in September. Thus the harvest will begin in about two weeks. Many of the berries are full grown and are coloring up now. This is particularly true of the early blacks.

Some growers say that there will not be quite as many berries this year as last in South Jersey. They put the loss on the late June frosts. At that time many growers did not know that their berries had been hurt, and afterwards the vines flowered as usual, showing a heavy bloom, but the fruit did not set on the new wood that had been touched by the frosts. Some growers are now getting their bogs and the pickers' quarters in shape for harvest time.

offers to home seekers opportunities that cannot be secured elsewhere. The thousands of farmers from the United States who have accepted Canada's generous offer to settle on FREE homesteads or buy farm land in her provinces have been well repaid by bountiful crops. There is still available on easy terms Fertile Land at $15 to $30 an Acre—land similar to that which through many years has yielded from 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre—oats, barley and flax also in great abundance, while raising hogs, cattle, sheep and pigs is equally profitable. Hundreds of farmers in Western Canada have raised crops in a single season worth more than the whole cost of their land. With such success comes prosperity, independence, good homes and all the comforts and conveniences which make life worth living. Farm Gardens, Poultry, Dairying are sources of income second only to grain growing and stock raising. CONDENSED CLASSICS

ANNA KARENINA

By LEO N. TOLSTOY

Condensation by Mrs. Mary F. Russ, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

Count Leo Tolstoy was born in 1828 at Yasnaya Polyana, near Tula, the family estate that has become famous throughout the world as the residence of the great novelist, reformer and dreamer. He died in 1910 at a little railroad station, which he had reached on a journey, the object of which was to let him end his days in solitude. But a whole world was looking on. At first he studied oriental languages, then law, and finally became a soldier, taking part in the Crimean campaign. His long series of writings began with "Childhood," "Boyhood," "The Morning of a Landed Proprietor," and articles on his experiences as a soldier. His realism was already a dominant note, as well as his power to see through shams and conventions. He soon retired from the army and began his life of service to the peasants on his estate at his own estate, "War and Peace" appeared in 1869-70, and the great novel "Anna Karenina," 1875-76. Already he was dealing with the mighty problems of life and humanity, and trying to solve them in whatever way seemed to him right, no matter what answer the world had given to them. "My Religion," "The Kreutzer Sonata," "Resurrection," and perhaps the best known books, which have been translated into many languages, including two editions published in America, of some two dozen volumes each, one by Norman Haskell Dole and others, one by Prof. Leo Wiener. A whole library of books has been written about him in many languages.

Tolstoy is one of the unique figures in the history of the world. Seer, prophet, fearless seeker after truth, no matter where the quest might lead, he drew to himself the respectful attention of all thinking people, no matter how divergent their thoughts from his. His belief that Christianity is a faith to be actually lived by and his championship of the doctrine of non-resistance are the outstanding points of a thought which covered all humanity.

"AND... Anna had friendly relations with the society... which with one hand lays fast hold on the court lest it fall absolutely into the demi-monde which its members affect to despise, but whose tastes are precisely similar."

Anna Karenina's intimates were of this circle in St. Petersburg society. Practically forced into a loveless marriage with Alexsei Karenin, twenty years her senior, Anna had been a faithful wife for eight years. Karenin held a high official position and everything in his life was subordinated to his career. He was a tireless worker and such social hours as he enjoyed were spent in circles best suited to his advancement, but his charming and adaptable wife made friends in all quarters. While a man of admirable character, Karenin had an utterly unlovable personality. He was very calm, cool, absolutely just, but love—warm, human love—was a stranger in his household. All the affection of Anna Karenina's heart was lavished on her seven-year-old son, Serozha, who adored his mother.

Into this setting, so cunningly fashioned for it, stepped Trouble, in the most attractive person of Alexsei Vronsky.

In the city of Moscow lived Anna's brother, Stepan Oblonsky, Stepan, lovable and popular, had a wife, children, a salaried official position and some money, but being always in debt, this fact and his little "affaires du coeur" kept him just sufficiently worried to enable him to really enjoy life.

While on a visit to Moscow Anna Karenina met Vronsky.

Count Vronsky was rich, handsome, loved his regiment and his horses, and was voted a "capital good fellow." He had appeared in Moscow that winter and had been attracted slightly to Stepan's sister-in-law, Kitty. Kitty was a pretty and popular debutante, daughter of Prince Scherbatsky of the old nobility. Among many admirers, she was sure of two serious suitors. One was Vronsky, the other Levin.

Konstantin Levin was also of the old Muscovite nobility and had known Kitty all her life. As his mother had died in his babyhood, the family life of the Scherbatskys had appealed to him strongly. He was now thirty-two and, although feeling unworthy of Kitty, was determined to offer himself to her. He was really a splendid match. He had a magnificent country estate of eighty-one hundred acres, plenty of money and his share of masculine attractions. He was a thinker, always immersed in the deepest problems concerning the world, everything in it, on it and beyond it. He had been brought up in the orthodox faith, but, since attaining manhood, had been assailed with all kinds of doubts, until now he was practically an unbeliever. "He could not believe; he was also equally unable to disbelieve." After completing his university course he spent most of his time on his great estate, wrestling with his problems of agriculture and peasant labor. He came into Moscow on occasions and dipped into his social life, but his own life was so clean and simple that he had little patience with the dissipations of his town friends.

Kitty's parents had many quarrels over her prospects. Her mother favored the brilliant Vronsky; her father said "Levin was worth a thousand men." Kitty, herself, had set her heart on Vronsky, although fond of Levin. In due time she experienced the pining pain of refusing Levin, but, to her chagrin and deep humiliation, the proposal from Vronsky did not materialize. The latter did not dream that his attentions to her were regarded seriously. Poor Kitty met with her crushing disappointment at a large ball when, instead of choosing her as his mazurka partner, Vronsky led out—Madame Karenina!

In spite of their endeavors to hide the magic glow which enveloped them it was obvious to Kitty, as to others, that Anna and Vronsky had both been touched by the same flaming torch.

Anna Karenina had met her man. She knew it. She was afraid. Her customary serenity deserted her so completely that she left for St. Petersburg the next day, cutting short her visit. The calm routine of her daily life took on a new and attractive aspect; she longed to see her son—even her husband. But—Vronsky took the same train to St. Petersburg.

They met constantly in society. Anna called all the forces of reason, prudence, pride, to her aid, but she could not conceal the rapture she felt in Vronsky's presence. Her intimates became extremely interested. This was, indeed, an affair after their own hearts. According to their code, anything was proper so long as outward conventions were observed. Karenin coolly pointed out the danger of her course. He assured her he looked upon jealousy "as a humiliating and wounding sentiment." (Anna would have respected some truculent conversation.) His spineless attitude enraged her and by the end of a year she and Vronsky had become all in all to each other. They had but one object in life—to be together.

Karenin waited for the blow to fall. It was finally accomplished by Anna's public exhibition of emotion when Vronsky met with a racing accident. Upon being upbraided by her husband, she confessed her love for Vronsky. Mingled with the pain, Karenin felt a sense of relief. He immediately began to plan on getting out of the mud without being splashed. He considered duelling, divorce, separation. Being afraid of a pistol, he concluded that his services to the government were too valuable for him to risk his life. The scandal of a divorce might react against himself and a separation would throw Anna into Vronsky's arms. The latter was the last thing he wanted. It would not punish Anna. His decision was to allow her to remain in his home—perhaps resume their old relations. He knew this would make her most unhappy. His justification for this attitude was its religious significance.

