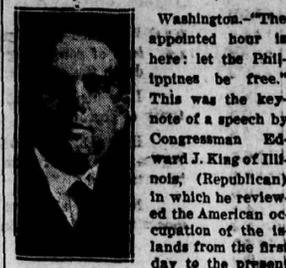

The President's letter reads: "There ought to be no cessation or relaxation of our sympathetic American efforts to be of service to these stricken people. One can well believe that they will not survive if we withdraw the relief which has heretofore been so generous from the private American purse. It has seemed to me that all we have done has borne dividends tenfold in the consciousness that we have done an humane thing for a people well deserving our generous sympathy."

"I wish you the very greatest success in furthering the great relief movement to which you are now giving your attention."

CONGRESSMEN FAVOR FILIPINO INDEPENDENCE

Congressman Edward J. King of Illinois.

Washington.—"The appointed hour is here: let the Philippines be free." This was the keynote of a speech by Congressman Edward J. King of Illinois, (Republican) in which he reviewed the American occupation of the islands from the first day to the present time.

After the constitution is ratified by the Filipino people the President may recognize the Philippine Islands as "a separate and self-governing nation." The transfer of authority is to be completed within one year. Provisions are made for safeguarding American investments in the Philippines and for the providing of coaling stations and submarine bases in the islands by the United States.

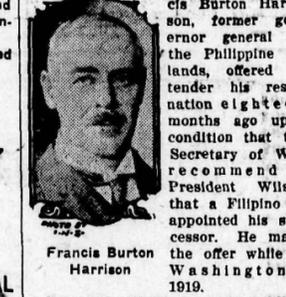

Word from the Philippines is that the people expect early independence and will be sorely disappointed if they do not get it. "No nation has the right," said Congressman King "to hold another people in peonage, even though it may be argued by the professional that the condition is simply one of tutelage."

"A little more observance of the golden rule in national and international affairs would soon dispel that desire for exploitation, the fiercest foe of freedom in the world today."

"When we went to the Philippines we declared before the whole world that we were not actuated by any selfish desire of conquest or territorial aggrandizement, but solely by humanitarian impulses."

Congressman King called attention to the fact that Filipinos are now raising funds to erect a monument to Admiral Dewey, which he said was indirectly a tribute to the American people as well as to Dewey. He recalled the cable that Dewey had sent to President McKinley, which was as follows: "In my opinion these people (Filipinos) are superior in intelligence and more capable of self government than the natives of Cuba, and I am familiar with both."

ASKS INDEPENDENCE FOR PHILIPPINES

Francis Burton Harrison

Manila.—Francis Burton Harrison, former governor general of the Philippine Islands, offered to tender his resignation eighteen months ago upon condition that the Secretary of War recommend to President Wilson that a Filipino be appointed his successor. He made the offer while in Washington in 1919.

Discussing Philippine independence, the governor general said: "I can see in the future a very beautiful vision. When the flag of the Philippine republic shall be hoisted, when the Stars and Stripes will come floating down to the strains of 'The Star Spangled Banner'—that flag, Old Glory, so rich in happy and honorable achievements, will be made doubly dear because it will mean that the United States will have kept its word to the people of the Philippine Islands."

Joan's Job

By RUBY DOUGLAS

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Joan Truax had one more year in which to finish her work in the academy before she felt that she could reasonably expect to consider herself a mural decorator.

"Art for art's sake," she had dined into her artistic ears ever since she began to know the hungry-looking students who frequented the academy and whom she found, after all, the most companionable souls in the world. "But," said wise little Joan to herself, "I must do something this summer or there will be no art at all for me in the autumn. I must earn some money."

Joan went so far as to make this remark in the presence of an old friend of her late father, a man of considerable importance in the business world.

"Can you paint signs, Joan?" he asked her.

Joan's artistic soul quaked for a moment and then she spoke up bravely: "I think I could paint a sign very well, Mr. Butler," she replied.

"We have difficulty in finding really intelligent artists whom we can trust to send up into the country to do our advertising painting—rubber tires, you know."

Joan did know. Who did not know that well-known sign for the Wonder Tires of the Butler Rubber company?

"We've never employed a woman, but now that you've got the vote," he laughed, "I see no reason why you shouldn't have all sorts of jobs."

"I know I could do the work, Mr. Butler, and I might enjoy the variety of environment," Joan remarked.

"I'll be some variety up there in the hills of New Hampshire, believe me, girl," John Butler told her. "But come around to my office tomorrow morning and we'll make the arrangements."

