Eleventh Commencement Tuckerton High School

THE TUCKERTON HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT PALACE THEATRE, FRIDAY EVENING LAST

The Eleventh Annual Commencement of the Tuckerton High School, was held at the Palace Theatre on Friday evening last and the house was overflowing with friends and relatives of the graduates. There is usually a crowd at these exercises but this year, it was larger than ever, partly due to so large a class—18 in all as follows: James Lines Marshall, Pres., Edward H. Blackman, Vice-Pres., Zelma Jane Allen, Sec., Margaret Gihon McConomy, Treas., Ruth Elizabeth Allen, Gertrude Alice Brown, Helen Augusta Cox, Mary Ella Cramer, William Edward Hoffman, Albert LeRoy Honer, Albert Dobbins Lane, Aetna Pearl Mathis, Minnie Leona Mathis, Thelma Elizabeth Cranmer, Grace Jean Parker, Ruth Bryan Kelley, Calvin E. Parker, Elizabeth Laura Parker. The graduates wore caps and gowns and looked very imposing indeed. They were a class that the School and town could well be proud of. The program was as follows: March, Margaret Jones Invocation, Rev. F. M. Dowlin, of the Presbyterian Church Girls' Chorus "The Call of Summer" Sauntering, "The Teacher Situation in the United States" Calvin E. Parker. Essay, "Today's Call to Youth," LeRoy Albert Honer Senior Boys' Chorus "Hearts of Chivalry" Essay "Woodrow Wilson—A Success" Mary Ella Cramer Girls' Chorus "Blow Soft Winds" Vaudelectry "The Japanese Problem Facing the United States," Edward Hoffman Girls' Chorus "Pond Lilies" Class Presentation, J. Wade Wimer, Supervising Principal. Conferring of Diplomas, W. I. Smith, Pres. Board of Education Address, F. W. Maroney, M. D. New Jersey State Department of Physical Education Senior Class Song Benediction, Rev. Daniel Johnson of the First M. E. Church The Class Motto was "Finished; yet Beginning." Class Colors, Blue and Red; Class Flower, American Beauty Rose.

Prof. Wimer, is expected to return to the Tuckerton High next year with an increased salary. He is doing a fine work in our school. The High School Corps of teachers will be changed next year. Miss Lippincott will go to Columbia University for the next few months and we wish her success, although we are sorry to lose so valuable an asset to our teaching force.

The Misses Ely and Abel will go to other fields of labor and we will also miss their efficient work. There will probably be changes in the grades as well. The school is handicapped for lack of room, and this may be overcome in the near future. Mr. Wimer will continue his work for a Master's Degree, at the Columbia University this summer. We wish him success.

Several of our people attended the High School Commencement exercises both at Tuckerton and Barnegat last Friday evening. The Beach Haven Ice and Cold Storage Company are caring for quantities of fish these days. The Beach Haven Plumbing Company is laying the sewer pipes on Centre street West of Bay avenue. The Ocean House has been rented and will be opened soon. Miss Evelyn Broome has been spending a few days with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Osborne are in their cottage on Bay avenue for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Walker of Moorestown, have rented and are occupying the Young cottage at Fourth and Beach avenues. Y. R. Penrod was in Philadelphia on Monday. Miss Julia Beer attended the funeral of her aunt at Yorktown, Va., last week. A boat is now making regular trips to Atlantic City, leaving here in the morning and returning in the evening. The train schedule will change for the summer next Sunday. Miss Frances Sprague has been visiting friends in Atlantic City. Several new faces are to be seen among our visitors, and many of our old friends are coming.

Every Bank Should Help The Community in Which it is Located

If it doesn't, something is wrong and either the public is neglecting the advantages offered or the institution is not functioning properly.

A Bank should help the merchant in time of stress or when extraordinary season purchases become necessary; the farmer who needs some labor saving device but lacks the ready funds to buy it; the shipper, or planter who needs financing through a cramped period: it being understood always, that good security shall be offered the institution extending the accommodation.

These are only some of the ways in which a bank should help its patrons and stimulate the business of its vicinity.

Make Your Credit Strong

MANY people still persist in carrying a roll of bills around in their pocket and enjoy peeling off the greenbacks to pay their current bills. If they deposited this money in bank and paid their bills by check, they would have vastly more safety, and less danger of disputed bills. Better still, they would be building up a credit with their bank, that might be useful when they need additional funds.

Gypsying By Automobile

By John Dickinson Sherman

EVERYBODY and his wife and kids are going motor-gypsying this summer. Thousands are already on their way, and the rest are getting ready to start. By midsummer the scenic West will be alive with motorists. It's a good guess that half of them will start out with a camping equipment and a solemn vow to camp by the roadside every single night. Some of them will keep the vow they swore, but many will fall by the wayside—instead of camp—and the Johnny-on-the-spot hotel will get their hard-earned dollars. Others of the gypsies will run on a 50-50 schedule—camp when the camping is good, and the hotel for them at other times.

Of course the first hundred or so miles are the hardest on Middle West gypsies, for the nearer they get to the Rockies the more numerous and pretentious are the auto-camps. Pretty soon they get into a country where every self-respecting community offers a really comfortable camp, with running water, wood, fireplaces, electric lights and everything.

While there will be motor-gypsying all over the land, the rush will undoubtedly be to the national parks of the Rockies and beyond. The fame of the "Delectable Mountains" is abroad in the land. To the people of the sun-baked Middle West the thought of a land where they will sleep under blankets is impelling. And actually to need a sweater morning and evenings! And trout streams that are ice-cold! And everlasting snow in sight on the mountain-slopes! Just the thought of these things along about the middle of July is enough to pack 'em in the old flivver and start 'em due west on the Lincoln highway or some other transcontinental road.

The folks up North who see snow every winter haven't the faintest idea of what snow in midsummer means to folks down South who never see it. Why, the sight of it is worth the whole trip from Louisiana or Texas. One August day at the foot of Longs Peak in Rocky Mountain National park a car carrying a Texas license came along with four husky young Texans in it. One jumped out and came up to my tent.

He asked me politely if I could tell him what that white patch up on the mountain, pointing to the everlasting snow on the farther side of Boulderfield, about a thousand feet below the summit. I told him, "How come?" he wanted to know. I explained. Could anybody get to it? I said he could walk right to it and roll in it. He asked how far it was. I told him that it was just about five miles, with a climb of 4,000 feet, and gave him details of the trail. Then he let out a yell—a Texas yell—and dashed back to the flivver. Then followed an excited confab, all four talking at once. Then away went the flivver, full speed ahead for the slope of Longs—snow-bank or bust!

Fellows like that should start a little earlier to get around to the winter sports and ski tournaments in Mount Hainier along about the Fourth of July!

This motor-gypsying is no guess-

ASSIGNING CAMP SITES IN SEQUOIA NATIONAL PARK

work. The official figures of national park attendance show more than a million visitors last summer, and this season the figures most likely will run to a million and a quarter. Of these about 70 per cent travel in their own cars. And a good big percentage are fixed for camping. The National Park service says in its 1920 annual report:

"Final travel figures, reaching a total of 1,058,455 visitors, show a healthy and substantial growth of American tourist travel in America. This travel has now reached a proportion where it must be seriously considered as an economic factor in our national life. Surely travel of this proportion is not born of merely a restlessness on the part of our fellow citizens to be going somewhere just for the going, but denotes a deeper feeling, pride of country, a desire to see and know their land and to make that use of their national parks for which these playgrounds were created.

"Just as the rail lines brought people to the parks from every state in the Union and from many foreign countries, so were motorists recorded traveling in private cars from every state and from Canada and Mexico. More than half of these carried their own supplies and camp equipment and enjoyed their playgrounds in their own way."

The plain truth of the matter is—whisper it!—that the camping-out folks at the peak of the season often favor better than the stay-at-a-hotel folks, for the simple reason that things got decidedly jammed up in August at several of the principal parks.

Rocky Mountain, for example, had 240,000 visitors—it's the nearest to the travel and population center—and 50,000 autos. And hundreds were turned away for lack of hotel accommodations. Of course the motor-gypsies weren't turned away; there's always room for them in its 400 square miles. This year there'll be more hotel accommodations—and likewise bigger auto camps, as in all the principal national parks.

This motor-gypsying is increasing like an unfought forest fire. And why not? It appeals so many ways.

In the first place, it's cheap. I have run across many an outfit that were having the time of their lives on mighty little money. One old farmer from Nebraska put his case in a nutshell thus:

"Here we are—me and my wife and our five children. I've been wanting for years to show 'em this country, but couldn't stand the expense. Now I've got a car, and it's all right. Traveling this way won't cost much more than staying at home. And a good time—well, say."

But don't fool yourself into thinking that it's a question of mere dollars and cents with all the gypsies. You'll see the most expensive cars as well as flivvers. And in them will be people who don't have to count their dollars. The idea, you see, is based upon one of the oldest and fundamental instincts of the race—the call of the open road.

"For joy is the law of the open road, and glad are its ways, its laughter free;

Away with your town-wrought weary load,

Come hit the trail with me!"

And in this matter of gypsying, we've got the gypsy beat to a frazzle. The mileage that can be covered is limited only by the length of vacation time. I know of one family last summer that started from Philadelphia June 12 and returned September 11. They visited Rocky Mountain. They climbed Pike's Peak. They saw the petrified forest on the way to Los Angeles over the Santa Fe trail. From San Francisco they went to the Yosemite, and thence back home over the Lincoln highway—just about 10,000 miles, camping all ways, except when conditions were too unfavorable.

Conditions in this year of 1921 and the trend of public opinion warrant the prediction that it will be only a few years before an American motor-gypsy will be able to start at the Atlantic coast and make the round trip to the Pacific on good roads and camping by the roadside in comfort on public ground—national, state, county, municipal and local parks. That is the keynote of the campaign begun last summer at the national conference on parks at Des Moines.

It is a shame to talk about making money in connection with motor-gypsying and trout streams and snow-capped peaks, but here goes: Suppose every one of these 1,000,000 gypsies who visited the national parks scattered an average of $100 along his route. That means 100,000,000 American dollars kept at home and put in circulation and business for all sorts of people along the road. Do a little figuring for yourself along this line, guessing at the number of motor-gypsies there were in addition to those who visited the national parks.

The best thing about all is that the people are beginning to get it through their heads that the national parks belong to them. And they are beginning to use them. And maybe it isn't a good thing for the people and country! Maybe it doesn't make for acquaintance and mutual respect and democracy!

I saw in the Big Thompson canyon in Rocky Mountain National park a bunch of several cars—different makes from several different sections of the country and carrying several different kinds of families. Well, the women were getting lunch ready and the children were playing together and the men were whipping the Big Thompson close by for trout. Enough said.

This 1921 civilization of ours is pretty complex—maybe too complex to be "sane, safe and sober." Nature is about the best antidote for a good many of its ills. And gypsying by automobile isn't the worst way in the world to get fairly close to nature.

TURKEYS SPREAD GAPEWORM PEST

Demonstrated by Experiments Carried on at Washington and on Nearby Farms.

OLD CHICKENS NOT INFECTED

Losses Can Be Greatly Reduced by Keeping Young Chickens on Ground That Has Not Been Exposed to Contamination.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

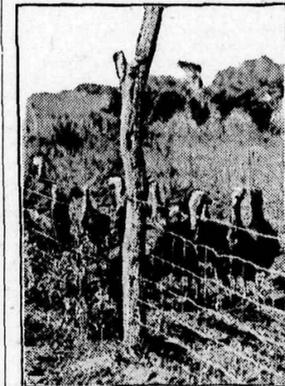

Turkeys are probably the natural hosts of the gape-worm—a serious pest among young chickens—and are an important factor in their spread. This has been demonstrated by a zoologist of the United States Department of Agriculture as the result of experiments and other investigations carried on at Washington, D. C., and on farms in several localities in Maryland.

Many Turkeys Harbor Gape-worms.

During three winter seasons beginning in December, 1916, a total of 635 chickens and 679 turkeys were examined in the Washington city market. No gape-worms were found in the chickens, but 22.5 per cent of the turkeys were found to be infested. From 1 to 5 worms were found in each of the infested turkeys. A report of these investigations has been published by the department in Department Bulletin 939, "The Turkey as an Important Factor in the Spread of Gape-worms."