In the meantime, Levin was trying to forget Kitty by devoting himself to work. He became much interested in uplifting his peasants, who did not appreciate his efforts. He reached the conclusion that they had found the way to happiness, but one glimpse of Kitty showed him his error and stirred up his old feeling for her. Kitty's health had so failed after her disappointment in Vronsky that she had been sent abroad to take a cure. Now, having been restored to health and having a new outlook on life, she realized that it was Levin whom she really loved and when he again asked for her hand she gladly consented.

According to Karenin's decision, Anna still had her place as mistress of his household. Karenin was aware that she and Vronsky still maintained their relations, but could do nothing about it. In time Anna gave birth to a daughter and was thought to be dying. Karenin's conduct was magnanimous, even toward Vronsky's baby. Vronsky attempted suicide through sheer humiliation. But Anna recovered, which Karenin had not counted on, and with her returning health came the conviction that Vronsky was the light of life to her. She became so unhappy that, in a moment of weakness, Karenin was prevailed upon to consent to divorce, even to take the blame and give her the boy. This generosity she could not accept and, with Vronsky and her baby, left her husband's home and her son, on that inevitably fatal journey of love without the law.

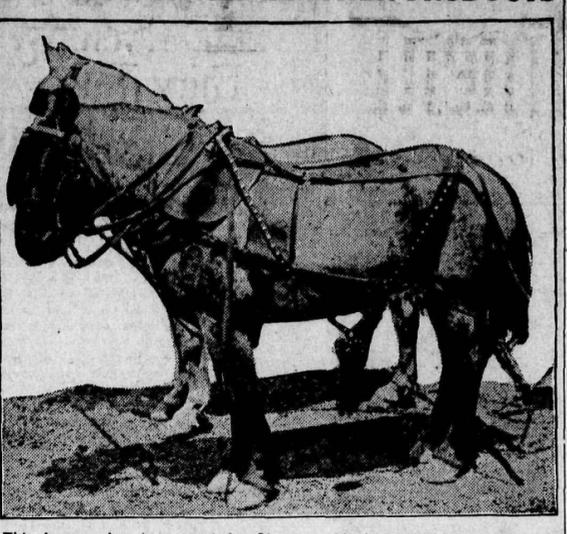

They went abroad and at first were radiantly happy. Then Vronsky tired of the aimless life. They returned to Russia and settled in the country. Anna's position became so unbearable to Vronsky, who adored her, that he finally urged her to appeal to Karenin for a divorce. When Karenin refused, owing to various circumstances, matters grew worse than ever. Anna could not go into society, so became introspective. Without cause, she grew very jealous of Vronsky. She took to morphine as a sleeping potion. Suicide—under the rushing wheels of a railroad train—was Anna Karenina's way out.

Vronsky's grief was overwhelming. After many weeks of illness, he organized a squadron of cavalry and entered the Serbian war. Konstantin Levin found his happiness with his wife and small son, and found that his old faith had lived in his heart, although hidden, when an old peasant explained why a certain man was good in the words "he lives for his soul, he remembers God."

SUITABLE CARE WILL LENGTHEN LIFE OF ALL LEATHER PRODUCTS

This harness has been used for 34 years. It has been kept clean and oiled frequently with neat's-foot oil. As a result it shows no signs of deterioration and should last 20 years longer. Proper selection and care did it.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is poor business to neglect the care of leather. Every pair of shoes, every machine belt, piece of harness, or other leather product on the farm that is allowed to go to waste or not made to yield its full service must be needlessly replaced, thus adding unnecessary expense to the farm, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. On many farms a set of harness lasts less than ten years. Where eight or ten horses are kept this means one new set of harness every year. The department has received many reports, especially from Southern states, showing that harness lasts only from two to five years. But good harness, properly cared for, will last 20 years or more. In every neighborhood there are cases where farmers are cutting their harness bills in half by giving the leather a cleaning and oiling occasionally.

Fifty million pairs of shoes could be saved annually if the American people kept their footwear in repair, the specialists say. As a nation we buy some 300,000,000 pairs of shoes a year, but if each individual cared for his shoes properly the needs could be supplied by 250,000,000 pairs. The wasting of a single shoe a year by each person in the United States would cost the country at least $250,000,000 annually at present prices of shoes.

Any leather improperly used and neglected will deteriorate rapidly. Belts for driving machinery, for example, often become impaired, if not useless, within a few years even on straight drives, but when they are kept clean and oiled they will last from ten to thirty years.

Selecting and Caring for Harness. Harness that is too light or of poor quality cannot give years of service. In selecting harness, it is more economical to get a set that is too heavy than one which is too light for the work required. Make sure especially that the reins, breeching, hockback straps, tugs or traces, bellybands, and yoke straps are strong. A runaway team cannot be controlled with weak reins, nor will weak tugs and straps stand heavy work. No portion of the harness should show cracks on the grain side when the leather is sharply bent.

Harness should be washed and oiled when it becomes dirty or extremely dry. For washing, use tepid water, a neutral soap, such as castile or white toilet soap, and a sponge or fairly stiff brush. Hardened grease is very conveniently removed by scraping with

HELPING OUT SHORT PASTURE IN SUMMER

Stock Raisers Face Inconvenience and Stock Loss.

There is Only One Remedy Where Vast Herds Are Kept and That is to Practice System of Deferred and Rotation Grazing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Stock raisers, especially in the Southwest, often, at this season of the year, face much inconvenience and probable loss of cattle through the shortage of pastures. In other sections, where smaller herds and areas are involved, the summer pasture situation can be met in various ways, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Among the ways are the sowing of catch crops for summer forage or temporary pastures. But, with ranges running into thousands of acres, with vast herds grazing, there is only one remedy and that is to put into practice a system of deferred and rotation grazing.

Such a system will necessitate the division of the range into separate pastures, keeping the cattle off of one pasture each year until the seeds of the native grasses are mature, at which time cattle may be turned to graze. In this manner the growth of grass is utilized and the grass seeds are trampled into the soil, which is necessary to germination. By systematic rotation each pasture may be allowed to reseed once in each three to five years, as desired. Where ranges are heavily stocked in the beginning of such a system, it may be necessary to transfer a part of the herd to other ranges, but the ultimate result will be an increase in the carrying capacity of the range, as has been shown in various experiences in the Southwest. Overstocking should be avoided in every instance.

SUNFLOWER SILAGE FAVORED

Found to Make Larger Tonnage Than Grain Sorghums or Corn at Oklahoma Station.

Sunflowers have been grown at the Oklahoma experiment station for the last two years for silage. It has been found that they make a larger tonnage than the grain sorghums or corn. Being very early they mature ahead of the usual droughts. This year the sunflowers were harvested the last of June. In feeding trials with kafir silage, the steers fed on sunflower silage made equally as good gains. No attempt was made to save any seed. Sunflowers are grown on some farms for their seed, which is fed to poultry. Little or no seed is marketed in the state, not enough to determine a price or establish a market for them.