By evening of the following day Joan was engaged by the Butler Rubber company to paint signs in certain territory in New Hampshire overlooking motor routes. She was to have a little car in which to travel from place to place and a very liberal expense account. The car was to be fitted out with a portable, folding ladder, a paint box necessary for the work and every convenience. Joan was so enthusiastic that she fairly walked upon air all during the week that she was getting together her few clothes to work in and the necessary luggage.

"Among other things, Joan," Mr. Butler said when he shook hands with her on her departure, "you'll learn to eat pie for breakfast."

"That'll be easy, Mr. Butler. I hope everything else will be as pleasant to accomplish." Joan was a little nervous as she left the city to follow the route map fastened on the windshield before her, which she should have known by heart, so often had she studied it.

The first night found her, without accident or important incident, in the heart of the Berkshire mountains in an inn recommended by Mr. Butler. She was tired of body, but ate the homely supper and drank a glass of milk, sought her bed and slept like a baby.

Early the following morning she was up and in the dining room for the hearty breakfast of blueberries, cereal, toast, bacon and pie with coffee. She went to the garage and got out her little car and set out for the town in New Hampshire, seventy-odd miles beyond, in which she was to find the place for her first sign.

She enjoyed the second day's driving, and the mountain air was already beginning to buoy up her drooping spirits.

The first thing that met her eye when she arrived in the town she sought was a big, unpainted barn.

"Why not a sign on that?" said Joan to herself.

It was not long before she had negotiated with the farmer's wife to paint the side of the barn with a beautiful picture advertising the Wonder Tires. Not only that, she had negotiated for board and lodging and garage room in the barn during the time it would take her to paint the sign.

Bright and early the following morning she was out of doors looking over the field. She had put on her working uniform of brown wash goods—a neat knickerbocker suit with a tailored skirt, red tie and short sleeves. She was a pretty picture on the step-ladder, giving the old barn its first coat of paint.

"Dearie," called the farmer's wife about noon that day.

Joan skipped down the ladder and ran to the house. "What is it, Mrs. Miller?" asked Joan, feeling at home in the motherly presence of the farmer's wife.

"Somethin' strange has happened, and I want to ask you what I had best do. I 'low you know more about business etiquette than I do."

Joan laughed. How little she really did know.

"A young man just came here to ask if he could paint the other side of the barn to advertise some kind of sparkin' plugs or somethin'. What do you know about 'em?"

"Spark plugs, I guess he means, Mrs. Miller. They're harder to paint than tires," Joan laughed. "I'd let him do it. It won't hurt you; it will be money in your pocket and," Joan added with a bit of a blush, "it will add to the variety of things hereabouts."

In spite of her seeming lack of understanding, Mrs. Miller had a merry twinkle in her eye as Joan returned to her barn painting. "I know Fate when I see it handed out to folks," she said.

Joan was as busy as the proverbial backyard and when the young man arrived with his painting outfit, dressed neatly in overalls,

Mrs. Miller gave them a proper introduction and then retired to the kitchen to make some extra doughnuts, since she had invited the young man to eat his meals at the farmhouse.

Before dinner time Jack Wharton had walked around to Joan's side of the barn. He stood squinting critically at her color. "Very effective, Miss Truax. Are you—that is, is this your regular job?"

Joan turned on her ladder. "No—I'm a mural decorator. I—I sort of needed the change," she laughed, playing on the words, "so I am doing this work for the summer."

"Artists nearly always do need the change," Jack admitted. "The side of a barn and the side of a ballroom are not so different, except in temperament," Joan added.

"Give me the barn every time," Jack replied emphatically. "I abominate ballrooms, either as a means of livelihood for struggling mural artists or as a means of amusement for empty-headed society folk."

Joan looked at him in astonishment. "Just what do you like?" she asked. "I'll tell you, if you'll wait a week," he said.

Joan did wait a week, but she could have guessed before the half week had passed. The young man had seen her, had fallen in love with her, and had taken this strategic method of getting acquainted with her in her own environment, he had supposed. His effort at painting the other side of the barn was pitiful, but, as Joan said afterward, no one could see it from the highway, and it did not matter.

"All that matters is—you," he had told her for the sixth time that day. And Mrs. Miller took all the credit for the love affair.

Promptly, Too.

"I was humiliated this morning, my dear," said the young minister, on his return from church.

"How was that, Charles?" inquired his wife.