In view of the complete absence of gape-worms from a large series of adult chickens and their common occurrence in a similar series of adult turkeys, it would appear, the bulletin says, that adult chickens are poorly adapted as hosts of gape-worms. That turkeys above 3 years of age may harbor gape-worms is established by the fact that a turkey which was kept at the department's experiment station at Bethesda, Md., for three years after its death to be infested with a pair of worms.

In the perpetuation of gape-worms from year to year on infested poultry farms the two chief factors, according to the bulletin, appear to be turkeys and contaminated soil. Whether, in the absence of turkeys from a farm, gape-worm affliction among chickens will regularly disappear has not been definitely established, but it seems probable that it may often do so. Gape-worms among chickens appear to be more prevalent on farms where turkeys frequent the chicken runs than on farms where there are no turkeys. Available evidence indicates that gapes has a tendency to disappear on farms following the removal of turkeys.

From experiments recorded in the bulletin, it has been found that chickens, unlike turkeys, are readily susceptible to infection with gape-worms only while they are young. They become less susceptible as they grow older. Adult chickens are seldom likely to spread infection, for in those instances in which gape-worms develop in adult chickens the parasites are likely to live only a short time.

Methods of Avoiding Loss.

Losses from gape-worms can be greatly reduced, if not altogether avoided, according to the bulletin, by keeping young chickens on ground that has not been exposed to contamination within at least a year by chickens with gapes or by turkeys, and by excluding turkeys from it during its occupancy by chickens. As gape-worms appear rarely to occur in adult chickens, brood hens may be associated with young chickens with little risk of infection. The simplest means of preventing or reducing losses from gapes appears to be the exclusion of turkeys from farms where chickens are raised.

BIG SAVING OF FARM LABOR

Hitching Third Horse to Two-Horse Walking Plow Enables Man to Plow Much More Land.

By hitching a third horse to a two-horse walking plow a man can plow at least a quarter acre more land each day, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. This makes a difference of about 5 acres in 20 days, or a saving of from two to three day's work—a big item during a busy season, especially a short spring.

LOCATION FOR BUSH FRUITS

Cool, Well-Drained and Fertile Soil is Much Preferred for Currants and Gooseberries.

The soil selected for the currant and the gooseberry should be cool, well drained and fertile. The heavy types, such as silt or clay loams, are usually better in these respects than sandy soils. Neither fruit will do well on land where water stands during any part of the year.

INCREASED AVERAGE OF PUREBRED SIRE

Progress in "Better Sires—Better Stock" Campaign.

Altogether 431,139 Head of Domestic Animals and Fowls Have Been Enrolled by Owners—Great-est Activity in Ohio.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A noticeable increase in the number of purebred animals listed in the "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign is the principal development during the first three months of 1921. The result has been to raise the general average of purebreds for the whole campaign 1 1/2 per cent. Altogether 431,139 head of domestic animals and fowls have been enrolled by their owners.

Of that number 22,005 are purebred sires and the remainder are females of various breeding, but all were bred to purebred males, according to the owners' pledges. Although the number of purebreds, as noted, increased noticeably, more scrubs also were listed than in any previous quarterly period, thus helping to accomplish one of the main objects of the campaign, which is to grade up inferior animals by the use of good purebred sires.

The greatest activity during the current year, so far as enrollments are concerned, has occurred in Ohio, with Nebraska second. In justice to other states it may be added that several, from which only a few pledges to use only purebred sires were received, have been active in other branches of the work, particularly in the procurement and distribution of purebred sires of good quality. Kentucky and numerous other states, including West Virginia, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Virginia, are launching aggressive drives against inferior sires, particularly scrub bulls. A feature of interest during the first quarterly period of 1921 was the dispatch of five emblems of recognition to far-off Guam, our island outpost in the Pacific, thousands of miles beyond Hawaii.

PRESERVING SOIL MOISTURE

Pernicious Practice of Permitting Water to Escape From Soil Should Be Discouraged.

The practice that prevails in some irrigation localities of letting the natural moisture escape from the soil, with the idea that more water can be applied when it is needed, is most pernicious and should be discouraged, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. If the moisture that gets into the ground in the form of precipitation or as irrigation water is retained by the soil it will enable the soil organisms to act upon the plant foods, rendering them available for plant growth. There is a feeling of safety in having an unlimited supply of water for irrigation purposes, but it should be remembered that irrigation costs money and labor; precipitation is nature's gift.

PERSONAL VISIT TO MARKET

Grower Enabled to Acquaint Himself With Distributors and Improve Marketing Practices.

Many times a personal visit to the market will more than repay the shipper for the cost of the trip, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Points that seem trivial to the producer often are very important to the dealer. Such a visit enables the grower to acquaint himself personally with the distributors, to select trustworthy representatives, to learn the difficulties of the "man at the other end," and to improve his marketing practices.

POTATO STORAGE A SUCCESS

Much Depends on Quality of Tubers, Temperature, Moisture and Size of Piles.

Successful storage of potatoes, says the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture, is dependent on such factors as the quality of the tubers stored, the temperature at which they are held, the moisture content of the air, the size of the storage piles, and the exclusion of light. The proper temperature ranges from about 35 to 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

PRODUCE SUPERIOR PRODUCT

Apple Grower Must Prune Trees Carefully, Study Habits and Spray Religiously.

The very first thing the apple grower has to do is to produce a superior product. And he cannot do this unless he is willing to prune his trees carefully, study the habits and requirements of his orchard, and spray religiously. And through spraying will come the greatest results and the surest chance to get orchards back on their feet.

Good intention Thwarted. The wind and hail were causing much havoc. Stepping out of the house on my way to work, I saw girl ahead of me running for dear life. Believing the wind was carrying her off and that she was unable to stop, I gallantly made right after her, to hold of her arm firmly and steady her to a standstill. I said, "I'll hold you, miss, so the wind won't chase you." Hardly did I utter the words when she angrily jerked her arm from my grasp and running ahead called back—"Idiot, I'm running to catch the street car!"—Chicago Tribune.

FINAL TRIUMPH FOR MAURICE THEIR ESTIMATES TOO LOW

Small Boy Endured Much, but in the End He Made Strong Point Over Rivals.

Proof That Engineers Have Erred in Their Figures Concerning the Weight of Crowds.

Ten-year-old Maurice was in love with the pretty new teacher and did everything in his power to get ahead of the others in winning her affection. Monday morning he was distinctly out of humor when he walked John and gave the teacher a ticket. "It's to the entertainment at our church," he said proudly. "I bought this ticket for you so that you could come and hear me sing."

A few days later he was more provoked when in came Helen bearing a ticket. "It's to our dancing class party. I want you to come and see me dance," she smiled. He scowled and scowled. But later in the week his turn came to smile above all the rest. He, too, bore a ticket to teacher, but his speech was different. "Here's a ticket for you, Miss G.," he smiled. "It's to the Macons' supper, and I want you to come and eat with me, not watch me eat."

There are about 12,000 lepers in the Philippines.

Interesting experiments were made some time ago at Harvard university which seem to demonstrate that engineers usually underestimate the maximum loading caused by dense crowds on bridges, floors and platforms. Forty men averaging 163 pounds in weight placed in a box six feet square caused an average pressure of 181 pounds to the square foot on the floor.

An engineer has estimated the weight per square foot of the densest crowds on the New York elevated railways at only 45 pounds, but since the Harvard experiments the opinion has been expressed that the maximum loading on the elevated cars and platforms may be nearer 181 than 45 pounds. This applies to other close-packed crowds.

BREAKING THE ICE.

There is a story that when Peter the Great introduced the social reforms in Russia, in an effort to bring his country abreast of western Europe, the Russian women were so averse to the hamost French dances that he caused ardent spirits to be served "straight," in wooden spoons, to every young woman at the ball before the beginning of the dance. To break the ice of Russian reserve more thoroughly he issued a ukase that the partners should kiss after taking the positions of dancers and before beginning their steps.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Newlyweds.

My husband and I having been married just a short time, arrived in New York and went to one of the best-known hotels. My husband registered for me, and we went up to our room. I said, "Oh, John, I hope you didn't register 'and wife.' I hate that. It sounds as if a woman were just an appendage. I meant to tell you to be sure and write 'Mr. and Mrs.'"

The expression on John's face was almost tragic, so I hastened to assure him that it wasn't that serious. "But it is serious. What do you suppose I've done? I registered 'John Brooks and Mary Allen.'"

Just then there was a loud knock at the door. It was the house detective. Of course everything was explained all right, but it certainly was embarrassing.—Chicago Tribune.

SUFFERED ALL A WOMAN COULD

Mrs. Meyer Finally Found Relief and Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Orange, Cal.—"I always feel very grateful to you, as some twenty years ago three doctors said I had to have a serious operation. I had a tumor, and ulcers which would gather and break. I had displacement so badly that I could hardly sit down at times, and it seemed as if I suffered everything that a woman could suffer. Then some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it until I was cured and saved from the operation. I have told women of your wonderful medicine times without number, and I am willing that you should use these facts and my name if you like. I also used your Compound during the Change, and I can do all my own work but the heavy part, and can walk miles every day as I help my husband in the office."

—Mrs. J. E. Meyer, 412 South Orange St., Orange, California.

It is quite true that such troubles as Mrs. Meyer had may reach a stage where an operation is the only resource. On the other hand, a great many women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Wonderful Telescope.

The excellence of the big Lick telescope, and the steadiness of the air when the conditions are good on Mount Hamilton, are attested by the statement of one authority that double stars, whose components are nearly equal in brightness, can be measured if the distance between them exceeds one-tenth of a second of arc. What this means in accuracy of definition may be understood by remembering the fact that one-tenth of a second is equal to the apparent diameter of an ordinary pin, viewed by the naked eye at a distance of two miles.

Huge Forest Fire Losses.

Forest fires, sweeping over 56,488,307 acres of land in 45 states, have caused damage amounting to $85,715,747 during the five years 1910 to 1920, inclusive, according to the United States forest service. A total of 100,318 forest fires occurred during this time. Minnesota was the chief sufferer, its loss being $30,805,868.

THE SANDMAN STORY

THE NEW DISEASE.

REDDY FOX, as everyone knows, is a very clever fellow. He gets his living by his wits as well as his courage. One day while Reddy was eating his dinner out of his bright tinplate he happened to notice that as he moved it he made little flashes of bright light, for the sun was shining right on it. Reddy Fox always thinks a great deal, and while he was throwing the light about the room he was thinking how he could use it to his advantage, meaning how he could play some trick on some one in a way that would get him something.

"I believe I can do it," he suddenly exclaimed, jumping up in such a hurry that he upset his chair. Then he washed his tin plate and, taking it under his arm, he hurried out of the house. Mr. Coon had a pantry filled with things that Reddy Fox liked, but Mr. Coon had not invited him to dinner once this long time, and now Reddy intended to get what he wanted without being invited.

Mr. Coon was sitting on his steps and Reddy had the tin plate under his coat. "You don't look well, Mr. Coon," he said. "Are you sick?"

"Now that you mention it," said Mr. Coon, "I believe I do feel rather poorly, and I don't think I ate as much breakfast as usual."

That night, after Mr. Coon had run away for a change of climate, he suddenly discovered, while running, that he was feeling very well and not at all ill.

"I guess I was not as sick as I thought, after all," he said. "I believe I will go back home, and if I have a second spell of flashes I can go away for good, for Reddy Fox said the third attack was the danger point."

It was moonlight when Mr. Coon came to the path that led to his house in the woods, and as he came to the brush where Reddy Fox had hidden his bright tin plate Mr. Coon saw something glister.

"That looks like Reddy Fox's plate," said Mr. Coon. "Now I wonder how it happened to be here. Anyway, finding it is keeping in the woods, and I need a new plate."

When he reached his house he was surprised to hear deep breathing com-

SOPHIA.

THE wisest of feminine names is Sophy, or Sophia, as she should be called properly. It is perhaps the only name which is closely associated with Divine attributes, since its origin dates back to the dedication of that most gorgeous of Christian temples by which Justinian declared that he had surpassed Solomon. It was called St. Sophia (the holy wisdom of God).

According to the "Preacher" in the Book of Ecclesiastics, Wisdom is the mother of fair Love, Hope and holy Fear, and this idea is said to have suggested the allegory of the holy woman with three daughters so called, and in compliment to the newly built church, the niece of Justinian's empress, afterward wife of his nephew and successor, was called Sophia. The name straightway became fashionable among the daughters of the nobility of Greece and was carried, through St. Savonians, to Germany.