WASHING SPINACH NOT GOOD

Practice Found to Have Unfavorable Effect on Keeping Qualities and Flavor.

Washing spinach before shipment has been found to have an unfavorable effect on its keeping qualities. Unwashed spinach, it is said, showed under test practically no soft rot, while washed spinach showed 5.5 per cent. Three days later the washed spinach developed 24.8 per cent rot, while the unwashed developed only 5.7 per cent, it was found.

MANAGEMENT OF BROOD SOWS

Bringing Them Up in Good Flesh Before Breeding Season is Most Important Factor.

One of the most important factors in brood sow management is that of bringing them up to good flesh condition before the breeding season and furnishing them with an abundance of blood, bone and muscle-building feeds after they are safe with pig. Liberal rations of suitable feedstuffs are needed to develop the unborn pigs and maintain the body vigor of the sow.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE LIFE

A Dangerous Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Afton, Tenn.—"I want other suffering women to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. During the Change of Life I was in bed for eight months and had two good doctors treating me but they did me no good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and in a short time I felt better. I had all kinds of bad spells, but they all left me. Now when I feel weak and nervous I take the Vegetable Compound and it always does me good. I wish all women would try it during the Change of Life for I know it will do them good. If you think it will induce some one to try the Vegetable Compound you may publish this letter."—Mrs. A. KELLER, Afton, Tenn.

Mrs. Mary Lister of Adrian, Mich., adds her testimony to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"It is with pleasure that I write to you thanking you for what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was passing through the Change of Life and had a displacement and weakness so that I could not stand on my feet and other annoying symptoms. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the first bottle helped me, so I got more. It cured me and I am now doing my household work. Your medicine is certainly woman's friend and you may use this testimonial as you choose."—Mrs. MARY LISTER, 608 Frank Street, Adrian, Mich.

It is said that middle age is the most trying period in a woman's life, and owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand passes through this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying symptoms. Those mothering spells, the dreadful hot flashes that send the blood rushing to the head until it seems as though it would burst, and the faint feeling that follows, as if the heart were going to stop, those sinking or dizzy spells are all symptoms of a nervous condition, and indicate the need for a special medicine.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine especially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It acts in such a manner as to build up the weakened nervous system and enables a woman to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative and often prevents serious troubles.

"Never mind the plot," said the author. "You know everybody skins and jumps about in a book. Well, I've just picked out the places they jump to, and put 'em all in the first two chapters."

With a cry of joy the publisher embraced the author and threw him out the window delightedly.

WAS THE NEIGHBOR'S CHICKEN

Incident That Was Embarrassing, Although It Also Had an Amusing Side to It.

Some years ago, while living in the suburbs, we kept a few chickens; our neighbors also had chickens. After the garden season was over we let them run, as did our neighbors. In this way I suppose they got more or less mixed.

One day I decided to have a chicken for dinner, and, not liking to kill it myself—my husband being away—I asked our neighbor if he would kill it for me. He kindly consented, so I brought out the particular fowl I had selected. He killed it, and I thanked him and proceeded to prepare it for dinner.

When dinner was over I went out to feed the chickens. What was my surprise to find among them the fowl I thought I had just eaten. It was my neighbor's chicken I had asked him to kill for me.

Of course, I lost no time in making apologies—and also insisted that they take ours instead, and they had a good laugh at my expense.

A Courteous Formality. "I have sent word to my constituents that I will welcome advice at any time," remarked Senator Sorghum.

"But you'll get so much you can't remember it."

"All I am saying is that I will give it a polite welcome. I'm not promising to stay awake and listen."

If a woman could retain her beauty forever she would get along without brains.

POSSIBLY HER LAST CHANCE

At All Events, the Object of His Affections Perfectly Agreed With Her Fiance.

For several minutes the young man did not speak. His heart was too full. It was enough for him to know that this glorious creature loved him; that she had promised to share his fate.

With a new and delightful sense of ownership he feasted his eyes once more upon her beauty, and as he realized that henceforth it would be his privilege to provide for her welfare and happiness, he could have almost wept with joy.

His good fortune seemed incredible. Finally he whispered tenderly: "How did it ever happen, darling, that such a bright, shining angel as yourself fell in love with a dull, stupid fellow like me?"

"Goodness knows," she murmured absently; "I must have a screw loose somewhere."

Y. W. C. A. in Constantinople.

In the presence of a large number of distinguished guests both in political and educational circles, a new service center was opened recently in Stamboul, the old city of Constantinople, by the Y. W. C. A. Speeches were made in both English and Turkish. The house and garden obtained for the center are both attractive and well adapted to their new use, as well as conveniently situated. Another meeting and recreation place which the Y. W. C. A. has provided for Constantinople girls is a spacious garden on the beautiful sea of Marmora. It has been rented from a wealthy pasha to serve as a summer camp.

A Celebrity Arrives. "Great excitement in the local room."

"What's happened?" "A beautiful woman has just shot a married man who wasn't married to her. The city editor has issued orders to get all her photographs available, from her babyhood to the one taken yesterday, and two men have been sent to arrange for exclusive publication of her diary. He has also called up a friend who is in the motion-picture business who is on the lookout for new stars."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

The materials of action are variable, but the use we make of them should be constant.—Epictetus.

IT IS just as important for a woman to have regard for the rules of good form in the transaction of her business affairs as in matters purely social. Sometimes a woman who is irreproachably correct in all social conduct, and who is courteous and good breeding personified in her social relations, is careless of rules of courtesy and good breeding in her business transactions. In a small town especially, such duplicity of conduct is sure to lead to unpopularity. What good is it if a woman is charming in her club, if she is discourteous to Mrs. Smith's husband, who is cashier in her bank, or what good can it do to be punctilious in all her dealings with Mrs. Brown if she neglects to pay what she owes to Mr. Brown, who runs the grocery store.

Remember then that when doing any sort of business with any sort of person, you should begin the transaction with a courteous "good morning."

If you ask a favor of a tradesman or anyone with whom you do business, do not fail to let him know that you regard it as such.

If you are not going to be able to pay your bills on the first of the month, do the courteous consideration thing about it. Go to the grocer, or butcher, or doctor, or dentist, and tell him that you find it impossible or inconvenient to do so, and ask him for the favor of extended credit. Do not simply neglect payment and then pretend when you do pay that it is simply a matter of carelessness or forgetfulness on your part.

If a tradesman is courteous enough to remember your name in doing business and addresses you by it, do not forget that it is just as considerate if you remember his name likewise.

Remember that it is just as inconsiderate to ask your grocer to make a special trip of his delivery wagon because you have carelessly forgotten to give your order till afternoon, as it is to ask a neighbor to put herself out to do some favor for you. If the grocer does accommodate you, then you should express your appreciation with just as much courtesy as though the transaction was one of a social sort instead of purely business.

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"THE NEWS ARE."

THERE are certain words in English which are seemingly plural in meaning because they are plural in form, ending in "s." But they are really singular in meaning, and therefore they should take the singular verb, not the plural, although the proper use may seem incorrect. Among such words are "news," "politics," "economics." One should not say, for example, "The news concerning the war are good"; "politics, when properly conducted, are a good pursuit for a citizen"; "economics have been the dismal science." In all of these cases, use the singular verb.