"Immediately after my sermon I was requested to marry the Widow Jones and young Mr. Spriggins. As it was the first time I have performed the marriage ceremony, I suppose I was a trifle nervous. Anyhow, after I had said to the groom, 'You do promise,' my mind suddenly became a blank and I was unable to proceed."

"Charles! What did you do?"

"The widow prompted me."—Cartoons Magazine.

Peas Once Called Lentils.

The word "pea" is derived from Pisa, a Greek city of Ellis, which seems to have been the center of the pea-growing industry for years before the Christian era. The antiquarians aver that the "mess of pottage" for which Esau sold his birthright was a dish of peas. In those times they were called "lentils," and even at the present day the English people of several of the English shires, notably Middlesex and Oxfordshire, still call them "tils," dropping the "en." In the time of Mary they were called "peasens," and in the time of Charles I "pease."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

English Bibles.

The date of English versions of the complete Bible are as follows: Wycliffe's, 1382; Coverdale's, 1535, rare, of very great value, printed at Zurich; Matthew's, 1537; "Great Bible," 1539; Geneva Bible (the "Breeches Bible," from the translation of the word "apron," in our common version in Gen. 3:7), 1560; Bishop's Bible (known as "Treceale" Bible, from its translation of Jeremiah 8:22), 1568; Authorized Version, 1611; Revised Version, 1881. There were re-publications of some of these, but we give the dates of the first appearance of the several versions.

The famous Common was not donated but purchased by the people of Boston in 1634 from the owner, William Blackstone. The purchase price was raised by an assessment of a few shillings on each household, the 50 acres to be common land upon which all the inhabitants of the town had the right to pasture their cows. Ralph W. Emerson, when a boy, tended his mother's cow there. The Common was used as a training ground by the British troops in Revolutionary times. It was the place of execution, where witches and Quakers, in early Colonial days, were put to death.

that he had no concern with books at all. There is a number, a frightfully increasing number of books, that are decidedly, to the readers of them, not useful. But an ingenious reader will learn, also, that a certain number of books were written by a supremely noble kind of people—not a very great number of books, but still a number fit to occupy all your reading industry, do adhere more or less to that rule of things.—Thomas Carlyle.

In the Bright Procession

IN THE bright procession of lacy gowns that may be worn either for afternoon or evening, there are many that will do honor to the wedding cortege. The theme of bridesmaids' gowns makes a fascinating story, full of adventures into strange places, but the chapter that arrests the attention of most people, deals with gowns that will begin their cheerful careers in the wedding procession and continue them long afterward.

One of the loveliest of silk and lace frocks presents its many new style points for consideration here. They include the uneven length of the skirt, the girle and long sash of ribbon that terminates in pointed ends hanging below the bottom of the skirt, the bodice crossed in the back and simplicity of design and lines. Just for the wedding procession an anklet of roses is to be worn, but the wide-brimmed picture hat of georgette, with its wreath of flowers and ribbon sash, will bear the frock company through a whole season.

For dresses like this there are cream-colored laces, filet, chantilly, nets with deep embroidered borders and net-top laces that are made up over satin, silk or georgette in cream color or in other colors. One can imagine the gown as pictured, with light rose, blue, maize, pale green, orchid or other color as a foundation, with a sash in the same color, or so made that it may be worn over different slips. Silk stockings and satin slippers to match a color will make a good background for the novel anklet of small, light pink roses, whatever the choice in color may be.

For the Easter Wedding

IT IS a good thing that weddings prove inspiring to designers, for, on all occasions, they demand most at the hands of milliners. But outfitting a wedding procession is pure joy to artistic souls. Here they may be as picturesque as they please; no other hats give them so much latitude in the choice of style and use of color; none are so advantageously placed. The hats from which the mother and other relatives of the bride are to make their choice must provide distinction and brilliance in headwear.

For the Easter wedding this year, the array of hats is very literally brilliant. Millinery fabrics and novelties have multiplied opportunities for the designers, and their imaginations fairly dance to the music of novel materials and of ribbons, laces, flowers. In the group of four hats pictured there are two that will make a good choice for the mother of the bride or any other of her matronly relatives, who are on the sunny side of sixty. One of them, at the top of the group, is of brilliant black straw with a dangling fringe of cellophane ornaments about the brim edge. This is a chic and somewhat daring model, with a vivid rose posed at the front, exactly suited to the poise of a modern mother. Just below it at the right appears a hat of shiny cellophane braid with round crown and sash of cre ribbon. This braid is shown in several colors and is very handsome in gray or the darker shades as navy and brown. A short wreath of flowers, extending from the side crown to the under brim, adds a color note that is lovely with these bright braids.