History records a Hungarian princess of that name in 919, and another, daughter of King Geyza, married Magnus of Saxony and spread the use of the name throughout Saxony. Denmark is said to have received it through this latter princess and has since made it almost a national name. Its vogue with the royalty of Den-

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"HEALTHY" AND "HEALTHFUL"

THERE is a distinct difference in the meaning of these two words, and the distinction should be made by all who desire to speak and write correctly. "Healthy" means possessing or enjoying health or its effects; as, "a healthy person" or "a healthy condition." But "healthful" means promoting health, or adding to it, or preserving it. Thus, we say that a healthy person is the product of healthful surroundings. "The finances of the country are in a healthy condition." "Healthful living is conducive to length of life."

A correspondent of a newspaper wrote, "Are plants in a sleeping room healthy?" It was evident that she meant, "Does the presence of plants in a sleeping room affect the health of the occupant of the room?" Of course, a plant, in a sleeping room or elsewhere, may or may not be healthy; and its presence in a room may or may not be healthful for the human occupant.

FROM REMOTEST PARTS OF GLOBE

Tanlac Elements Come From Many Lands Far Away From Here.

The ingredients from which the celebrated medicine Tanlac is made, come from remote sections of the earth, and are transported thousands of miles over land and sea to the great Tanlac Laboratories at Dayton, Ohio, and Walkersville, Canada.

The Alps, Apennines, Pyrenees, Russian Asia, Brazil, West Indies, Rocky Mountains, Asia Minor, Persia, India, Mexico, Columbia and Peru are among the far away points from which the principal properties of this remarkable preparation are obtained.

What is said to be the largest pharmaceutical laboratory in the United States has been completed at Dayton, Ohio, for the manufacture of Tanlac, which, according to recent reports, is now having the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world, over 20,000,000 bottles having been sold in six years.

The new plant occupies 60,000 square feet of floor space and has a daily capacity of 50,000 bottles. Uniform quality is guaranteed by a series of careful inspections by expert chemists from the time the roots, herbs, barks and flowers are received in their rough state from all parts of the globe, until their medicinal properties have been extracted by the most approved processes. The finished medicine is then bottled, labeled and shipped out to tens of thousands of druggists throughout the United States and Canada, to supply a demand never before equalled by this or any other medicine.

BARNEGAT

Mr. and Mrs. John Haines of Asbury Park, were recent guests of the former's parents.

Miss Florence Crane of this place, was married at Jersey City at the home of relatives to Mr. G. T. Ebyre.

The new firm of Cranmer and Reeves are running a delivery to Watertown.

Contractor A. H. Tolbert is overhauling the property on Railroad avenue to be used as a wrapper factory by New York parties.

Assemblyman Cranmer and wife of Cedar Run, spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bugbee and attended the Children's Day evening at the M. E. Church Sunday evening.

Prof. Wm. H. Brown, the former Principal of the Barnegat High School, left Monday for Spring City, Pa., where he will reside in the future.

Ezra Parker will have a house moved to the recent lot adjoining Dan Erickson on Railroad ave. There is a constant demand for houses in Barnegat.

A son was born to Rev. and Mrs. Pennington Corson on Sunday. He is named for his father.

Cornelius Van Vorst will occupy the house owned by Capt. Cox on E. Bay street formerly occupied by Mr. Miller. They moved here the past fall from Cedar Run.

Mrs. Martha S. Bates of Haddonfield is a guest of her daughter at the M. E. Parsonage.

Rev. John Williams of Westmont was a recent guest at the M. E. Parsonage.

The Children's Day exercises held at the M. E. Church on Sunday evening last were very entertaining. The house was full. Songs and exercises were rendered by the young folks, and one of the number was a solo, which was sung very sweetly by Miss Helen Bidway.

Abe Fort has sold his lot on West Bay street to Mr. Holloway, who will build later on.

Mrs. Jones of Elizabeth and Mr. and Mrs. George Inman of Red Bank, spent Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Cranmer.

Rev. Corson's Bible Class defeated J. H. Perrine's class in a sensational Bae Ball game on Thursday last.

Rev. Pennington Corson motored to Asbury Park on Monday.

Benj. Ridgway is having his house on S. Main street, raised and remodeled.

Mrs. Lucy Hazelton was an Asbury Park visitor this week.

Billy Poust's home when erected will be called "Sea Land Farm." He will erect a new bungalow and sell off bungalow sites.

The 7th Annual Commencement of Barnegat High School was held at the Opera House Friday evening as follows:

Invocation, Rev. M. J. Wyngarten. Address of welcome, John R. Barber, Class President.

Salutatory Essay, Esther A. Gaynor "Captain, My Captain," Avis Cranmer.

Class History, George H. Johnson "In School Days," Edna Hazelton.

Class Will, Mary C. Galvin. Piano Duet, Dorothien Groepeler and Margaret French.

"The Bell Ringer of '76," Edwin Carter. Class Prophecy, Joseph H. Bolton.

Valedictory Essay, "The American High School," M. Irene Hazelton. Vocal Solo, Charlotte Elbersson 1923.

Presentation of the graduates, Prin. W. H. Brown. Presentation 8th Grade Diplomas, Supt. Chas. A. Morris.

Presentation High School Diplomas, Clayton B. Corliss, Pres. Board of Education.

Violin Solo, George Deeg 1923. Commencement address, Prof. DeMontfort Melchior of Girard College.

Singing "America." Benediction, Rev. Pennington Corson. The Opera House was crowded and many who could not get in.

Mrs. Cox has taken the position of Miss Florence Crane in the Telephone Office here.

The American Legion is furnishing their room over the American Stores. They will have a fine location when they get it in shape.

1 o'clock. Supper from 5 to 6 o'clock. The boys are making preparations for a good time in the evening. At the Opera House will be a picture starring Douglas McLean and Davis.

TRENTON GHOST KEEPS DATES

Spirit of Suicide Comes Back and Creates Great Excitement in Neighborhood.

IS VERY NOISY FOR SPOOK

Widow Forced to Seek Medical Treatment for Shattered Nerves—Brother-in-Law Has Encounter With Spirit and Falls Senseless.

Trenton, N. J.—Page Sir Oliver Lodge! The ghost of John Koch, suicide and would-be slayer of Theodore Opendaker, is walking.

Stephen Hannan, has been so upset that on one occasion he fell to the floor in a faint. The entire neighborhood of the Koch home is bordering on panic.

Koch shot himself several months ago after wounding Opendaker. The widow and her four small children have since continued to live at the family home with her brother, Hannan, and Mr. and Mrs. Ephraim Cordwell.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Koch awoke with a scream and declared she had seen her husband's ghost. Other occupants of the house laughed at her, but the incident was repeated a few nights later.

Hannan then decided to sleep downstairs on a couch. Nothing happened for a night or two, but on Monday night the alleged ghost returned and made such a disturbance that everyone in the house was aroused.

Reckless With Lamps. Hannan determined to stay awake the rest of the night. He sat near the kitchen door. Suddenly, he says, the latch began to move.

Turning to resume his seat, he found himself face to face with the form of his dead brother-in-law. Seizing a lighted oil lamp, he hurled it at the vision so forcefully that it hit and dented a wall.

He threw a second lamp at the supposed ghost and then, shrieking, fell senseless.

Upon being revived he declared that the ghost had said: "I will be back on Friday night at 12:45 o'clock. I will then leave for awhile, but I will return."

Friday night Hannan and Cordwell took positions on either side of the kitchen door, and when the latch began to dance they rushed to open it, only to find themselves looking at each other. Then they securely tied the latch. When it began to jiggle later on they inspected it and found the twine cleanly cut in several places.

Page Trenton Press Agent. Mrs. Henry Blizard and her daughter went to the kitchen and, together with the Cordwells, waited for the promised reappearance of the ghost. At 12:45 the latch again began to move, but no ghost was seen.

Last Saturday night Hannan went to his own room to sleep. Soon after midnight, he says, he and everyone else in the house were awakened by crashing sounds from the kitchen. Rushing to the first floor they found nothing disturbed.

Temporarily, at least, the Koch ghost has supplanted sixteen-year-old Dorothy Miller as the leading subject of local conversation. Miss Miller is the girl who offered to marry any man who would pay $1,000 for an operation her mother must undergo if she is to live.

ROADS AID ARGENTINE COTTON

Industry Quadruples in Three Years, Due to Help Given Farmers by State Railways.

Buenos Aires.—The cotton industry in northern Argentina has quadrupled in importance in three years as a result of aid given to the farmers by the state railways.

In 1918-19 approximately 12,000 acres were planted, while the 1920-21 crop embraces an area of about 50,000 acres.

The crop yield is from 1,200 to 1,600 pounds per acre, according to statistics published by the railroads, one-third of which is fiber and the rest seed. A gin and a cotton-seed mill have been constructed to take care of the crop.

The problem of the Argentine cotton farmer is lack of labor for picking the crop. Attempts have been made to use machinery for this, but these have been reported as being only partially successful.

Inside Organs on Wrong Side. Rutland, Vt.—Though all his internal organs are "on the wrong side," and he has tuberculosis, William Bowen of West Charleston, Vt., a patient at the Vermont sanitarium in Pittsford, is going to get well, say the doctors, to whom the man is an anatomical curiosity.

X-ray pictures taken to ascertain the conditions of the lungs revealed the fact that his heart is on the right side of his chest, the stomach is misplaced, the liver on the left instead of the right side, and the appendix on the left.

Audience of 500 Arrested at Dance. New York.—An audience of 500 men and women and two men and five women dancers were arrested in a police raid on a New York city dance hall, where alleged indecent performances were being staged. The patrol wagons made 25 trips.

YOUTH TRISECTS ARC

18-Year-Old Massachusetts High School Boy Amazes Teachers.

His Work Proves Up Arithmetically and Geometric Proof Will Be Worked With Teachers' Assistance.

Lynn, Mass.—Arthur Rogers, a senior at Lynn Classic high school, eighteen years old, has solved three methods of trisecting an arc or angle, using only a straight edge and compass, professors at the school announced.

The feat of Rogers has never been accomplished except with measuring instruments, and those who examined the youngster's work could find no flaw with it.

Although he has proved his work arithmetically, no proof has yet been discovered geometrically, and the mathematics teachers at the school will help Rogers to solve this.

Edwin Hoadley, teacher, believes the key will be found in the Pythagoras theorem; the square of the hypotenuse of a right triangle is equal to the sum of the squares on the other two sides. In addition to trisecting an arc, Rogers has gone further by proving that he can divide the arc into any number of equal parts.

Rogers demonstrated his discovery at the weekly meeting of the Mathematics club, and Instructor Arthur Lord, a Phi Delta Kappa man at Dartmouth, could find no error in the work.

Rogers' method simply and briefly outlined as follows: Starting with any arc, draw a chord. Using the chord as a diameter, describe a semicircle. Using half the chord as a radius, describe arcs from each end, cutting the semicircle into three equal parts. From the center of the circle of which the original arc is a sector, draw lines cutting the three trisectors of the second arc and the original arc is trisected. The whole theorem is based on "diametric symmetry," a comparatively recent discovery regarding arcs and angles.

Warn of Vienna "Widows" Appeals Sent to Strangers in This Country Are Found to Be Fraudulent.

New York.—A warning against false appeals for charity directed to individuals in this country by "widows" in Vienna was sent out by the National Information Bureau, Inc., of 1 Madison avenue. The bureau has found that some of these pleas were identical in wording and that the same pictures of emaciated children were enclosed. Different addresses were given in Vienna, but it was the conclusion of the bureau that the letters were fraudulent.

These letters told of finding the address of the "American friend," of the pitiful circumstances of the family, and concluded with a blessing for an expected gift. In concluding its warning the bureau said:

"Through the European Relief Council, of which Herbert C. Hoover is chairman, food drafts can be bought and sent to needy individuals in Vienna who are known to American givers, or the council will use its discretion in distributing help to those who need it most."

Kaiser Told Who is Boss Burgomaster of Doorn Resents Interference of Former War Lord With Movements of Citizens.

Paris.—The burgomaster at Doorn has just set the former kaiser right as to who is the boss around the Dutch retreat of the ex-war-lord, and it isn't Wilhelm, even though the latter may have formerly bossed the German empire.

Natives of Doorn and those who may visit the town are able to peek through the fence surrounding the kaiser's palace, as they walk by, and a number have been peeping of late. As the story goes, Wilhelm ordered his aid to tell loiterers to move on. The burgomaster heard about it and went straightway to the palace. He demanded to see the kaiser and was admitted. Then he proceeded to say:

"I have come to inform you that I, alone, am the burgomaster of Doorn, therefore, I, solely, control the circulation of my townsmen."