There are, however, certain words ending in "s" concerning which there is doubt. Grammarians differ frequently concerning the proper verbs to be employed with such nouns as "headquarters" and "aims." "The general's headquarters were (or was) at Richmond," we may say; "the aims given to the poor family are (or is) not sufficient for its maintenance." "Means" may be either singular or plural, accordingly as the means is or are singular or plural.

ELIZABETH.

ELIZABETH is a holy name and has a devious origin, it likewise has as many derivatives, contractions and diminutives as Mary.

Going back to early biblical times we find that the wife of Aaron possessed a name popular at that time, in that it contained a dedication to the Deity. This name was Elisheba, meaning God hath sworn. In the Latin this was called Elizabeth. The mother of John the Baptist bore this name and her first historical namesake was the Muscovite Princess, Elisivetta, the daughter of Jaroslav, and the object of the romantic love of the famous poet and sea king, Harald, Hardrada of Norway; through her the name became popular in Denmark, whence it crept into Germany.

One of the first Elizabeths in France was Elizabeth Halnault who married Philippe Auguste and in Hungary, Elizabeth, or Erzsébet, as she is called there, won saintly honors which brought her name great prominence in Germany.

Elizabeth W. Godville, whose mother was Haequetta of Luxemburg, was the first English Elizabeth on record. Elizabeth of York is another famous English woman of that name, supposed to be the object of the political courtship of Henry of Richmond, but the most famous of all the English Elizabeths was of course the famous queen whose personality and achievements are immortal in the world's history.

Elizabeth's talismanic gem is the diamond, which is said to give its wearer strength, indomitability and freedom from all danger since, according to an old legend, the diamond absorbs all poisons into itself, thus protecting the one who wears it as an amulet. Tuesday is Elizabeth's lucky day and 3 her lucky number, the lily, signifying innocence, is her flower.

The SANDMAN STORY

BRAVE IKEY DUCK.

IKEY was a young duck, that his mother had a great deal of trouble with, because he ran away every time he found a chance, and as Madam Duck had many ducklings besides her son to look after, Ikey found many chances.

"Some day you will meet Mr. Fox," said his mother, "and then it will be too late to be a good duckling, for Mr. Fox carries off all runaway ducklings."

"But I am not afraid of Mr. Fox," said brave Ikey. "I am going to grow up to be a big, brave duck, like Grandpa Drake, so I cannot be afraid of anything."

"Grandpa Drake would not like to meet Mr. Fox," said Madam Duck, "for Mr. Fox carries off to his cave in the woods big and small ducks."

Ikey Duck did not answer, but waddled along after his sisters and his mother until they were hunting in a puddle for things they liked, and Ikey saw another chance to run away.

Down to the duck pond he waddled and away he swam to a part of the pond where he had never before been.

How little Teddy Bear happened to be sitting under a bush by the pond was never known, but there he was, and Ikey Duck, swimming along, saw his shining eyes and open mouth.

"Ah, Mr. Fox!" said Ikey Duck to himself. "I will show that fellow, he can't scare me."

Right up close to the bank went brave Ikey and began to quack at Teddy Bear, and, of course, Teddy did not move.

"He is afraid of me," said Ikey. "I wish mother could see me now. I am sure she would think I am quite able to take care of myself."

And then brave Ikey opened his bill, snapped at little Teddy Bear, and, tugging at one foot, pulled him into the water. Away he went, with Teddy still held by his foot, skimming over the water.

Madam Duck and her children were at the side of the pond when Ikey swam up by the barnyard.

"What have you found?" asked his mother, her eyes wide open with surprise, while the little ducklings ran up the bank in alarm.

"It is Mr. Fox," said Ikey, letting go of Teddy Bear's foot. "He is afraid of me, mother. I told you I was not afraid of him, and, you see, I am not."

Madam Duck did not know at first just what to do or say, and she stepped back to take a good look at a safe distance.

"It isn't Mr. Fox—I am sure of that," she said, "but what it is I do not know. I will get Mr. Dog. He is very wise and knows about everything."

"That is a toy," said Mr. Dog, when he saw Teddy Bear. "It belongs to plimentary. Perhaps some would feel that way, but we rather enjoy our family name of Booby."

"How did you get that name?" the Fairy asked.

"Oh," said the Solan Goose, "it's a fair enough name. You see at times we act foolishly, and especially so on land when people see us—if they do see us."

"But there were some who saw us, and they saw how foolishly we were behaving, especially on land, as I have told you, and so they gave us the name."

"We quite enjoy it. It gives us a chance to have a nice and foolish and silly old time every once in awhile, just so as to live up to that name."

"We are what is known as swimming birds. You will see that we are three feet long and that we have a six-foot stretch of wings. People talk of a six-foot man, and so we talk of a six-foot pair of wings—from one end of one wing to the other end of the other wing."

"We like white feathers and golden yellow on our heads and black touches. We live along the North American and European coasts and build our nests in rocky places."

"We like a community life—that is many of us live in the same neighborhood. We build our nests of grass and seaweed and the Mrs. Solan Geese lay an egg or two in these nests which hatch out into adorable little Solan Geese."

"We eat fish and catch it by pouncing down upon our prey from our high places. We are very strong fliers, and we go out far from land where it is wild. There are rocks that are named after us."

"Great numbers of us gather together for we're friendly with each other, and some people say that we always return to the home nest, no matter how far we may wander off, and no matter how long we may stay away. And sometimes it is the way we do, too."

"But Fairy, my Solan Goose tummy is empty for want of fish. You'll excuse me if I must leave you."

So the Fairy thanked the Solan Goose for telling her his story.

Trying to Justify Mother.

"Son, why do you knock that tennis ball about with your head?"

"Well, mother told me yesterday I had a bat in my belly."

A Word or Two.

"And," says I, "short is shorter if you add a syllable."

"But," says Sam, "a 'B' will make a road broad."

"And another 't' says Sam, "is all the difference between here and there."

"Funny," says I, "what you can do with letters."

"She sells seashells," says Sam, "always annoys me."

"Sam sawed six slim, sleek, slim, slender saplings," is more difficult for me," says I.

SOLAN GOOSE.

"I am a very large bird," said the Solan Goose to the Fairy who had gone a-calling on some of Mother Nature's children who lived along a rocky sea coast.

"I can see that," said the Fairy. "But I'd like to know all about you that I can. I heard of someone who wanted to hear about a Solan Goose, and so I am going to try to send that person word of what you've told me."

"You will tell me all you can, won't you?" the Fairy asked most politely and in her sweet little way.

"I will do so gladly," said the Solan Goose. "For I was told that a Fairy was coming to see me and that she would wave her wand so that I could understand her language and so that she could understand mine."

"It's a magic wand that you have, isn't it?"

"Yes," said the Fairy. "The Queen of the Fairies lent it to me for this trip, and it will certainly do most wonderful things."

"But do go on with your story, won't you?"

"Ah yes," said the Solan Goose, "without a moment's delay. And pleased I am that I have been asked to tell my story. I didn't think anyone cared to know about the Solan Goose."

"In fact, I wasn't sure that anyone ever asked about me, and now I hear from you that someone especially asked to hear about me."

"Yes, and you said that this person was very impatient for word of the Solan Goose?"