The lovely left-crowned hat of half braid at the left ought to rejoice the heart of any fair bridesmaid. It is shown in light colors with border of ribbon about the brim-edge and sash ends at the back. A little rose set in foliage is posed at the front. But if maids or maids of honor have set their hearts upon something distinctly of this season, the cellophane hat with lace edge, all in brown, and border of pink roses, will captivate them.

Fabric Combinations. The vogue for fabric combinations seems to be one that has come to stay. These days the frock that is made entirely of one material is the exception rather than the rule. Just how this state of affairs has come about is unimportant. It has resulted in a most amazingly good-looking group of frocks every season, and the cause of economy is decidedly served by reason of the vogue. It is possible to freshen up an old frock so that it will pass muster as new without any difficulty—if an entire bodice or skirt of material in contrasting color can be added to the old material that is still usable.

Simplest Contrivances Are Often Better Than Boxes With Compartments—Heavy Napkins Are Very Convenient in Packing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

What went into Jane's and Jack's lunch boxes at your house this morning? Were they filled the last minute with what remained on the table after breakfast, supplemented by some of last night's meat and pie, or were the boxes filled with dainty, appetizing lunches, carefully planned and packed?

Growing children have certain special needs in the way of food. Like grown people, they must be supplied with what is necessary for health and strength, but in addition, they must be given, also, what is necessary for growth.

Even when children eat all their meals at home, it is no easy matter to see that they are properly fed; but when they eat part of their meals at school, the difficulty is much greater. It is not easy to make food attractive and to keep it clean when it must be packed and carried in a lunch basket.

Filling Lunch Basket. The basket lunch is harder to plan and to prepare than the lunch at home. To begin with, many foods cannot be included in it, either because they are not good cold or because they cannot be conveniently packed or easily carried. This leaves fewer foods to choose from, and extra care is necessary to prevent sameness.

Paraffin paper, parchment paper, jelly glasses, and the paper cups and containers for moist foods are a great help in packing lunches. With these helps, foods can be kept from sticking to each other, and such half-solid foods as sliced raw fruits, stewed fruits, custards, and cottage cheese, can be carried in perfect condition.

Good Bread Important.

The quality of the bread used in the basket lunch is especially important because it is commonly served in the form of sandwiches and is, therefore, to be considered, not only as a food in itself, but also as a means of keeping other much needed foods in appetizing and attractive condition.

Variety in breads, too, is more important at this than at other meals, because of the danger of monotony. Wheat bread, whole-wheat bread, corn, rye, or oatmeal breads; nut, raisin, and date breads; beaten biscuit, rolls, crisp baking powder or soda biscuit, toast, zwieback, and crackers may be used in turn to give variety. Rolls hollowed out can be made to hold a large amount of sandwich fillings, which is an advantage at times.

Packing the Lunch.

Many kinds of lunch boxes, pails and baskets are now on the market. Because they can be washed and scalded easily, the simplest boxes and baskets are often better than the more elaborate ones with compartments in which to keep dishes, knives, forks and spoons. With the increase in automobile travel, well-constructed boxes and baskets which can be easily cleaned have come on the market with compartments for keeping food hot or cold and for holding liquids. These are, of course, suitable only for children who ride back and forth, and particularly suitable where several lunches are put up in one household.

The precautions which must be taken to keep the foods clean and safe differ with circumstances. In dusty seasons they should be wrapped particularly well. In hot weather, the use of soft, moist foods in which molds and bacteria are most likely to grow rapidly, should be avoided. Although chopped meat mistepped with a dressing of some kind makes a good sandwich filling, such foods are less desirable in hot weather than slices of meat, peanut butter, or other foods less liable to spoil.

Paper napkins or the somewhat

Eyes on Wash Dress. On a wash dress the eyes should be sewed on the upper flap and the hooks on the lower, instead of the usual way. The top flap can then be ironed flat without any little lumps left by the ironing over hooks.

Prevent Watering of Eyes.