Bequeaths Wife Shilling to Buy Herself a Rope. London.—When the will of a man who died at St. Leonard's was read recently it was found that he had left his wife "the sum of one shilling to enable her to buy a rope."

The story has recalled many similar wills probated here in other years. A Birmingham man left his son four-pence with which to purchase "a hempen cord or halter for the use of his (son's) dear wife, which I trust she may make use of without delay."

Woman Aged Over 100 Active. Glenwood City, Wis.—Mrs. S. Hadmark, Township of Forest, celebrated her one hundred and first birthday. She was born in Norway in 1820, and came to this country in 1870. She is still active and takes care of her own room in the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. G. Anderson.

Long Shoe Points. At one time—in the Fourteenth or Fifteenth century—people wore the points of their shoes so long that they were in danger of tumbling over them when they walked. To overcome this inconvenience it became fashionable for both men and women to tie their shoe points to their knees by laces or chains.

Umbrellas. Umbrellas should be washed occasionally. Stand them open, in a bathtub, scrub them with a small hand scrub brush and rinse with a bath spray.

CEMETERY COPING FUND PROGRESSING NICELY

Seventeen dollars in cash was received by the Secretary-Treasurer of the Cemetery Coping Fund the past week. The goal is appearing on the horizon but as yet it is scarcely discernible. But we are gaining. Shall we "go over the top?" Don't wait until your interest in aroused by the death of a loved one, who will make this Cemetery their last resting place.

GIVES REASONS FOR DEPRESSION

Rail Chief Declares Freight Charges Not the Cause of Stagnation.

FARM PRODUCTS ARE CITED Business Depression and Lack of Demand the Real Trouble.

Washington, D. C.—In testifying before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, which is conducting an inquiry into the railroad situation, Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the board of the Southern Pacific company, went into great detail as to the effect of freight rates on produce shipments, foreign and domestic. The main points he made in this part of his testimony were:

First—That business depression is not the result of high freight rates. Second—That the real cause of stagnation in produce shipments is lack of market or proffering.

He said, in part: A widespread propaganda is being carried on to arouse public sentiment against existing freight rates, whereas the fact is that even since the rates have been advanced the cost of transporting commodities is far less than the toll taken by the commission merchant and the retailer for buying and selling them.

Public Misled as to Situation People are misled and conclude that high rates have stopped the movement of a large amount of freight and that the railroads would make more money if they would reduce the rates and thereby revive the traffic.

There is the strongest reason to believe that the very great reduction in traffic has been due almost entirely to general business conditions that are world-wide in their effect, and that would have come if there had been no advance in freight rates.

Prices of commodities reached their maximum in the first half of the year 1920 and thereafter fell with great rapidity in France, the United States and the United Kingdom. The fall in the United States began in May, and was rapidly on its way downward in September, when the advanced rates took effect. Nevertheless traffic did not drop for at least four months.

Slump Not Caused by Higher Rates It was a general deflation and fall in prices from the heights to which they had been driven by war conditions that has caused a stagnation of business throughout the world.

That it is not caused by the cost of transportation is convincingly shown by the fact that stoppage of buying has caused an over-supply of ships, hence ocean tonnage rates have been recently at the lowest points in their history.

Notwithstanding these low rates, ocean traffic shows as great stagnation as rail traffic, and millions of tons of shipping here and abroad are rusting away in idleness. Many commodities would not move even if the freight charges on them were abolished entirely, because producers can find no market.

That the decline in business is not due to prohibitive freight rates is shown by the following examples:

In January of this year the total tonnage of lines west of El Paso and Oregon operated by the Southern Pacific company fell off 41 per cent. The combined intrastate freight tonnage in Arizona and Nevada declined 46 per cent although no increase in the intrastate freight rates in those States has been as yet authorized or made effective.

Of a Texas cotton crop of over four million bales, 48 per cent remains unmarketed. The average cost of rail and water shipment from producing point to Liverpool has been reduced about 51 1/2 per cent since the face of which about one-half million bales of cotton less than normal have been exported to Liverpool. Obviously the freight rate is not responsible for the restricted movement.

During September, October, and November, 1920, 45 per cent less ripe, 50 per cent less canned salmon and 77 per cent less dried fruit were exported than during the same months of the previous year, although the reduction in ocean rates was substantially more than the increase in inland rail rates, so that the material decline in the exports of these commodities was in the face of a less aggregate cost of transportation.

The Case of the Fruit Growers The troubles of the California lemon grower have attracted much attention. He claims he is unable to ship his product because of the increased freight rates. A removal of all the recent increase of the rate on lemons would not help him. He has a rate by sea through the Panama Canal of less than half—48 per cent—of the rail rate, yet his lemons are not marketed.

The average price of a cantaloupe laid down in New York in the season of 1920 was not quite 11 cents. As they were retailed at about 25 cents, there is a further profit to somebody of 14 cents per cantaloupe. The managers of the propaganda for a general reduction of freight rates have lost sight of the fact that in October, 1920, 1,105,321 carloads of coal were moved, being the maximum moved in any month in the preceding two years, although it was handled at the advanced freight rates, and we have heard nothing as to coal being produced at a loss or of the coal mine owners going out of business because of existing freight rates.

The percentage of freight charges to value in the early part of 1921 is almost exactly the same as it was in 1914.

FIND TRACKS IN ASH

Shows Army Fled From Wrath of Volcano in Hawaii.

Exploring Party Find Footprints 130 Years Old in Desert South of the Crater of Pele Volcano.

Hilo, Island of Hawaii, T. H.—Footprints, 130 years old, of a Hawaiian army that fled from the wrath of Pele, goddess of the active volcano of Kilauea, near here, are believed to have been discovered in the Kau desert, south of the great crater, by Prof. T. A. Jagger, Jr., in charge of the volcano observatory.

Dr. Jagger and his party were exploring a region far removed from any of the known, modern trails when they came upon the area thickly covered with the imprint of naked feet, all pointing in the one direction, all deep at the toes and light at the heels, indicating that the makers of the tracks had been running at top speed.

The tracks originally had been made in volcanic ash, which is strongly impregnated with sulphurous acid and gypsum, and which when, wet by rain, settles into a hard concrete, thus explaining the preservation of the imprints for a period believed to have stretched over more than a century and a quarter.

Hawaiian legend and history provide the other side of the story, the connection between the Kau desert tracks and the flight of the army of Keoua, King of Kau, from Pele's wrath.

Keoua led an army of three divisions against King Kamehameha, who later united all the Hawaiian islands under his sway, in the year 1790. This year also recorded the last explosive eruption of Kilauea volcano. Hawaiian legend records the fact that some of Keoua's warriors rolled stones into Kilauea crater to mark their disrespect for the goddess of the molten lake. Whatever the reason for the outbreak, Pele rose in her wrath, and, with a terrible explosive eruption, totally wiped out the second division of Keoua's army.

The footprints found in the Kau desert are believed to be those of men of the first division, who seeing the destruction of their comrades in the rear, fled from the locality. The third division coming up, saw the bodies of the annihilated second and halted.

The area where the footprints were discovered is part of the new Kilauea national park, which will be dedicated this year, and steps already have been taken to inclose the tracks and preserve them.

PNEUMATIC CROWBAR

The Cincinnati Traction company is using a pneumatic crowbar to rip up all kinds of paving around the street car tracks when it becomes necessary to replace rails. One man with the air-driven tool can take the place of four men with ordinary picks. The point sinks through the hard pavement as though it were ordinary dirt, and in speeding up the operator can tear up a square yard of standard paving in less than three minutes.

Children Fed Ether to Beat H. C. of Eating

Westfield, Mass.—As the result of investigation by the school authorities, who learned that young children are receiving sugar lumps, soaked in ether, to reduce their appetites, Superintendent Chester D. Stiles took up the matter with state educational and health authorities.

Ether may be bought in any quantity by a child in any drug store. Children, when questioned, said that the ether was given them by their parents to lower the cost of living and also to quiet those who got boisterous.

Earthquake of 1755.

In 1755, on the 18th of November, an earthquake shook the North American coast, damaging houses all along the shore from New England to the West Indies. In the harbor of St. Martin's the sea withdrew entirely, leaving vessels and fish on the dry harbor bottom. When the waters returned they overflowed the lowlands for miles.

Jack in Garden.
Jack-in-the-pulpit, by nature a bog lover, is by no means as fastidious as the most of its clan, and a moist, slightly shaded spot in one corner of the yard will amply supply its demands, says the American Forestry association of Washington. This plant is a near relative of the cultivated calta, with purple and white or green and white striped blossoms—usually called flowers. The real flowers, though, are deep in the center of this showy dress, at the base of the central spadix, and may be either fertile or sterile.

"Elephant's Ear."

The "elephant's ear" is a Hawaiian or Fijian plant, with very large, bright green leaves, used to give subtropical effect in bedding. The root-stock is planted in good, moist soil out of doors or started in a hotbed or a greenhouse and transplanted. In the fall it is stored where dampness and frost cannot reach it. In the Pacific Islands the rootstock is used for food extensively, the pot of Hawaii being made from it. The plant is called taro.

Musl's Great Power.

"Those who think that music is one of the trifles of existence," said Gladstone, "are in grievous error, since from the earliest times it has been one of the most potent factors for molding and forming character."

A MAN FOR THE AGES A STORY OF THE BUILDERS OF DEMOCRACY BY IRVING BACHELLER

ABE LINCOLN Synopsis.—Samson and Sarah Traylor, with their two children, Josiah and Betsy, travel by wagon in the summer of 1831 from their home in Vergennes, Vt., to the West, the land of plenty. Their destination is the Country of the Sangamon, in Illinois. At Niagara Falls they meet a party of immigrants, among them a youth named John McNeil, who also decides to go to the Sangamon country. In the swamp flats of Ohio and Indiana they begin to be troubled with fever and ague.

"I shall never forget that day spent in a lonely part of the woods," the good woman wrote to her brother. "It endeared the children to me more than any day I can remember. They brought water from the creek, a great quantity, and told me stories and cheered me in every way they could. My faith in God's protection was perfect and in spite of my misery the children were a great comfort. In the middle of the afternoon Samson returned with a doctor and some tools and a stick of seasoned timber. How good he looked when he came and knelt by my bed and kissed me! This is a hard journey, but a woman can bear anything with such a man. The doctor said I would be all right in three days, and I was."

"Late that afternoon it began to rain. Samson was singing as he worked on his wheel. A traveler came along on horseback and saw our plight. He was a young missionary going west. Samson began to joke with him.

"You're a happy man for one in so much trouble," said the stranger. "Then I heard Samson say: 'Well, sir, I'm in a fix where happiness is absolutely necessary. It's like grease on the wagon wheels—we couldn't go on without it. When we need anything we make it if we can. My wife is sick and the wagon is broke and it's raining and night is near in a lone-some country, and it ain't a real good time for me to be down in the mouth—is it now? We haven't broke any bones or had an earthquake or been scalped by Indians, so there's some room for happiness."

"Look here, stranger—I like you," said the man. "If there's anything I can do to help ye, I'll stop a while." He spent the night with them and helped mend the felly and set the tire.

The fever and ague passed from one to another and all were sick before the journey ended, although Samson kept the reins in hand through his misery. There were many breaks to mend, but Samson's ingenuity was always equal to the task.

One day, near nightfall, they were overtaken by a tall, handsome Yankee lad riding a pony. His pony stopped beside the wagon and looked toward the travelers as if appealing for help. The boy was pointing toward the horizon and muttering. Sarah saw at once that his mind was wandering in the delirium of fever. She got out of the wagon and took his hand. The moment she did so he began crying like a child.

"This boy is sick," she said to Samson, who came and helped him off his horse. They camped for the night and put the boy to bed and gave him medicine and tender care. He was too sick to travel next day. The Traylor's stayed with him and nursed the lad until he was able to go on. He was from Niagara county, New York, and his name was Harry Needles. His mother had died when he was ten and his father had married again. He had not been happy in his home after that and his father had given him a pony and a hundred dollars and sent him away to seek his own fortune. Homesick and lonely and ill, and just going west with a sublime faith that the West would somehow provide for him, he might even have perished on the way if he had not fallen in with friendly people. His story had touched the heart of Sarah and Samson. He was a big, green, gentle-hearted country boy who had set out filled with hope and the love of adventure. Sarah found pleasure in mothering the poor lad, and so it happened that he became one of their little party. He was helpful and good-natured and had sundry arts that pleased the children. The man and the woman liked the big, honest lad. One day he said to Samson: "I hope you won't mind if I go along with you, sir."