The Fairy nodded her pretty head. "To hear that delights me, simply delights me," said the Solan Goose. "You see how much good your wand is doing? I'm talking my very best talk."

"But to go on with my story for you."

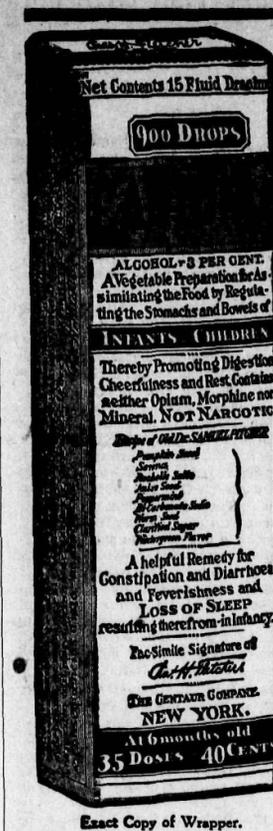

"We have many other family names. The most familiar of all is that of Gannet. Another family name is that of Booby."

"You will think that a strange name and a strange name it is. You may think it is a name that isn't very com-

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcels post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement

RECORD OF PLEASANT HOURS

"Book of Night Life" Will Make Interesting Reading in the Years to Come.

The responsible position of the old family album has been usurped in the homes of an increasing number of modern young persons by the "Book of Night Life." The new volume is almost as large as the old family album. It is supposed to record the amusement wanderings of the young couple who keep it. Every theatrical program is brought home, together with the ticket stubs, and pasted in it, and the date of the performance inscribed at the top of the page.

Below each playgoer writes his and her opinion of the play with such observation as, "snappy music, but not much plot;" "very sad, both of us cried;" "leading man awfully conceited, and other pungent remarks.

At the end of the season the "Book of Night Life" contains a complete record of the couple's evenings in search of amusement. Visitors find it extremely interesting.—Chicago Journal.

"Ah! Then I was a diplomatist last night, dad?"

Crossed Ocean on Raft.

Jeremiah Mullane, last member of the trio that won fame in the summer of 1867 when they arrived in Southampton, England, after a 43-day trip from New York on a life raft equipped with a sail, died recently in Passaic, N. J., at the age of seventy-eight.

Capt. John Mikes and George Miller, both of New York, who made the trip with Mullane, died several years ago. Their raft, the Nonpareil, was only 22 feet long and 12 feet wide, and their successful trip across the Atlantic was hailed throughout the world as a great feat and won favor for the men with Queen Victoria.

GREAT FISH TRAGEDY

2,000,000,000 Killed by Freeze at Prince of Wales Island.

Crew of Steamship Northwestern Tells of Sailing for Many Miles Through Dead Herring.

Ketchikan, Alaska.—What is declared by Captain Brunn and officers of the steamship Northwestern to be the greatest fish tragedy ever enacted to human knowledge occurred at Klawak Bay, Prince of Wales Island, January 30, when at one stroke more than 2,000,000,000 good sized herring lost their lives.

The crew eagerly related their remarkable experience of sailing through miles of the dead fish. According to those on board, Klawak Bay was full of herring three days before the Northwestern arrived, when a sudden freeze caught the fish in the narrow-necked harbor before they could escape to sea.

When they were first noticed by George Bradovich, an employee of the Craig cannery, near Klawak, they had swarmed into the harbor in such numbers that those on top were forced out of the water. The freeze came with great suddenness and severity and about six inches of ice formed on the harbor. Millions of the herring at the entrance could be seen dumbly fighting to get out to sea before the enclosed waters were frozen.

When the Northwestern arrived the tide had receded, and for twenty to fifty feet on the beach, and several hundred feet out into the water for a distance of three and one-half miles around the harbor lay frozen herring. The officers of the ship and the cannery foreman made careful measurements and found that the fish were tightly packed for an average depth of three feet.

"It may sound like a fish story," said Bradovich of the cannery, "but the fact is that the greatest chance in the world for obtaining good, fresh fish without a stroke of work has been lost. For days a few people tried to put some of the herring away for the summer, and unfortunately the steamer could take none. The nearest Indians who would have appreciated the fish were 300 miles away.

"The ship had the greatest difficulty in navigating out of the harbor at Klawak, as the propeller had to do the work of desiccator, and it barely made a knot an hour. The captain noted the event on the ship's log so that his superiors may know why the vessel will reek of fish for weeks."

BUYING STRIKE IN PORTUGAL

Boycott Started by People in Effort to Check Upward Climb of Living Costs.

Lisbon.—The Portuguese are attempting to follow the example of the Americans and force a decline in the excessive prices of food and clothing by refusing to purchase.

The people are indignant at the continued advance of the cost of the necessities of living, particularly the price of codfish, which is the chief article of food for the poorer families.

The city councils of Lisbon and Oporto are attempting to stop the exactions of the profiteers by purchasing large quantities of codfish from Newfoundland and selling it at one-third the price extorted from the public by shopkeepers.

The newspapers exhort the public to refrain from buying rice in order to bring down the price and announcements have been made of several cuts to come in that food.

Revolutionary Army Uniform.

At the close of the Revolutionary war the uniforms of the American troops retained in service closely followed the French, that of the Infantry being blue faced with white, and the artillery blue faced with red. At that time these were the only two arms in the composition of the army. Later cavalry was added, wearing green coats with white facings, which soon after changed to black. Since that time the uniforms of the army can be divided into periods, each of which dates back to the close of one of the wars.

CHAPTER X.

In Which Abe and Samson Wrestle and Some Raiders Come to Burn and Stay to Repent.

Within a week after their return the election came off and Abe was defeated, although in his precinct two hundred and twenty-seven out of a total of three hundred votes had been cast for him. He began to consider which way to turn. Maj. John T. Stuart, a lawyer of Springfield who had been his comrade in the "war"—had encouraged him to study law and, further, had offered to lend him books. So he looked for an occupation which would give him leisure for study. Of his former employer, had failed and cleared out. The young giant regarded thoughtfully the scanty opportunities of the village. He could hurl his great strength into the axhead and make a good living, but he had learned that such a use of it gave him a better appetite for sleep than study.

John McNeil, who for a short time had shared his military adventures, had become a partner of Samuel Hill in a store larger and better stocked than any the village had known. But Hill and McNeil had no need of a clerk. Roman Herndon and William Berry had opened a general store. Mr. Herndon offered to sell his interest to Abe and take notes for his pay. It was not a proposition that promised anything but loss. The community was small and there were three other stores, and there was no other "Bill" Berry, who was given to drink and dreams, as Abe knew.

Abe Lincoln had not been trained to weigh the consequences of a business enterprise. The store would give him leisure for study and New Salem could offer him nothing else save consuming toil with the ax or the saw. He could not think of leaving the little cabin village. There were Ann Rutledge and Jack Kelso and Samson Traylor and Harry Needles. Every ladder climber in the village and on the plain around it was his friend.

Upon these people who knew and respected him Abe Lincoln based his hopes. Among them he had found his vision and failure had not diminished or dimmed it. He would try again for a place in which he could serve them and if he could learn to serve Sangamon county he could learn to serve the state and, possibly, even the republic. With this thought and a rather poor regard for his own interest his name fell into bad company on the signboard of Berry and Lincoln. Before he took his place in the store he walked to Springfield and borrowed a law book from his friend Major Stuart.