Did you know that the unpleasant watering of the eyes when peeling onions can be prevented by removing the peeling from the bottom, or root, instead of beginning at the top, as most people do?

heavier paper towels of much the same size are very useful for packing lunches, and, like paraffin and parchment paper, may now be obtained at a low price, particularly if bought in rather large quantities. If no provision is made in the school for serving lunches, an extra napkin, either of paper or cloth, should be put in the basket, to be spread over the school desk when the lunch is eaten. Napkins can be made out of cotton crepe at a cost of a very few cents each. The crepe may be bought by the yard, and should be cut into squares and fringed. Such napkins have the advantage of not needing to be ironed.

In packing the lunch basket, put at the bottom the things least likely to crush, and wrap the sandwiches, etc., into neat parcels, not all in one.

OLD DRY-GOODS BOX AIDS BREAD MAKING

Contrivance Holds Dough at Right Temperature.

Kerosene Lamp or 16-Candlepower Light May Be Used for Heating—Shallow Pan of Water on Lower Shelf Keeps Air Moist.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In making bread the housekeeper often finds it difficult, particularly in the winter months, to hold her sponge or dough at the right temperature so that it will rise in a shorter period of time. She will find a sponge box or bread raiser a great help in keeping the proper temperature. Such a box can be made from an ordinary dry-goods packing box. The following directions for making one are given by the United States Department of Agriculture in Farmers' Bulletin 927, "Farm Home Conveniences."

A box 26 by 20 by 20 inches is a convenient size. About 10 inches from the bottom of the box a shelf made of slats or strips of wood rests on cleats fastened to the sides of the box. A second shelf is placed 4 inches above the lower one. The shelves can be removed when cleaning the box. Below the lower shelf a sheet of galvanized iron, slightly wider than the shelf, is inserted. It is curved in order to make it slip in and stay in place securely. This prevents scorching of the lower shelf when a lamp is placed below and also helps to distribute the heat more evenly. The door is hinged and fastened with a thumb latch or hook and staple.

Several small holes are bored in the lower and upper parts of the sides and in the top of the box to promote circulation of air. A cork, bored through the center to admit a straight thermometer, is inserted in one of the holes in the top of the box. A Fahrenheit chemical thermometer that registers as high as 100 degrees can be used. Such a thermometer may be ordered through a hardware dealer or directly from an instrument dealer.

To avoid all danger of fire, the box should be lined with asbestos or tin when a kerosene lamp is used for heating. A 16-candlepower light will heat the box well, or a small, inexpensive night lamp may be placed in the bottom. A shallow pan of water should be put on the lower shelf so that the air will be kept moist.

The bowl of sponge or pans of dough are placed on the upper shelf. The temperature of the box should be kept as near 86 degrees F. as possible (80 to 88 degrees F.) when bread is made in the quick way. If a sponge is set overnight, 65 to 70 degrees F. is the better temperature until the dough is made in the morning, after which the temperature may be increased to 86 degrees F. The temperature in the box may be varied by raising or lowering the flame of the lamp or by using warm or cold water in the shallow pan.

GOOD TEST OF CHILD'S DIET

If Children Are Strong, Well Developed and Free From Ailments, Food is Suitable.

The health and appearance of children are a good test of the wholesomeness of their diet. If they are strong, well developed for their ages, free from ailments and full of energy and ambition, one may safely say their food agrees with them. But if they are listless and ailing, or not so well developed either physically or mentally as they should be, and if a competent physician finds that there is no special disease to account for these bad symptoms, a mother may well ask herself if the food is right, and if not, how she can make it so.

Prunes are richer and more nourishing cooked in the oven.

A teaspoonful of baking powder will make fudge more creamy.

One of the nicest ways to cook onions, from every point of view, is to bake them in the skin.

A good aluminum polish is a mixture of borax, ammonia, and water. Apply with a soft brush.

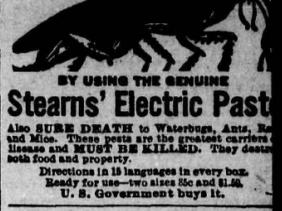

To bake potatoes quickly, let them stand in boiling water for a few minutes before putting them in the oven.

An economical scourer for pots and pans is fine ash. If previously sifted through muslin it will not scratch enamel ware, etc.

A large box covered with cretonne, rep or denim or a chest standing at the foot of the bed to hold extra bedding is a convenience.