"Glad to have you with us," said Samson. "We've talked it over. If you want to, you can come along with us and our home shall be yours and I'll do what's right by you."

They fared along through Indiana and over the wide savannas of Illinois, and on the ninety-seventh day of their journey they drove through rolling, grassy, flowering prairies and up a long, hard hill to the small log cabin settlement of New Salem, Illinois, on the shore of the Sangamon. They halted about noon in the middle of this little prairie village, opposite a small clapboard house. A sign hung over its door which bore the rudely lettered words: "Rutledge's Tavern."

A long, slim, stoop-shouldered young man sat in the shade of an oak tree that stood near a corner of the tavern, with a number of children playing around him. He sat leaning against the tree trunk reading a book. He had risen as they came near and stood looking at them, with the book under his arm. Samson says in his diary that he looked like "an untripped yearling colt about sixteen hands high. He got up slow and kept rising till his bush of black tumbled hair was six feet four above the ground. Then he put on an old straw hat without any band on it. He reminded me of Philemon Baker's fish rod. He was that rarer. For humbleness I'd match him against the world. His hide was kind of yaller and leathery. I could see he was still in the gristle—a little over twenty—but his face was marked up by worry and weather like a man's. I never saw anybody so long between joints. Don't hardly see how he could tell when his feet got cold."

He wore a hickory shirt without a collar or coat or jacket. One suspender held up his coarse, linsey trousers, the legs of which fitted closely and came only to a blue yarn zone above his heavy cowhide shoes. Samson writes that he "fetched a sneeze and wiped his big nose with a red handkerchief" as he stood surveying them in silence, while Dr. John Allen, who had sat on the door-step reading a paper—a kindly faced man of middle age with a short white beard under his chin—greeted them cheerfully.

"Where do you hail from?" the Doctor asked. "Vermont," said Samson. "All the way in that wagon?" "Yes, sir."

"I guess you're made o' the right stuff," said the Doctor. "Where ye bound?" "Don't know exactly. Going to take a claim somewhere."

"There's no better country than right here. This is the Canaan of America. We need people like you. Unhitch your team and have some dinner and we'll talk things over after you're rested. I'm the doctor here and I ride all over this part o' the country. I reckon I know it pretty well."

A woman in a neat calico dress came out of the door—a strong-built and rather well-favored woman with blonde hair and dark eyes.

"Mrs. Rutledge, these are travelers from the East," said the Doctor. "Give 'em some dinner, and if they can't pay for it, I can. They've come all the way from Vermont."

"Good land! Come right in an' rest yourselves, Abe, you show the gentleman where to put his horses an' lend him a hand."

Abe extended his long arm toward Samson and said "Howdy" as they shook hands.

"When his big hand got hold of mine, I kind of felt his timber," Samson writes. "I says to myself, 'There's a man it would be hard to tip over in a rattle.'"

"What's yer name? How long ye been travellin'? My conscience! Ain't ye wore out?" the hospitable Mrs.

Rutledge was asking as she went into the house with Sarah and the children. "You go and mix up with the little ones and let yer mother rest while I git dinner," she said to Joe and Betsy, and added as she took Sarah's shawl and bonnet: "You lop down an' rest yerself while I'm flyin' around the fire."

"Come all the way from Vermont?" Abe asked as he and Samson were unbiting. "Yes, sir."

"By jing!" the slim giant exclaimed. "I reckon you feel like throwin' off yer harness an' takin' a rol' in the grass."

"Thank you—I want to look around here a little," said Samson. "What's the name of this place?" "New Salem. We call it a village. It has a mill, a carding machine, a tavern, a schoolhouse, five stores, fourteen houses, two or three men of genius, and a noisy dam. It's a crude but growing place and soon it will have all the embellishments of civilized life."

That evening many of the inhabitants of the little village came to the tavern to see the travelers and were introduced by Dr. Allen. Most of them had come from Kentucky, although there were two Yankee families who had moved on from Ohio.

"These are good folks," said the Doctor. "There are others who are not so good. I could show you some pretty rough customers at Clary's Grove, not far from here. We have to take things as they are and do our best to make 'em better."

"Any Indians?" Sarah asked. "You see one now and then, but they're peaceable. Most of 'em have gone with the buffaloes—farther west. Now and then a circuit rider gets here and preaches to us. You'll hear the Reverend Stephen Nuckles if you settle in these parts. He can holler louder than any man in the state."

The tavern was the only house in New Salem with stairs in it—stairs so steep, as Samson writes, that "they were first cousins to the ladder."

There were four small rooms above them. Two of these were separated by a partition of cloth hanging from the rafters. In each was a bed and bedstead and smaller beds on the floor. In case there were a number of adult guests the bedstead was screened with sheets hung upon strings. In one of these rooms the travelers had a night of refreshing sleep.

After riding two days with the Doctor, Samson bought the claim of one Isaac Gollaher to a half section of land a little more than a mile from the western end of the village. He chose a site for his house on the edge of an open prairie.

"Now we'll go over and see Abe," said Dr. Allen, after the deal was made. "He's the best man with an ax and a saw in this part of the country. He clerks for Mr. Offutt. Abe Lincoln is one of the best fellows that ever lived—a rough diamond just out of the great mine of the West, that only needs to be cut and polished."

Denton Offutt's store was a small log structure about twenty by twenty which stood near the brow of the hill east of Rutledge's tavern. When they entered it Abe lay at full length on the counter, his head resting on a bolt of blue denim as he studied a book in his hand. He wore the same shirt and one suspender and linsey trousers which he had worn in the dooryard of the tavern, but his feet were covered only by his blue yarn socks.

It was a general store full of exotic favors, chiefly those of tea, coffee, tobacco, muscovado sugar and molasses. There was a counter on each side. Bolts of cloth, mostly calico, were piled on the far end of the right counter as one entered and the near end held a showcase containing a display of cutlery, pewter spoons, jewelry and fishing tackle. There were double windows on either side of the rough board door with its wooden latch. The left counter held a case filled with threads, buttons, combs, colored ribbons, and belts and Jew's-harps. A balance stood in the middle of this counter. A chest of tea, a big brown jug, a box of candies, a keg and a large wooden pail occupied its farther end. The shelving on its side walls was filled by straw hats, plug tobacco, bolts of cloth, pills and patent medicines and paste-board boxes containing shirts, handkerchiefs and underwear. At the rear end of the store was a large fireplace. There were two chairs near the fireplace, both of which were occupied by a man who sat in one while his feet lay on the other. He wore a calico shirt with a fanciful design of morning-glories on it printed in appropriate colors, a collar of the same material and a red necktie.

Abe laid aside his book and rose to a sitting posture.

"Pardon me—'ou see the firm is busy," said Abe. "You know Eb Zane used to say that he was never so busy in his life as when he lay on his back with a broken leg. He said he had to work twenty-four hours a day 'bout nothin' an' could never git an hour off. But a broken leg is not so bad as a lame intellect. That lays you out with the fever an' ague of ignorance. Jack Kelso recommended Kirkham's pills and poultices of poetry. I'm trying both and slowly getting the better of it. I've learned three conjugations, between customers, this afternoon."

The sleeper, whose name was William Berry, rose and stretched himself and was introduced to the newcomers. He was a short, genial man, of some thirty years, with blonde, curly hair and mustache. His fat cheeks had a color as definite as that of the blossoms on his shirt, now rather soiled. His prominent nose shared their glow of ruddy opulence. His gray eyes wore a look of apology.

"Mr. Traylor, this is Mr. William Berry," said Dr. Allen. "Mr. Traylor has just acquired an interest in all our institutions. He has bought the Gollaher tract and is going to build a house and some fences. Abe, couldn't you help get the timber out in a hurry so we can have a raising within a week? You know the arts of the ax better than any of us."

Abe looked at Samson. "I reckon he and I would make a good team with the ax," he said. "He looks as if he could push a horse down with one hand and build it up with the other. You can bet I'll be glad to help in any way I can."

"We'll all turn in and help. I should think Bill or Jack Kelso could look after the store for a few days," said the Doctor. "I promised to take Mr. Traylor over to Jack Kelso's tonight. Couldn't you come along?"

"Good! We'll have a story-tellin' and get Jack to unlimber his guns," said Abe.

Jack Kelso's cabin, one of two which stood close together at the western end of the village, was lighted by the cheery blaze of dry logs in its fireplace. There were guns on a rack over the fireplace under a buck's head, a powder horn hanging near them on its string looped over a nail. There were wolf and deer and bear pelts on the floor. The skins of foxes, raccoons and wildcats adorned the log walls. Jack Kelso was a blond, smooth-faced, good-looking, merry-hearted Scot, about forty years old, of a rather slight build, some five feet, eight inches tall. That is all that any one knew of him save that he spent most of his time hunting and fishing and seemed to have all the best things, which great men had said or written, on the tip of his tongue.

INSPIRATION ON THE WING Great Compositions That Seem to Have Been Awaiting the Moment of Their Birth.

Charles Kingsley returned home one night rather dejected because a sermon he had preached that day in London had proved a little too "socialistic" for the incumbent. Instead of going to bed he paced back and forth in front of the fire, and his wife, knowing he was composing, left him, and retired. In the morning he recited to her that moving lyric:

"Three fencers went sailing out into the west as the sun went down."

There is a tablet in the porch of Wrexham church to the memory of Bishop Heber, which records that the most popular of all missionary hymns was composed in the town. Reginald Heber, who was then vicar of Hodnet, happened to be staying at the vicarage with his father-in-law, Dr. Shipley, dean of St. Asaph's, who was to preach a missionary sermon on the Sunday.

Heber and other friends were assembled in the library on the Saturday, when the dean asked his son-in-law if he could write something for the service next morning. Heber retired to the farther end of the room for the purpose and at the end of 15 minutes he read the first three of the four verses of which the famous hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," consists.

His hearers were delighted, but Heber said the sense was not complete, and devoted another five minutes to the fourth stanza.

Book as Granaries. Books are the great civilizers of the race, the storehouses of knowledge, the granaries of intellectual food. Therefore to designate in all candor which books of those that are made are, indeed, public pabulum, and which are straw; carefully and conscientiously to examine and explain, one man for the million, the publications which are conducive or detrimental, in whole or in part, to learning and progress, is one of the most important and noblest works in which man can be engaged, while to prostitute the powers requisite for such a position is one of the basest.—Hubert Howe Bancroft.

Sartorial Eclipse. "You say this embezzler was humiliated when forced to appear in court." "Yes." "That seems to indicate that he has a conscience." "Not at all. After having spent years building up a local reputation as a 'snappy dresser,' he had to appear in a suit that he'd never pressed."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

CONDENSED CLASSICS OUR MUTUAL FRIEND By CHARLES DICKENS

Condensation by Alfred S. Clark

A SINISTER bird of prey seemed to stare from a dirty rowboat, the eyes fixed upon the broad waters of the Thames, his arms bare, his hair matted, his clothes mud-begrimed. Twilight deepened the shadows cast by the huddled buildings of London, but his gaze did not swerve. His daughter, a girl of twenty, rowing in obedience to his nods, regarded him with a fascinated dread. Suddenly he stiffened; the bird of prey had sighted the quarry. A few minutes later behind the boat a body bobbed and lunged. Hexam had found another corpse, the pockets of another drowned soul to rifle. It was this grisly livelihood that was reflected in the frightened eyes of Lizzie Hexam.

The story of that find was to be talked about in drawing rooms; in dingy homes along the waterside and in the comfortable bar of the Six Jolly Fellowship-Porters; in the musty shop of Mr. Venus where skeletons leaped out of corners as the fire brightened; in Boffin's Bower behind which rose the dust-mounds that had created the Harmon fortune. For the body was identified as that of John Harmon, returned to England to claim a fortune of $500,000, left him by an eccentric father upon condition that he wed a girl whom he had never seen.

John Harmon was decreed dead and the fortune came to Nicodemus Boffin. He remained the same unaffected and lovable man he had been in the past when he was foreman in charge of the dust heaps. They were singularly happy, were Mr. and Mrs. Boffin. Men and women laughed at their oddities but never with malice. Commonplace as they were, there was a sterling worth to them.