The career of the firm began on a hot day late in August with Bill Berry smoking his pipe in a chair on the litter veranda of the store and Abe Lincoln sprawled in the shade of a tree that partly overhung its roof, reading a law book. The face of Mr. Berry suddenly assumed a look of animation. A small, yellow dog which had been lying in repose beside him rose and growled, his hair rising, and with a little cry of alarm and astonishment fled under the store.

"Here comes Steve Nuckles on his old mare with a lion following him," said Berry. "If we ain't careful we'll git prayed for plenty."

"If the customers don't come faster I reckon we'll need it," said Abe.

"Howdy," said the minister as he stepped at the hitching bar, dismounted and tied his mare. "Don't be skeered o' this 'ere dog. He were tied when I left home but he chased his rope an' come a'ter me. I reckon if nobody feeds him he'll patten back to-night. Any plug tobacco?"

"A backload of it," said Berry, going into the store to wait on the minister.

When they came out the latter carved off a corner of the plug with his jack-knife, put it into his mouth and sat down on the doorstep. "Where do Samson Traylor live?" Abe took him to the road and pointed the way.

"There he goin' to be a raid," said Nuckles. "I reckon, by all I've heard, it'll come on tonight."

"A raid! Who's going to be raided?" Abe asked.

"Them Traylor folks. Thar be a St. Louis man, name o' Biggs, done stirred up the folks from Missouri and Tennessee on the south road 'bout the Yankee who hops the niggers out o' bondage. They be goin' to do some regulatin' tonight. Ol Satan'll break loose. Ef you don't w'ach out they'll come over an' burn his house sartin'."

"We'll w'ach out," said Abe. "They don't know Traylor. He's one of the best men in this county."

"I've heered he were a he man an' a right powerful, God-fearin' man," said the minister.

"He's one of the best men that ever came to this country and any one that wants to try his strength is welcome to; I don't," said Abe. "Are you going over there?"

"I were goin' to warn 'em an' help 'em ef I cain'."

"Well, go on, but don't stir 'em up," Abe cautioned him. "Don't say a word about the raid. I'll be over there with some other fellers soon after sundown. We'll just tell 'em it's a he party come over for a story-tellin' an' a raffle. I reckon we'll have some fun. Ride on over and take supper with 'em. They're worth knowin'."

In a few minutes the minister mounted his horse and rode away followed by his big dog.

"If I was you I wouldn't go," said Berry.

"Why not?"

"It'll hurt trade. Let the rest of Traylor's friends go over. There's enough of 'em."

"We must all stand as one man for law and order," said Abe. "If we don't there won't be any."

As soon as Abe had had his supper he went from house to house and asked the men to come to his store for a piece of important business. When they had come he told them what was in the wind. Soon after that hour Abe and Philemon Morris, and Alexander Ferguson, and Martin Waddell and Robert Johnson and Joshua Miller and Jack Kelso and Samuel Hill and John McNeil set out for the Traylor cabin. Samson greeted the party with a look of surprise.

"Have you come out to hang me?" he asked.

"No just to hang around ye," said Abe.

"This time it's a heart warmin'," Jack Kelso averred. "We left our wives at home so that we could pay our compliments to Mrs. Traylor without reserve, knowing you to be a man above jealousy."

"It's what we call a he party, on the prairies," said Ferguson. "For one thing I wanted to see Abe and the minister have a raffle."

The Reverend Stephen Nuckles stood in front of the door with Sarah and Harry and the children. He was a famous wrestler.

"I cain't raffle like I used to could, but I be willin' to give ye a try, Abe," said the minister.

"You'd better save your strength for ol' Satan," said Abe.

"Go on, Abe," the others urged. "Give him a try."

Abe modestly stepped forward. In the last year he had grown less inclined to that kind of fun. The men took hold of each other, collar and elbow. They parried with their feet for an instant. Suddenly Abe's long right leg caught itself behind the left knee of the minister. It was the hip lock as they called it those days. Once secured the stronger man was almost sure to prevail and quickly. The sturdy circuit rider stood against it for a second until Abe sprang his bow. Then the heels of the former flew upward and his body came down to the grass, back first.

"That ar done popped my wind bag," said the minister as he got up.

"Call in," said John McNeil and the others echoed it.

"I call in Samson Traylor," said the minister.

At last the thing which had long been a subject of talk and argument in the stores and houses of New Salem was about to come to pass—a trial of strength and agility between the two great lions of Sangamon county. Either of them would have given a month's work to avoid it.

"Now we shall see which is the son of Peleus and which the son of Telemion," Kelso shouted.

"How shall we raffle?" Samson asked.

"I don't care," said Abe.

"Rough and tumble," Ferguson proposed.

Both men agreed. They bent low intently watching each other, their great hands outreaching. They stood braced for a second and suddenly they sprang forward. Their shoulders came together with a thud. It was like two big bison bulls hurling their weight in the first shock of battle. For a breath each bore with all his strength and then closed with his adversary. Each had an under hold with one arm, the other hooked around a shoulder. Samson lifted Abe from his feet but the latter with tremendous efforts loosened the hold of the Vermont, and regained the turf.

They struggled across the dooryard, the ground trembling beneath their feet. They went against the side of the house, shaking it with the force of their impact. Samson had broken the grip of one of Abe's hands and now had his feet in the air again but the young giant clung to hip and shoulder and wriggled back to his foothold. Those lesser men were thrilled and a little frightened by the mighty struggle. Knowing the strength of the wrestlers they felt a fear of broken bones. Each had torn a rent in the coat of the other. If they kept on there was danger that both would be stripped. The children had begun to cry. Sarah begged the struggling men to stop and they obeyed her.

"If any of you fellows think that's fun you can have my place," said Abe. "Samson, I declare you elected the strongest man in this county. You've got the muscle of a grizzly bear. I'm glad to be quit o' ye."

"It ain't a fair election, Abe," Samson laughed. "If you were rassing for the right you could flop me. This little brush was nothing. Your heart wasn't in it, and by thunder, Abe, when it comes to havin' fun I rather guess we'd both do better to let each other alone."

"Tain't exactly good amusement, not for us," Abe agreed.

It was growing dark. Ann Rutledge arrived on her pony, and called Abe aside and told him that the raiders were in the village and were breaking the windows of Radford's store because he had refused to sell them liquor.

"Don't say anything about it," Abe cautioned her. "Just go into the house with Sarah Traylor and sit down and have a good visit. We'll look after the raiders."

Then Abe told Samson what was up. The men concealed themselves in some bushes by the roadside while the minister sat close against an end of the house with his bloodhound beside him. Before they were settled in their places they heard the regulators coming. There were eight men in the party according to Abe's count as they passed. The men, in concealment, hurried to the cabin and surrounded it, crouched against the walls. In a moment they could see a big spot, blacker than the darkness, moving toward them. It was the massed raiders. They came on with the stealth of a cat nearing its prey. A lionlike roar broke the silence. The preacher's bloodhound leaped forward. The waiting men sprang to their feet and charged. The raiders turned and ran, pell mell, in a panic toward their horses. Suddenly the darkness seemed to fill with moving figures. One of the fleeing men, whose coat tails the dog had seized, was yelling for help. The minister rescued him and the dog went on roaring after the others. When the New Salemites got to the edge of the grove they could hear a number of regulators climbing into the treetops. Samson had a man in each hand; Abe had another, while Harry Needles and Alexander Ferguson were in possession of the man whom the dog had captured. The minister was out in the grove with his bloodhound that was barking and growling under a tree. Jack Kelso arrived with a lantern. One of Samson's captives began swearing and struggling to get away. Samson gave him a little shake and bade him be quiet. The man uttered a cry of fear and pain and offered no more resistance. Stephen Nuckles came out of the grove.