The steel fittings of your stove that have become discolored from the heat can be greatly improved by rubbing them over with a rag dipped in vinegar before cleaning in the usual way.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfil the promise of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has recuperative value almost sells itself, as will an endless chain system the remedy recommended by those who have benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact so many people claim, that it fulfills a most every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address: Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. A large and medium size bottle for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

The Prodigal Village by Irving Bacheller

"ON WITH THE DANCE!" Synopsis.—In the village of Bingville thirteen-year-old Robert Emmet Moran, crippled son of a poor widow, is known as the Shepherd of the Birds. His world is his mother and friends, his little room, the flower garden of Judge Crooker, and every living thing he sees from his window. The painting of pictures is his enjoyment, and little Pauline Baker, small daughter of a neighbor, the object of his boyish affection. To him, J. Patterson Bing, the first citizen of Bingville, is the ideal of a really great man. The village becomes money mad, reflecting the great world in its state of unrest. The Bing family is a leader in the change. To them the village has become "provincial." The butcher and baker and candlestick-maker all raise their prices. Even Hiram Blenkinsop, the town drunkard, works hard for a month. The Old Spirit of Bingville is summarily fired.

CHAPTER TWO—Continued. The notice had been given soon after the new theater was opened in the Sneed block, and the endless flood of moving lights and shadows began to fall on its screen. The low-born, purblind intellects of Bohemian New York began to pour their lewd fancies into this great stream that flowed through every city, town and village in the land. They had no more compunction in the matter than a rattlesnake when it swallows a rabbit. To them, there were only two great, bare facts in life—male and female. The males, in their vulgar parlance, were either "wise guys" or "suckers." The females were all "my dears."

Much of this mental sewage smelled to heaven. But it paid. It was cheap and entertaining. It relieved the tedium of small-town life. Judge Crooker was in the little theater that evening that the Old Spirit of Bingville received notice to quit. The sons and daughters and even the young children of the best families in the village were there. Scenes from the shady side of the great cities, bar-room adventures with pugilists and porcelain-faced women, the thin-ice skating of fillet love succeeded one another on the screen. The tender souls of the young received the impression that life in the great world was mostly drunkenness, violence, lust, and Great White Waywardness of one kind or another.

Judge Crooker shook his head and his fist as he went out and expressed his view to Phyllis and her mother in the lobby. Going home, they called him an old pro. The knowledge that every night this false instruction was going on in the Sneed block filled the good man with sorrow and apprehension. He complained to Mr. Leak, the manager, who said that he would like to give clean shows, but that he had to take what was sent him.

Soon a curious thing happened to the family of Mr. J. Patterson Bing. It acquired a new god—one that began, as the reader will have observed, with a small "g." He was a boneless, India-rubber, obedient little god. For years the need of one like that had been growing in the Bing family. Since he had become a millionaire, Mr. Bing had found it necessary to spend a good deal of time and considerable money in New York. Certain of his banker friends in the metropolis had introduced him to the joys of the Great White Way and the card room of the Golden Age club. Always he had been ill and disgruntled for a week after his return to the homely realities of Bingville. The shrewd intuitions of Mrs. Bing alarmed her. So Phyllis and John were packed off to private schools so that the good woman would be free to look after the imperiled welfare of the lamb of her flock—the great J. Patterson. She was really worried about him. After that, she always went with him to the city. She was pleased and delighted with the luxury of the great hotels, the costumes, the dinner parties, the theaters, the suppers, the cabaret shows. The latter shocked her a little at first.

They went out to a great country house, near the city, to spend a weekend. There was a dinner party on Saturday night. One of the ladies got very tipsy and was taken upstairs. The others repaired to the music room to drink their coffee and smoke. Mrs. Bing tried a cigarette and got along with it very well. Then there was an hour of heart to heart, central European dancing while the older men sat down for a night of bridge in the library. Sunday morning, the young people rode to bounds across country while the bridge party continued its session in the library. It was not exactly a restful weekend. J. Patterson and his wife went to bed as soon as their grips were unpacked on their return to the city and spent the day there with aching heads.

While they were eating dinner that night, the cocktail remarked with the lips of Mrs. Bing: "I'm getting tired of Bingville."

"Oh, of course, it's a pica-yune place," said J. Patterson. "It's so provincial!" the lady exclaimed. Soon, the oysters and the entree having subdued the cocktail, she ventured: "But it does seem to me that New York is an awfully wicked place." "What do you mean?" he asked. "Godless," she answered. "The drinking and gambling and those dances." "That's because you've been brought up in a seven-by-nine Puritan village," J. Patterson growled very decisively.

her back but a pair of velvet gal-lowses and when I stood in front of her my eyes were scared." "Mrs. Bing calls it high art," said the judge's wife. "I call it down pretty close to see level," said the judge. "When she clinched with those young fellers and went wrestling around the room she reminded me of a grapevine growing on a tree."