Eager to atone for his lack of schooling, Mr. Boffin hired Silas Wegg, wooden-legged vendor of sweets and ballads, to read aloud Gibbon's story of Rome. His eyes popped with astonishment as Wegg plowed stolidly ahead, making havoc of Roman names. "I didn't think there was half so many Scarcers in print," Mr. Boffin muttered sagely.

He acquired, too, a ward and a secretary. Bella Wilfer had been named in the Harmon will as the son's future bride. Her blighted hopes so troubled Mr. Boffin that he installed her in his home, treating her like a beloved daughter. And soon after John Harmon disappeared there came into London a mysterious John Rokesmith, who obtained the position of secretary. A secretive man was John Rokesmith, unwilling to speak of his past.

Rogue Riderhood, former partner and now sworn enemy to Jesse Hexam, set off suspicions that Hexam had murdered John Harmon and the law trailed the vulture of the Thames. It found Jesse dangling behind his boat as so many had dangled there before, swept overboard and caught in his rope. Eugene Wrayburn was one of the trailers, and again he looked into the clear eyes of Lizzie Hexam.

Lizzie found refuge with Fanny Cleaver, better known as the Doll's Dressmaker, a fantastic little creature with a tongue as sharp as the needle she so incessantly plied. Intruding into Lizzie's life came the love of Bradley Headstone, a morose man, and of Eugene Wrayburn, conscious that she was too far below him for marriage, unwilling to do her harm, and yet unable to resist his longing to be near her.

Rejected, Bradley Headstone vowed vengeance upon the man whom he believed responsible. In the Boffin home, too, unhappiness was brooding. Bella Wilfer, her head turned by wealth, remembering poverty at home, set her heart upon wedding a rich man and discouraged John Rokesmith. The secretary had other troubles. He was trying to put together the past. He recalled a voyage, a ship upon which he was known as John Harmon. He remembered coming ashore and going with a mate to the house of Rogue Riderhood. Somewhere was a room where he drank coffee. Then stupefaction, with gleams of memory concerned with a fight, a slide, cold water swirling about him, a rescue and a decision to test Bella by taking another name. After that the discovery of the mate's body, mistaken for that of John Harmon.

Suddenly Mr. Boffin seemed to lose his amiability. He was gruff with his secretary; he turned to stories about misers. "The more I save, the more you shall have," he said to Bella, but she did not like the cunning look in his eyes. Nor was Silas Wegg aloof from the lust for money. He cast covetous eyes upon the mounds that had made Mr. Boffin "the Golden Dustman." He explored their lowlands and their summits, poking about for treasure. Perhaps there might be another will. He did find a later Harmon will and cherished it as a weapon wherewith he would bleed his benefactor.

Strong claims for its easy riding qualities are made for a new automobile the suspension springs of which extend 15 inches in front of and behind the axles instead of being confined to the wheel base area.

For five years Jack, a yellow cur, has kept a lonely watch at the grave of his master, John Dindore, at Hamburg, Pa., leaving only long enough to obtain food in the neighborhood each day. Recently he was found dead on the grave, having perished in a blizzard.

Not Many Pieces Left. Mrs. Smart—But if your laundress charges you by the piece, it must be rather expensive. Mrs. Wise—Oh! no. She loses so many pieces that her bills are never high.

No Strategic Retreating. "Did you ever think of declining to run for another term?" "Never," replied Senator Sorghum. "It has always looked as if I had a good enough show to be elected; I warrant me in sticking to the finish."

Lizzie Hexam, frightened by her lovers, disappeared. Neither Headstone nor Eugene could trace her. But Headstone fancied that Eugene would find her and for weeks he trailed his rival. Eugene was aware of this morose figure that was never far behind him, and he took an implicit delight in roaming after nightfall through all the four quarters of London.

At the same time, matters were approaching a climax with the Boffins. Silas Wegg was preparing his trap; Mr. Boffin was dally growing more surly. At last he blazed forth and discharged John Rokesmith for aspiring to the hand of Bella to secure the Harmon fortune. But Bella took the part of the dismissed secretary and cried bitterly as she recalled the lovable Mr. Boffin now transformed into this terrible monster of greed. She sought again the poverty of her childhood home. It did not take John Rokesmith long to find her and the cherub Mr. Wilfer felt happily faint when he saw his Bella's head and what seemed a natural resting-place upon John's breast.

Meanwhile Eugene had found Lizzie's hiding place, near Plashwater Weir Mill Lock. Eugene rowed up the river to the hamlet, but did not notice the interested lock-keeper who swung open the gates for him. Nor did he know that a man dressed like the lock-keeper was near, watching him with baleful eyes. The latter was Bradley Headstone; the gate-keeper was Rogue Riderhood, who was known to hate Eugene. Riderhood puzzled more than a little when he saw Headstone, with murder in his eyes, in clothes precisely like his own.

Eugene walked at nightfall with Lizzie by the banks of the river. Headstone could not know that Lizzie begged Eugene to go away, but he saw their lips meet. A shadowy figure kept close to Eugene after that until something seemed suddenly to crash in his head and the stars and moon reeled in his sight. He closed with his assailant, there was a scuffle and a splash. Lizzie, tormented by her talk, had not gone to her room. She heard the splash and rushed to the river bank. When she saw a face in the river she hurriedly leaped into a boat. No man could have been more skillful with oars. She reached the floating body, caught it by the hair, secured it and screamed for help. Help did not come before she had bound and kissed that face that was so dear to her.

Scarred and marred as he was, Eugene struggled back from the border of death. He did not expect to recover when he asked Lizzie to marry him, but she was as proud of him when she was made his wife as though he had been standing in full strength by her side instead of lying helplessly in bed.

Rogue Riderhood remembered that Headstone had intended him to suffer for the crime. So he announced that he would dog Headstone until he was paid handsomely. Headstone knew that the scoundrel would trail him forever, as he had trailed Eugene. He walked away without a word, with Riderhood at his heels. He stepped out upon the bridge that held back the Thames and then suddenly caught his tormentor with a grip that could not be shaken. They wrestled back and forth on the brink, steadily nearing the edge. Riderhood tried in vain to draw a knife. He fought, he tried to squirm free from that relentless embrace. At last he went over backward with Headstone gripping him. They found the bodies locked together.

In the meantime Silas Wegg tightened his screws upon the hapless Boffin. But the dramatic scene that he had planned did not work out, for there was a later will than the one he had found, giving everything to Mr. Boffin. So Mr. Wegg was suddenly swung out of the house and into a passing scavenger's cart. His wooden leg waded a grating farewell as he passed out of the Boffin house.

Bella Wilfer had become Bella Rokesmith, and there was a wonderful, tiny Bella before she understood Mr. Boffin's strange miserliness. Not till then did she learn that her name was Bella Harmon and that Mr. Boffin had been troubled by her hardness of heart. So he had decided to try her. It was for that reason that he had been so gruff and miserly. He was glad he had done it, for it had proved Bella's worth and given her the man who loved her. And now, although the Harmon fortune had been left by the last will to Mr. Boffin, he resolutely refused to take it. He kept only money enough to live comfortably for the rest of his happy days.

The magnificence of the new home where Bella was to live impressed even her impressive mother, and the cherub father was made John's secretary and released from the numbing life that had been his for many years. But perhaps John and Bella and the Boffins too who were living with them were made happiest by the long visit that they had from Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wrayburn. Eugene was slowly winning his way back to health and the old affected cynicism had departed. He was prouder of his wife from the slums than he was of his own distinguished family and the place in society that had been his.

Multiplication Table Too Hard. Caroline Herschel, the discoverer of eight comets, and the accomplished partner of her brother's astronomical labors, never could remember the multiplication table, and always had to carry a copy of it about with her.

Getting in the Last Word. The Bride's Mother—What's Henry been doing to you now? The Bride—The worst yet. Every time he calls me up on the telephone he says what he wants to and then hangs up the receiver so I can't talk back to him.

No Strategic Retreating. "Did you ever think of declining to run for another term?" "Never," replied Senator Sorghum. "It has always looked as if I had a good enough show to be elected; I warrant me in sticking to the finish."

The Rider. "In speaking of this bill before congress you mention a 'rider.' What is a rider?" "A rider," replied Senator Sorghum. "It is usually like the postscript to a woman's letter—apparently an afterthought, but in reality the most important part of the communication."

Her Loving Notes. "Your wife must be awfully in love with you! She has written to you every day since she has been away." "They are only little notes to tell me to send her something she forgot to put in her trunks."

Disappointed. "So you went into the country to get 'atmosphere?' How did you like it?" "Disappointed. Couldn't find a farmer who had a horse named Dobbin, and never heard one of them say 'By heck!'"

Very Rich. The Governess—I'm afraid your little daughter will never learn to spell. Mrs. Newriche—It won't make any difference. When she grows up she'll have money enough to employ a secretary.

One Burst at a Time. She—How about that present of a sunburst you were going to give me? He—How can I give you a sunburst when the bank's burst?

Of Course! That politician should be fought who dares to boast he can't be bought.

Misunderstanding. Mrs. Wiggs—Ain't it goin' to be awful when the soldiers get back? Mrs. Figs—Whatever do you mean? Mrs. Wigs—Why, they say the boys will all come home demoralized.

How Mean! Mr. Cholly Shallowpate—They say that a little learning is a dangerous thing. Miss Kutting Hintz—Fear not. You're a long ways from the danger signal.

Appropriate Affliction. "That pork dealer has a trouble which is strictly business." "How do you mean?" "He has a sty in his eye."

Unusual Sign. "That man's not normal." "What's the matter with him?" "Told me the other day his kid never said anything worth repeating."

A Back Number. Myrt—Did you see the outfit Mabel wore to the dance last night? It must take a lot of nerve to appear like that. Gert—Well, she did display a good deal of backbone.

Don't Blame Her. Mabel—Gert is dreadfully superstitious, isn't she? Myrt—Oh, indeed, she is. She won't even let a man propose to her in a hammock for fear they will fall out.

A Decided Conservativist. "Father, said the small boy, 'what is an anarchist?'" "An anarchist, my son, is a socialist who has gone from bad to worse."

Unromantic. Miss Romance—Don't you love the long fringed and widespread beauty of the chrysanthemums? Miss Desport—Sure. It reminds me of the heads of the football team.

Getting in the Last Word. The Bride's Mother—What's Henry been doing to you now? The Bride—The worst yet. Every time he calls me up on the telephone he says what he wants to and then hangs up the receiver so I can't talk back to him.

Down in the Cyclone Cellar

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

(© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Perhaps it was because pretty Betty Simpson lived in the cyclone belt that she was of such a tempestuous temperament; perhaps it was simply because she was born that way. At any rate she was mightily tempestuous when any of her deeper emotions were involved. And when her father, stern, morose Henry Simpson, accused her sweetheart of being responsible for the loss of the Simpsons' slowly accumulated Liberty bonds she flared up at once.

"Of course Jim Brown didn't take them," she stormed. "You ought to know him better than that, father!"

"Jim knew I kept them in my desk and that the desk was unlocked," said her father stolidly. "And what does he do when I say something to him about them being gone—he disappears! That proves he took them!"

Betty wrung her hands disconsolately.

"He didn't take them!" she cried. "I just know he didn't!"

She looked around the modestly furnished little living room desperately. If only she had some one to help her! If only her mother hadn't died—she would have understood!

Betty looked at the foolish grin on the face of her senile old grandfather and then at the happy smile on the face of her baby sister. And she sighed deeply. Life was going hard with her. If only she could make her father desist from his expressed purpose.

"Please don't file an affidavit against him! Please don't father!" she cried. "I just know Jim didn't take them. I just know everything will come out all right."

"I've already filed the affidavit," answered her father shortly. "I can't afford to lose all that money. I can't help it if Jim has been your beau."

He turned away heavily. Tears started to Betty's eyes as she looked after him. Her father was stern and hard. Much sorrow and a bitter life had made him cruel. There was no moving him when he had set his mind on anything. What could she do?

That night Betty wrote an impassioned letter to Jim—to an address he had given her before leaving—urging him to come back and prove his innocence. And in this letter, too, she urged him to tell her why he had left, for quite suddenly after her father had partially accused Jim of the theft, he had left the countryside without letting any one, save Betty, know where he was going. And he had not even told Betty why he was going.

It was about a week later that the cyclone visited the spot where Betty lived.