"The rest o' that ar party done gone upstairs to roost," said the minister. "I reckon my dog'll keep 'em thar. We better jest tote these men inter the house an' have a prayin' bee. I've got a right smart good chanct, now, to whop ol' Satan."

They moved the raiders' horses. Then the party—save Harry Needles, who stayed in the grove to keep watch—took its captives into the cabin. Three of them were boys from eighteen to twenty years of age. The other was a lanky, bearded Tennesseean some forty years old. One of the young lads had hurt his hand in the evening's frolic. Blood was dripping from it. The four sat silent and fearful and ashamed.

Sarah made tea and put it with meat and milk and doughnuts and bread and butter on the table for them. Samson washed and bandaged the boy's wound. The captives ate as if they were hungry, while the minister went out to feed his dog. When the men had finished eating Samson offered them tobacco. The oldest man filled his pipe and lighted it with a coal. Not one of the captives had said a word until this tall Tennesseean remarked after his pipe was going:

"Thankse, mister. You done been right good to us."

"Who told you to come here?" Samson demanded.

"Twere a man from St. Louis. He done said you hated the South an' were hopin' niggers to run away."

"And he offered to pay you to come here and burn this house and run Traylor out of the county, didn't he?" Abe asked.

"He did—yes, suh—he suah did," answered the man—like a child in his ignorance and simplicity.

"I thought so," Abe rejoined. "You tackled a big job, my friend. Did you know that every one of you could be sent to prison for a term of years, and I've a good mind to see that you go there. You men have got to begin right now to behave yourselves mighty proper or you'll begin to sup sorrow."

Stephen Nuckles returned as Abe was speaking.

"You jest leave 'em to me, Mr. Lincoln," he said. "These be good men, but ol' Satan done got his hooks on 'em. Mis' Traylor, ef you don't mind, I be goin' to do a job o' prayin' right now. Men, you jest git down on yo' knees right hyar, along o' me."

It is recorded later in the diary that the rude Shepherd of the prairies worked with these men on their farms for weeks until he had them wanted to the fold.

CHAPTER XI.

In Which Abe, Elected to the Legislature, Gives What Comfort He Can to Ann Rutledge in the Beginning of Her Sorrows—Also He Goes to Springfield for New Clothes.

Radford's grocery had been so wrecked by the raiders that its owner was disheartened. Reinforced by John Cameron and James Rutledge he had succeeded in drawing them away before they could steal whisky enough to get drunk. But they had thrown much of his goods into the street. Radford mended his windows and offered his stock for sale. After a time Berry and Lincoln bought it, giving notes in payment and applied for a license to sell the liquors they had thus acquired.

Late that autumn a boy baby arrived in the Traylor home. Mrs. Onstott, Mrs. Waddell and Mrs. Kelso came to help and one or the other of them did the nursing and cooking while Sarah was in bed and for a little time thereafter. The coming of the baby was a comfort to this lonely mother of the prairies.

There is a letter from Sarah to her brother dated May, 10, 1833, in which she sums up some months of history in the words that follow:

"The Lord has given us a new son. I have lived through the ordeal—thanks to His goodness—and am strong again. The coming of the baby has reconciled us to the loss of our old friends as much as anything could. It has made this little home dear to us and proved the quality of our new friends. Nothing is too much for them to do. I don't wonder that Abe Lincoln has so much confidence in the people of this country. They are sound at heart, both the northerners and the southerners. Harry Needles is getting over his disappointment. He goes down to the store often to sit with Abe and Jack Kelso and hear them talk. He and Samson are getting deeply interested in politics. Abe lets Harry read the books that he borrows from Major Stuart of Springfield. The boy is bent on being a lawyer and improving his mind. Bim Kelso writes to her mother that she is very happy in her new home but there is something between the lines which seems to indicate that she is trying to put a good face on a bad matter. Abe has been appointed postmaster. Every time he leaves the store he takes the letters in his hat and delivers them as he gets a chance. We have named the new baby Samuel."

WOMEN HAVE EIGHT STAGES

Statistician Tells of Feminine Views and Acts at the Various Periods of Their Lives.

Shakespeare divided the life of man into several stages—babyhood, boyhood, youth, maturity and old age—but a woman has gone the immortal William several better. She distributes the life of woman among eight periods.

Here they are: Babyhood, childhood, girlhood, self-supporting days, life in earnest, housekeeping or homemaking, downgrade and widowhood or dependence. The divisions are not mathematically precise, but they square fairly well with the typical life of average women.

The woman carries babyhood and childhood to the age of fifteen; characterizes the three years following as carefree time; sees her sisters as workers between eighteen and twenty-four; says that from twenty-four to thirty-five life is earnest; states that 83 of every 100 women between thirty-five and forty-five are bearing and rearing children; finds only 14 of the 100 at work yet between forty-five and fifty-five; reports 21 widows between fifty-five and sixty-five; after the latter date 42 are dead, 50 widowed and 8 working for nominal wages.

It isn't a cheering picture. From fifteen to eighteen there may be fun, frivolity and beaux, so that 11 of 100 girls marry then; but between eighteen and twenty-four there come to be 51 more wives and 30 more wage-workers. Seventy-nine of the one hundred are wives at thirty-five, 83 at forty-five. The advice that the statistician draws from her facts and figures is that girls should plan their lives ahead. This, however, is more easily said than done. Cupid has a trick of stepping in and spoiling the shrewdest plans.—Spokesman-Review.

No matter how much you patch up a mistake, it won't change its nature! Better right it, and go back to the place where you left the right track! You'll save time, and better still, you'll save heart aches. This is an especially good plan for a class to follow.—Exchange.

Motor Fuel is Real Problem

Temporary Gasoline Excess Now Does Not Solve the Question for the Future.

UNMINED RESERVE LIMITED

If Oil Was Extracted From Ground at Rate Equal to That of 1920 the Reserve Would Only Last 13 Years.

By E. H. LESLIE, Associate Professor of Chemical Engineering, University of Michigan.

At present petroleum is being produced faster than it is used, and stocks of gasoline are increasing. Crude oil produced in Oklahoma has dropped in price from $3.50 to $1.00 per barrel, and the price of gasoline has been lowered several cents per gallon. But one should not be misled by the present situation, which is only a part of the business cycle through which we are passing. It is a peculiarity of the oil-producing business that the drilling of new wells reaches a maximum at the crest, or even after the crest, or the wave of prosperity. The result is an overproduction of crude oil in the time of depression. Prices drop, profits vanish, and new drilling stops. But within a year or two the pendulum swings the other way, and again there is a scarcity of oil due to the interruption of drilling in the time of depression. This cycle of events would take place even if there were an endless supply of crude oil underground.