The reaction on the intellect of the judge quite satisfies the need of the historian. Again the Old Spirit of Bingville had received notice. It is only necessary to add that the punch was strong and the house party over the week-end made a good deal of talk by fast driving around the country in motorcars on Sunday and by loud singing in boats on the river and noisy play on the tennis courts. That kind of thing was new to Bingville.

When it was all over, Phyllis told her mother that Gordon King—one of the young men—had insulted her when they had been out in a boat together on Sunday. Mrs. Bing was shocked. They had a talk about it up in Phyllis' bedroom at the end of which Mrs. Bing delivered an injunction, "Don't tell father!"

It was soon after the party that Mr. J. Patterson Bing sent for William Snodgrass, the carpenter. He wanted an extension built on his house containing new bedrooms and baths and a large sun parlor. The estimate of Snodgrass was unexpectedly large. In explanation of the fact the latter said: "We work only eight hours a day now. The men demand it and they must be taken to and from their work. They can get all they want to do on those terms."

"And they demand seven dollars and a half a day at that? It's big pay for an ordinary mechanic," said J. Patterson.

"There's plenty of work to do," Snodgrass answered. "I don't care the snap of my finger whether I get your job or not. I'm forty thousand ahead of the game and I feel like layin' off for the summer and takin' a rest." "I suppose I could get you to work overtime and hurry the job through if I'm willing to pay for it?" the millionaire inquired. "The rate would be time an' a half for work done after the eight hours are up, but it's hard to get anyone to work overtime these days." "Well, go ahead and get all the work you can out of these plutocrats of the saw and hammer. I'll pay the bills," said J. Patterson.

The terms created a record in Bingville. But, as Mr. Bing had agreed to them, in his haste, they were established.

Sometimes these dwellers by the side have good ideas, but they are afraid to air them. They fear criticism and escape that incentive to better effort if they possibly can. So they continue living in the shade of the hedges and never doing anything to bring them into their best. And because of their peculiar thinking and habits they are not even harmless. Such folks need a fire in the hedge or something else that will make them bestir themselves, and do things worthy of men and the times.

HOME TOWN HELPS

TAKING CITY INTO COUNTRY

England Putting Into Effect Scheme Which Seems to Be Along Lines of Common Sense.

In England, instead of developing suburban communities, they are trying the scheme of taking the city into the country, to the benefit of the city and doing no harm to the country. Every new development in England will be practically a garden city, with plenty of open spaces, recreation grounds, golf courses, well-placed factories and industrial sections, and healthful residential quarters. The worker will have his patch of ground, and the usual smoke and grime of industrial communities will be nonexistent.

Town-planning schemes, many of them conceived before the new idea was generally adopted, were naturally much delayed by preoccupation during the years of war with more urgent matters and since the war by a housing scheme which occupied the full attention of the technical staffs of the local authorities. For the best results town planning should have preceded housing. Owing to the extreme urgency of the latter, however, it had to go forward first.

In all building schemes and proposals for improvement there is, occasionally, injury done to owners of property by the invasion of rights they have enjoyed for many years. Compensation in such cases is payable to the injured owner. No claim can be made, however, for injury to buildings erected, or improvements made subsequent to the scheduling of the area for town planning. And the further important provision is made: That authorities can claim one-half of the increase in value of property consequent upon the town-planning scheme. The government now realizes the commercial value of town planning and has no intention of creating private fortune by its intervention.

BURN UP UNSIGHTLY RUBBISH

Simple Contrivance Will Solve Many Problems That Have Probably Long Puzzled Housewife.

What to do with paper trash, rags that have outlived their usefulness, paper boxes and a hundred other things that accumulate and which are known as trash is a problem for every housekeeper. Yet it can be very easily solved. Trash can, of course, be burned in the kitchen range, provided it is a wood or coal burner, but it fills the stovepipe with soot, necessitating frequent cleanings, and makes an unpleasant smell and a great many ashes to carry out. As for making a bonfire outside, that can never be done unless some one watches it closely, and even then stuff blows about, littering the lawn, and the fire leaves an unsightly black spot.