"Cyclone weather!" had been worrying the country folk for some hours before the unmistakable signs of approaching trouble sent the Simpson family scurrying into the cyclone cellar near the home. Even as Betty helped her grandfather down the stairs into the cellar, which had been prepared years before at some little distance from the house, the menacing spiral of the cyclone was visible down the valley.

Betty's father had entered the cellar first, and as Betty pulled the storm door shut and locked it she saw that her father had lighted a lantern and was looking quickly and somewhat fearfully around the cellar. What was wrong?

Betty leaped down the remaining steps of the ladder into the cellar.

"What's the matter?" she cried to her father, who was holding the lantern high above his head.

Once more stern Henry Simpson looked around the small room before replying. Then he gazed fearfully into Betty's eyes.

"Where's the baby?" cried Henry Simpson.

Panic clutched at Betty's heart at this question. She gazed around the room with wild eyes. The baby was nowhere in sight.

"I put the baby down here a half hour ago. She must have climbed out!"

Frantically Betty rushed to the side of the room and leaped upon a box which brought her eyes in line with a little porthole, partially raised above the level of the earth, in which heavy glass formed a lookout. She looked out fearfully.

There, half way between the cellar and the house was the baby, dancing up and down in the gusts of wind which heralded the near approach of the twister. A pair of the grandfather's old overalls, which had been blown from the house, were partially twined about the baby. And only an appallingly short distance away—compared with the speed at which it was coming—was the cyclone.

Betty jumped from the box and ran toward the ladder, crying swiftly to her father as she ran:

"The baby's out there! I'll go get her!"

Just as Betty reached the foot of the ladder a surprising thing happened. The solid earthen wall behind the ladder seemed to stir. Then Betty saw that some painted burlap sacking, which in the dim light had seemed to be earth, was moving. Behind this curtain a new excavation had been made. And from this excavation stepped—Jim Brown!

"You stay here!" cried Jim pushing Betty back. "I'll get the baby!"

Jim climbed the ladder's few steps hastily. As he unlocked the storm door and pushed it open a fierce gust of wind swooped and howled its way into the room. Then Jim leaped out, dropping the door into place again.

Betty rushed to the lookout. She saw Jim run, stooping to the baby. She saw him grab up the baby, overalls and all, and rush back toward the cellar. And she saw trees falling in the path of the advancing cyclone. Would Jim be able to make it?

Betty left the lookout and rushed back to the ladder. Her father was there before her. The door opened. Jim thrust the baby down. Betty caught her little sister with a thankful heart. And then, to her vast astonishment, she heard her father speak.

"Don't come down here, you thief!" cried stern old Henry Simpson. "You ain't fit to associate with decent folks!"

Betty saw her father trying to push Jim away from the storm door and to close it. And in that moment all of Betty's tempestuous nature burst into storm. She put the baby on the floor and hurled herself at her father.

"Oh, you—you!" she gasped, almost inarticulately, as she beat him away with her fists. "He's saved the baby and now—"

She turned from her father and fairly jerked Jim through the door. As she locked the door and breathed a sigh of thankfulness the air was filled with a vast disturbance. The cyclone was roaring above them.

When the wind had quieted somewhat so that Jim could make himself heard he drew Betty and her father close together.

"I thought your nephew, John Simpson, had taken the bonds," said Jim. "I trailed him to Chicago. But he hasn't got them. I don't know who's got them. And when I got back here I heard of that affidavit for my arrest so I hid in here."

"Jim didn't take them!" cried Betty shortly. "Father, you've just got to say you're sorry for what—and after Jim saving the baby!"

Henry Simpson looked first at Jim, then at the baby held tightly now in Betty's arms. As he looked at the baby his stern face softened.

"I must've been out of my head," he mumbled. "So much trouble and then this storm. I—I don't believe you took 'em, Jim!"

He held out his hand to Jim. Jim clasped it tightly.

It was about an hour later when the damage caused by the storm had been inventoried that Betty chanced to look at the old overalls which were still partly draped about the baby. And as she looked she gasped. In the right hip pocket were the missing bonds!

Old Grandfather Simpson grinned at her foolishly as she looked at them in amazement.

"Thought I better put 'em in a safe place," said her grandfather. "I swan I clean forgot all about 'em!"

"Oh, you old dear!" cried Betty suddenly and tempestuously, as she flung herself at her grandfather and kissed him.

And who, under the circumstances, could blame her for doing so?

Afghan Women Secluded.

The women of Afghanistan are kept in more rigid seclusion and are more closely veiled than the women of any other Moslem land. The Afghan is notoriously jealous of his harem, and few indeed are the men of the outside world who have ever looked on the face of an Afghan woman of the towns. With the desert women, wives and daughters of the nomads, it is different; the Koran permits them to go unveiled.

Like the Arab, the Afghan considers it unnecessary and even unwise that women should learn to read or write. No girls are admitted to the hazaar schools and no mullahs are employed to teach them, and Afghanistan knows nothing of women teachers.

Regiment Proud of Long Service.

The Third Infantry, the oldest regiment of our army, which dates from 1784, has developed its arms to show its early service in Mexico. One interesting device used by this regiment is a baton crossed with an oldtime bayonet back of the shield. The baton which figures prominently in the regiment's history was made from the flagstaff of the capitol of the City of Mexico and was taken when the city was captured. It is still one of the most highly prized possessions of the regiment.

Knife Named for Inventor

Deadly Weapon in Hand-to-Hand Combat Was That Designed by Col. James Bowie.

The bowie knife took its name from that of its inventor, Col. James Bowie, an American soldier, born in Burke county, Georgia, about 1790, who was killed at Alamo, Tex., March 6, 1836. He became notorious in 1827 from a duel fought near Natchez, Miss., which resulted in a general melee, in the course of which six men were killed and fifteen wounded. During the fight Bowie killed Maj. Norris Wright with a weapon which had been made from a large blacksmith's file or rasp. This weapon he afterward had fashioned by a cutter in Philadelphia into the knife which has since borne his name.

The blade of the bowie knife is from nine to ten inches long, and has only one edge; the back is straight for three-quarters of its length, and then curves toward the edge in a slightly concave sweep, while the edge finishes toward the point in a convex curve. The guard is very small, and the

MANY WIDELY ACCEPTED METHODS OF DISTINGUISHING MUSHROOMS

Two Varieties of the Edible Wild Mushrooms.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Mushrooms and some other fungus growths are highly prized as articles of food by many people. The nutritive value of mushrooms is low, but they may be prepared in various ways which render them delicious. More people doubtless would seek wild mushrooms and other fungi if they were sufficiently informed to distinguish between the edible and the deadly poisonous growths. Some very erratic and dangerous ideas concerning ways of telling the edible from the poisonous growths are altogether too commonly believed. Mushrooms are frequently thought of as edible and toadstools as poisonous. As a matter of fact, the United States Department of Agriculture states, the words "mushroom" and "toadstool" are used indiscriminately and do not indicate whether the plants are edible or poisonous.

Silver Coin Test is Valueless.

A test for poisonous mushrooms often recommended is based on the belief that if a silver coin placed in the utensil in which mushrooms are cooked tarnishes, the mushrooms are poisonous. Absolutely no reliance can be placed on this test, as both poisonous and edible kinds may turn silver dark. Equally baseless is the belief that a mushroom is shown to be edible if the skin can be peeled from the cap readily, because peeling is possible with many poisonous species.

The notion that soaking or boiling poisonous mushrooms in salt water will render them harmless has no foundation, in fact. Some people have thought that the presence of insects on mushrooms is a proof of their edibility. This is a dangerous supposition, because insects infest the most poisonous as well as the best edible species of fungi.

The collector of mushrooms cannot depend upon any simple test. If he intends to use them for food, he must know what he is gathering. It is a comparatively simple matter to learn to recognize a few kinds of deadly mushrooms and certain edible ones. If he will gather only the kinds that are well known to him, a careful collector need not be afraid to gather wild fungi for food. He should not be misled by attractive colors or pleasant odors. In Farmer's Bulletin 798, Some Common and Poisonous Mushrooms, directions for identifying the poisonous and edible kinds are given.

Recipes for Cooking Mushrooms.

According to the views of many persons, mushrooms are best cooked simply, with no seasoning but butter, pepper, and salt. The addition of various other seasonings impairs the delicate mushroom flavor. However, tastes differ, and the opportunity of choice or experiment is afforded by the recipes which follow:

The caps should be carefully washed, gill side down, but peeling is not always necessary and involves a considerable waste of time and loss of flavor. Unless the stems are extremely tough they can be used after being cut into small bits and stewed, or, even if tough, after long boiling they can be run through a sieve and made into a soup or sauce.

Wild mushrooms should be cooked soon after collecting, as they are then preserved much better than if kept uncooked, even in a refrigerator.

Fried Mushrooms.

Beat the yolk of an egg with a tablespoonful of water and season with pepper and salt. Dip each cap in this and then dip into fine cracker crumbs or corn meal. Have butter or cooking oil very hot in a frying pan. Fry slowly on each side for five minutes. A sauce can be made by thickening with flour and adding milk or cream. If desired, serve on toast. A smooth tomato sauce is also excellent.

Mushrooms Baked With Tomatoes.

In a baking dish arrange small round slices of buttered toast; upon each place a rather thin slice of peeled tomato, salted and peppered; upon each slice of tomato place a fine, thick mushroom, gill side up; in the center of each mushroom put a generous piece of butter; season with pepper and salt. Cover the dish and bake in a hot oven for ten minutes; then uncover and bake for an additional 5 to 10 minutes, as the mushrooms appear to require.

Creamed Mushrooms.

Cut the mushrooms into small pieces, stew slowly in butter until tender, add cream or milk, pepper, and salt, and thicken with flour.

Peppers Stuffed With Mushrooms.

Cut the stem end of the peppers and carefully remove all seeds and the white membrane; chop or break the mushrooms into small pieces, season with pepper and salt, press firmly into the peppers, and put a good-sized lump of butter on top of each. The water adhering to the mushrooms after wash-

Make Eggs Go Farther.

To make the beaten egg in which you dip croquettes and so forth go farther, use hot water, beating all the while. The correct proportion is three tablespoonfuls of water to one egg.

Making Light Rolls.

When making light rolls place three dry balls of dough in each muffin pan. When baked they form delicious little savor leaf biscuits to serve at afternoon tea.

ing will furnish sufficient moisture for their cooking.

Arrange the peppers on end in a baking dish, having water with salt, pepper, and butter poured in to the depth of about one inch. Place the dish in a hot oven, cook covered for 15 minutes; then uncover and bake and cook for 10 or 15 minutes longer, or until the peppers are perfectly tender. An addition to the mushrooms of chopped cooked chicken or veal is a pleasing variation.

Mushrooms With Bacon.

Fry the bacon, and on removing it from the frying pan keep it hot; cook the mushrooms on each side in the "fryings" and serve on a platter with the strips of bacon arranged as a border.

Several species are good prepared in this manner, but it is especially well suited to the common cultivated mushroom.

RENEW YOUR WAR ON COMMON HOUSE FLY

Presence of Pests Indicates Insanitary Conditions.

They Are Menace to Health Because They Carry Disease Germs to Exposed Foods—Of Importance to Prevent Breeding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The presence of flies is an indication of uncleanness, insanitary conditions, and improper disposal of substances in which they breed. They are not only annoying; they are actually dangerous to health, because they may carry disease germs to exposed foods.

It is therefore important to know where and how they breed, and to apply such knowledge in combating them. A bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture gives information on this subject. Besides giving directions for ridding the house of flies by the use of screens, fly papers, poisons and flytraps, it lays especial emphasis on the explanation of methods of eliminating breeding places and preventing the breeding of flies. Address the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and a copy of this publication will be sent you free.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Armchairs are being made lower in the back.

Never leave brushes lying or standing on their bristles.

Celery and almonds are often used together for a dainty salad.

Radishes may be cooked until tender and then served au gratin.

Lard may be freshened by cooking fresh sliced potatoes in it.

Bring olive oil to a boil or boil a minute. It will take away the rancid taste.

The day-bed is considered an essential piece of furniture in small apartments.

Macaroni and spaghetti will not boil over when cooking if a bit of fat is put into the water.

Clothes placed in the clothes basket any old way become wrinkled and take much longer to iron than those folded with some care.

A teaspoon of camphor added to a quart of soft water will kill worms in house plants. The plants should be quite dry when it is applied.

Sprinkle asparagus with paprika after putting on toast.

Strawberries should not have the hulls removed until washed and drained.

A good-sized kitchen salt shaker filled with a mixture of salt and pepper saves time in seasoning.

If the curling iron is heated in boiling water it will produce a prettier wave and does not break the hair so much.

In White and a Color

ON FIRST thought, unrelieved white would seem the best wear for hot, midsummer weather—and it is refreshing. It suggests the snow, which, in bleak expanses, seems the coldest-looking thing in nature. Designers, however, have demonstrated that certain shades of color, combined with white, make clothes more convincingly cool looking than all-white and that such combinations have a snap and brilliancy that adds immensely to their attractiveness for hot weather wear.

For blouses, crepe de chine and crepe georgette are the mediums favored, with crepe de chine in the ascendant. It has a cold sheen in white and in the colors used with white and makes blouses and smocks for wear with white skirts that leave nothing to wish for. Smocks or blouses with short peplums are more popular than the regulation waist-length model. Narrow loose girdles made of the material have replaced the girdles with long ends. They cross in front and fasten at each side. The body of the blouse is always of the white crepe and the color is introduced in bands, in embroideries, in beaded designs and by other means.

As an example of cleverness in using white and a color, the blouse pictured is presented. It is made of crepe de chine with elbow sleeves having turned back cuffs. There is a novel collar across the back, suspenders, borders added to the sleeves and pointed pieces set on the back and front, all in the color. The throat is open in a shallow "V."

Concerning Suits for Water Sports

LEAVING out beach suits not intended for real service in the water, and considering only those that are designed for swimming or bathing or water sports, we find they are nearly all made in the two types illustrated here.

Good sense governs in the choice of these suits and it happens that sensible suits prove to be the most attractive ones in this case as in many others. The swimming suit must be strong and at the same time elastic, it must protect against chill and give absolute freedom of action to the swimmer. It hugs the figure but gives to the motion of every muscle, is reinforced where it needs to be, made of pure wool and knitted in firm stitches by machinery. The manufacturers have so perfected it that it holds its shape permanently. By means of color and decorative features accomplished in the knitting—as the introduction of bands or designs in contrasting colors they have added to the attractions of swimming suits. The young woman poised for a plunge, as pictured, is dressed as the swimmer should be. She wears a knitted suit, short stockings, black cloth shoes bound with white braid and a rubberized head covering that fits closely and looks like a bandana tied about the head.

The career of the bathing suit pictured may be less strenuous than that of the swimming suit, but it is nevertheless a sturdy affair which may be found in several different woven fabrics. Flannel, satine, tuffeta silk all present themselves with other woven fabrics as suited to it. It has sufficiently roomy bloomers reaching to the knees and a flaring chemise dress with round neck and no sleeves. White fancy braid finishes the neck and arm's-eye and four rows of it with ornamental motif at the front simulate a girdle. Long stockings and cloth slippers fit this suit for beach wear.

Astronomers' Difficulties.

The astronomer peering through his telescope has to look through 50 turbulent miles of the earth's atmosphere. Even under the best conditions the rays of light which enter his telescope have been more or less deviated in their courses by refraction in passing from one layer of air to another, and in consequence the diffraction pattern of disk and rings, which can be so clearly and beautifully shown in the laboratory, oscillates, trembles and is more or less confused and distorted. Under more ordinary and worse conditions of "seeing" the image is more disturbed and dances about, coming only occasionally to rest, and it is during these favorable intervals alone that close pairs of stars can be seen double.

Fortification.

Host—Look here, old man, my wife wants you to take Miss Piffle in to dinner. She has just written an essay on the "Cosmic Urge," so I advise you to have a couple more cocktails.—Life.

Home Town Helps

NEVER FORGET "HOME TOWN"

However Humble, Sentiment Enshrines Spots in the Hearts of Its Sons and Daughters.

It isn't the fine buildings and the broad streets, the gorgeous homes and spacious gardens that count—it's the sentiment hovering around the spot that marks the "home town" as the best place on earth, writes Florence Webster Long in the Indianapolis Star. If this were not the case, only the big cities would count in the summing up of the earth's worthwhile places. And where is the cross-roads town that hasn't as many boosters as it has residents? Even the secluded homestead way off in a lonely corner of the backwoods looms up largely as the center of the universe. It's a sort of patriotism, it's a brand of native pride, and it's all mixed largely with sentiment without which life wouldn't be worth living anyway.

I can remember long ago visiting a school friend whose glowing accounts of her home had held out the glamor of a glorious prospect. I can see in memory that simple little home circle set amid the humdrum monotony of small village life, and my surprise as I contrasted it with my friend's tales. But now I know that the girl was simply describing things as they seemed to her, softened by distance, hallowed by sentiment, and tinged by the softening influence of a homesickness for the magic spot "home."

LAYING OUT FLOWER GARDEN

Even With Small Space, Much Can Be Accomplished in Making Effective Home Surroundings.

With a long narrow lot there is not much choice in the arrangement of borders and beds, but the effect will be more pleasing if the center is left in the grass, and have flower borders along the sides, while at the far end there might be a border of flowering shrubs, the shrubs starting in the corners of the side borders and running across the end of the lot, the shrub border being widest in the middle. By having a nice curve to this border which narrows down very much near the corners an effect will be obtained of recesses or alcoves, which will be more pleasing than if it were a straight line.

It is sometimes a good plan if it works in with the back of the house to have a strip of grass close to the house where the ground is raised above the main part of the lot, so one can sit there and look down on the garden, but if there is a back veranda it will answer. Instead of breaking the center of the garden up with paths, it would be better to have one leading from the house to each side border, and if a nice curve is given these will look pleasing.—Housewife.

Town-Planning Pays.

Town planning is the study and analysis of all the different activities which go to make up the complex organism of a city, the analysis of the city's establishment, its growth and its future demands, with the resultant laying out of plans, laws, regulations, etc., which will insofar as practicable, correct bad conditions, remove obstacles and will allow the future growth of all activities along well thought out and carefully studied lines, in such a way that each will bear proper relation to the other, function properly within itself and as a whole. Tersely, city planning is the means of bringing order out of chaos, and safeguarding the future from a recurrence of improper conditions.

Health of Trees.

Just as with folks, health is of the utmost importance in shade trees, and no agency is more potent in marring the appearance of these trees than insects, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington. A defoliated or otherwise bedraggled shade tree is not only worse than none at all, but, as a result of insect injury, it is a menace to the health or life of similar trees in the neighborhood.

Ways of controlling most of the injurious shade-tree insects are told in Farmers' Bulletin 1169. Send for it.

City Planning in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles has a city planning commission of 51 members, appointed by the city council, who serve three years each, without compensation, 17 retiring each year. From this membership an executive committee of nine is appointed, one for the head of each of the eight divisions and one who acts as president of the commission and presiding officer of the executive committee.

Good Flowers to Plant.

The nine best annuals for planting may be listed as the snap-dragon, cosmos, calendula, cornflower, nigella, aster, clarkia and petunia; while for the perennials Japanese iris, phlox, chrysanthemum, oriental poppies, larkspur, Canterbury bell, hollyhocks, peony and columbine are very satisfactory.

To Remove Tar or Grease.

A very sure and safe way to remove tar or any such greasy stains from colored ginghams is to rub well into the spots fresh lard. Let it lie several hours; then wash in warm soapuds. All spots will come out easily.

Progress of Society.

There are no fixed and permanent social conditions, because society is slowly moving toward a noble ordering of its duties and its rights.—Hamilton Wright Mable.

AN ORDINANCE
AN ORDINANCE AUTHORIZING THE CONSTRUCTION OF A JETTY ALONG THE OCEAN FRONT IN THE BOROUGH OF BARNEGAT CITY FOR THE PROTECTION OF BEACH FRONT PROPERTY AND MAKING THE NECESSARY APPROPRIATION TO PAY THE COST THEREOF.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF THE BOROUGH OF BARNEGAT CITY:
1. That a jetty or jetties be constructed on the ocean front of said Borough between 4th and 6th Streets, or at such other points along said ocean front as the exigencies of the situation may require, for the protection of property in said Borough from damage by encroachment of the ocean and that said jetty or jetties be constructed in accordance with or similar in design to the jetties already constructed in said Borough according to plans, specifications and designs satisfactory to and to be approved by Borough Council, and that said jetty or jetties be constructed at the cost and expense of said Borough.
2. That there is hereby appropriated the sum of $5,000 to pay the cost and expense of said proposed work, said sum, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be raised by the issuance and sale of an emergency note or notes of said Borough, in such sum or sums, not exceeding in the aggregate the sum of $5,000, as the Mayor and Council shall hereafter, by appropriate resolutions and proceedings, decide.
This ordinance shall take effect immediately upon its passage, approval and publication as required by law.

NOTICE
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that it is the intention of the Mayor and Council of the Borough of Barnegat City to consider the undertaking of the construction of a jetty along the ocean front between 4th and 6th Streets in said Borough for the protection of the beach front property from damage by the sea. Said improvement to be made at the cost of the Borough at large.

NOTICE IS HEREBY FURTHER GIVEN that an ordinance providing for said improvement, of which the foregoing is a true copy, was introduced at a regular meeting of Borough Council held on the 17th day of June, A. D. 1921, and that at a regular meeting of said Council to be held at the Council Chambers in the Borough of Barnegat City on the 5th day of July, A. D. 1921, at Seven o'clock P. M., Council will consider the undertaking of said improvement and the final passage of said ordinance and at that time and place all persons whose lands may be affected by such improvement or who may be interested therein will be given an opportunity to be heard.
Dated June 18th, 1921.
ALIDA R. MYERS,
Borough Clerk.

NOTICE
Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received by The Board of Chosen Freeholders of Ocean County, for the construction of Jackson's Mills—Van Viseville road in the County of Ocean, with a gravel surface upon an earth foundation; estimated amount of surface pavement required is 35,000 square yards, of foundation 5911 cu. yds. and opened and read in public at Court House, Toms River, N. J. on July 5th, 1921 at 12 o'clock M. Drawings, specifications and forms of bid, contract and bond for the proposed work, prepared by J. M. Abbott, County Engineer, and approved by the State Highway Commission, have been filed in the office of said Engineer at Toms River, N. J. and may be inspected by prospective bidders during business hours. Bidders will be furnished with a copy of the specifications and blue prints of the drawings by the engineer on proper notice and payment of cost of preparation. Bids must be made on the standard proposal forms in the manner designated therein and required by the specifications, must be enclosed in sealed envelopes, bearing the name and address of the bidder and name of road on the outside, and addressed to The Board of Chosen Freeholders of Ocean County and must be accompanied by a certified check for not less than 10 per cent. of the amount bid, provided said check shall not be less than $500 or more than $20,000, and be delivered at the place and on the hour above named. The standard proposal form is attached to the specifications, copies of which will be furnished on application to engineers in charge.

By order of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Ocean County.
D. O. PARKER,
Clerk.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

ANNOUNCEMENT
Mr. Edsel B. Ford, President of the Ford Motor Company, gives out the following statement:

"Another reduction has been made in the list price of all types of Ford cars and the Ford truck to take effect immediately. The list prices, f. o. b. Detroit, are now as follows:
TOURING CAR . . . $415 00
RUNABOUT . . . 370 00
COUPE . . . 695 00
SEDAN . . . 760 00
CHASSIS . . . 345 00
TRUCK-CHASSIS . . . 495 00
TRACTOR . . . 625 00

The big reductions last fall were made in anticipation of low material costs which we are now getting the benefit of, and this fact together with increased manufacturing efficiency and the unprecedented demand for Ford cars, particularly during the past three months permitting maximum production, have made another price reduction possible immediately.

Ford business for April and May 1921 was greater by 56,633 cars and trucks than for the same two months in 1920; in fact, the demand has been even greater than the supply, so that our output has been limited, not by unfilled orders but by manufacturing facilities.

During May we produced 101,424 Ford cars and trucks for sale in the United States alone—the biggest month in the history of our company—and our factories and assembly plants are now working on a 4000 car daily schedule for June.

The FORDSON Tractor is still being sold at less than the cost to produce on account of the recent big price reductions, and it is impossible, therefore, to make any further cut in the price of the Tractor.

Can you afford to go without a car any longer when Fords are selling at these new low prices? There is no reason now why you should delay purchasing a Ford car, Ford truck, or Fordson tractor. We will gladly advise you concerning the delivery of a Fordson tractor or the particular type of car in which you are interested. Just phone us or drop us a card.