A rubbish burner which is very inconspicuous can be placed in the back yard, is perfectly safe and answers in an entirely satisfactory way the question, "What shall I do with this?" which comes up every cleanup day either in the house or in the yard. It is nothing but a woven wire container. A piece of woven wire fencing long enough, to make a circular receptacle two and a half to three feet in diameter would answer the purpose. Wire the ends together, making it circular in form. Make a cover for it by putting another piece of the woven wire over an iron hoop. Then weight it down, or anchor it in some way so that the wind will not blow it over or it will not be tipped easily.

Such a rubbish burner makes outdoor burning even on windy days safe and gives one a place in which to put rubbish whenever found. Wet things can be placed in it and left to dry out in the sun and then burned.

"Hedgers." Hedgers are folks who never come out into the open. They are timid souls who would like to run something if they weren't afraid they might make a mistake. Sometimes these dwellers by the side have good ideas, but they are afraid to air them. They fear criticism and escape that incentive to better effort if they possibly can. So they continue living in the shade of the hedges and never doing anything to bring them into their best. And because of their peculiar thinking and habits they are not even harmless. Such folks need a fire in the hedge or something else that will make them bestir themselves, and do things worthy of men and the times.

"I am now able to eat three square meals a day for the first time in two years," was the emphatic statement made recently by Joseph A. York, well-known business man and highly respected citizen of Portland, Maine. "I am now sixty-nine years of age, and in all my life I have never run across a medicine that I consider in a class with Tanlac. I have just finished my fourth bottle and this medicine has benefited me even beyond my greatest hopes. Besides gaining sixteen pounds in weight, I have been built up and strengthened until I feel all of twenty years younger.

"For the past two years I have been in a miserably run-down condition, and was compelled a short time ago to give up all idea of business as I was too weak to look after anything. I was nervous, worn-out, had no appetite, and suffered most all the time with indigestion. Some days I would eat scarcely anything; in fact I was afraid to eat because I knew I would suffer afterward. Sometimes I had such severe cramping pains after eating that I would almost die. My nerves were all unstrung and the least thing would worry me and I never could get a good night's sound sleep. In fact I just lost interest in everything and was greatly discouraged over my condition.

"The ordinary treatment failed to do me any good, and as I had read so many statements from people I know here in Portland who had been benefited by Tanlac, I decided to give it a trial. And now I know for myself what it will do, for I have simply taken a new lease on life. I am now able to look after my work as usual, and never feel better in my life. I am able to eat three hearty meals a day and everything agrees with me perfectly. I eat anything I want and never feel a touch of indigestion. I never thought there was a medicine that could do me so much good, and I am only too glad to have the facts about my case given to the public."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

What Detained Him.

"Thought you were going out to be shaved?" said the boss. "Yes, sir, I've been shaved," replied the meek clerk. "But you've been gone an hour?" "Yes, sir." "Take an hour to shave you?" "Oh, no, sir; but I had to wait 'til the barber finished his story, sir."

The Modern Funeral
NOW exalted the dignity of that profession whose members have the hallowed privilege of composing those lifeless features and members and making beautiful even in death the clayed casket that once held an imperishable jewel—the immortal soul.
How honored that vocation which admits its members into the afflicted home—the sanctuary of sorrow.
How noble that calling whose members dread no disease however malignant in its contagion; who shrink from no service however painful and repellent it may have been rendered by catastrophe.
Not only skill but character must mark that calling. He must bring to his gracious offices respect for the dead and courtesy, delicacy and sympathy for the living.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

"THE FORDSON AT WORK"

A MIGHTY valuable booklet just issued by the Ford Motor Company and it is yours for the asking. Drop in and get one or drop a card or letter and we will mail you a copy free.

This book is not what the Ford Motor Company has to say about the Fordson Tractor, but what the tens of thousands of users have to say. Get the book! It is yours for the asking. Keep in mind the fact that behind every Fordson Tractor are all the resources of the great Ford Motor Company, likewise that reliable "Ford After-Service" which assures the Company, likewise that the Fordson Tractor in working order every day in the year. Remember also that the Fordson Tractor, like the Ford car, is simplicity itself in design and construction; easy to understand and easy to operate. Come in and let us tell you more about it. It is more important to the farmer today than anything else.

The age of Machine Power on the Farm is no longer a matter of speculation; it is here—an established fact. It is the latest advancement civilization has taken. It comes to the farmer with the full promise to lift the great burden of drudgery and wearisome, wearing-out toil from the muscles of man and carrying them with much more profit by power of machinery, with the result that larger production, more comfort and greater wealth will come to the farm homes wherever the Fordson is employed. Come in and talk it over.