Real Fuel Problem.

The real motor fuel problem is not concerned with the swings of the business pendulum, although the present abundance of fuel is pointed to by superficial critics as showing how wrong have been the predictions of the scientists that have warned us of a future shortage.

The problem arises in part through the fact that the underground reserve of petroleum is limited. At present the unmined reserve of the United States is only about 5,800,000,000 barrels. Were this oil to be extracted from the ground at a rate equal to that of the year 1920, a feat that is quite out of the question from a practical standpoint, the reserve would only last 13 years. It is thus evident, however, that after a few years we must expect a decline in the domestic production of petroleum. On the other hand, the use of automobiles, tractors, trucks and gasoline engines is becoming more general. Today the total number of registered motor vehicles is over nine millions, an almost unbelievable increase in the short period of 25 years. What is more, the number is still growing, and will probably exceed 13,000,000 within a few years.

Where are we to get the fuel to run this vast number of cars?

The quality of market gasoline will not change greatly in the next few years, at least not until the automotive engineers perfect devices that will handle heavier and less volatile gasoline satisfactorily.

In spite of the fact that for several years the United States has produced two-thirds of the world's oil, we have recently been dependent upon foreign sources of supply of crude oil. Eighty per cent of the world's oil is consumed in this country. In 1920 our imports were 110,000,000 barrels, or 25 per cent of our domestic production. This oil came largely from Mexico. As the years pass, the United States will become more and more dependent upon imports of petroleum. This will mean higher prices and therefore necessitate more efficient utilization once the oil is in this country.

Other Sources of Fuel.

What other possible sources of fuel are there? Much has been heard of shale oil and of alcohol. Neither of these commodities will be important as motor fuels until many far-reaching developments have taken place. The development of a shale oil industry on a scale sufficient to furnish large quantities of motor fuel is an undertaking comparable to the creation of the whole coal mining industry of today. And to produce alcohol we must first have available suitable raw material. It is quite out of the question to make large quantities of fuel alcohol from food materials, such as grain and potatoes. Possibly wood may be the future source of alcohol, and reforestation of waste areas the means of supplying the wood.

Lastly, it is probable that necessity will be the mother of invention in methods of utilizing fuels. Present engines and devices for carburetion will be modified in such a way that where we now drive a car 10 to 20 miles on a gallon of gasoline, we shall later be satisfied only with 20 to 40 miles. The chemist will be called upon to study what happens within the engine cylinders and to find means of producing more salutary results.

Let us not allow the momentary oversupply of gasoline to blind us to the real situation. The co-operation of scientists, commercial interests, public and government is needed for the successful solution of the problem.

Green Apples Saved Boy Run Over by Automobile

Green apples saved Charles Mabley, twelve years old, of Duncannon, Pa., from serious injury, if not from death, when a good-luck horseshoe led him into danger.

The boy spilled the horseshoe in the road, darted out to get it, and was struck by an automobile driven by Harry Bowman, chief of police of Haldaysburg, Pa.

Mabley was dragged some distance and then let go, one wheel passing over his body. He had half a peck of green apples in his shirt which acted as a cushion and saved him from serious harm.

PASSION PLAY TO BE REVIVED

Oberammergau Committee Plans to Put on Thirty Performances of Great Spectacle.

MANY PARTS TO BE GIVEN OUT

Some Who Played Leading Roles in Last Production Are Disqualified by Age or for Other Reasons—Lang to Be Christ.

Oberammergau, Bavaria.—Thirty performances of the Passion Play have been scheduled for 1922 by the committee of twenty-one which is directing the spectacle, but this number will be increased if the attendance demands, as was the case both in 1900 and 1910.

It will require an outlay of 1,500,000 marks to stage the Oberammergau play and the villagers are extremely anxious about the German political situation lest conditions be such that foreigners will not attend.

The 300 burghers, who constitute the descendants of the original peasants who made the vow to produce the play decently, personally assume the responsibility for this expenditure, and the failure to attract sufficient visitors to meet the cost would result in the bankruptcy of practically the entire village, as the Oberammergau folk have slight resources.

Most of the burghers are wood-carvers, potters, painters, sculptors, farmers, merchants and small shopkeepers. Only the descendants of the villagers who were saved from the plague in 1333 take part in the Passion Play and assume responsibility for its production.

Next October will be a fateful month for then the names of the villagers who are to have the leading roles in the spectacle will be announced.

To be selected to enact the role of Jesus Christ or one of the apostles is a far greater honor to an Oberammergau man than election to the Reichstag of Germany or any other within the gift of the entire German people.

And any woman of Oberammergau would far rather be chosen to play the role of Mary or Martha or Mary Magdalene than to be in the position of Frau Ebert as mistress of the President's palace in Berlin.

Many of the actors in the Passion Play next year will doubtless be the same as those in the cast when the play was last produced in 1910. Anton Lang, who enacted the role of Jesus Christ in 1900 and 1910, will probably be chosen for the part again, as he is still young enough to undertake the arduous task and looks the part so well that younger aspirants are not likely to displace him.

Candidates for "Mary."

Ottile Zwick, who played the role of Mary in 1910, has married since that time. No married woman can play a role. Consequently all the young women of Oberammergau with ability and experience as actresses are eagerly trying to qualify for the highly important part. Paula Rendl, daughter of Peter Rendl, the sculptor, who was Joseph of Arimathea in the play of 1910 and enacted the role of St. John twenty-one years ago, is one of the most promising candidates for the role of Mary. Fraulein Redl has shown great ability in minor religious plays, which are produced constantly by the Oberammergau folk as a means of training actors for the Passion Play.

Marie Mayr, who played the role of Mary Magdalene in the 1910 production, also has married and is living in Chicago. Marie Schmid, who was the Veronica in the last production, also has married.

Eighty-two of the Oberammergau men died during the war, and many of the older actors of the last production will be disqualified by age for important roles. Consequently there are scores of places in the cast to which young men with ability as actors may aspire. They have begun to let hair grow. Wigs and makeup are not permitted by the directors of the Passion Play.

Practically all the older men who had important parts in the last production have never cut their hair. Many of them have retained their long beards and pride themselves on their resemblance to the biblical characters they have depicted.

Stubby, a brindle Boston bull terrier, in the office of General Pershing just after the commander-in-chief of American forces in Europe during the war had decorated him as a wounded hero. Stubby, who is the property of J. Robert Conroy of Washington, has been designated the official mascot of the A. E. F. Stubby wears many other decorations.

HAS HOBBY FOR GIRLS' LOCKS

Indiana Youth Has Preference for Brunettes, but in Pinch Took Any Kind.

Indianapolis.—And now comes the hair fancier, the collector of curly locks, brunettes preferred, but golden and blonde varieties will do in a pinch. Horace James, twenty-eight years old, of Portland, Ind., dental student, has the peculiar hobby of collecting locks of women's hair, especially brunettes, according to his story to the police. This whim caused him to be placed in prison on a charge of vagrancy. He was held under bond of $2,000 after he had been followed for more than a mile by Miss Elizabeth Williams and Miss Ince Ellis, nurses at the Methodist hospital.

According to Miss Williams, Jones has been seen frequently around the nurses' home within the last few weeks. She said he had asked many of the nurses for locks of their hair and had caused much fright among the young women, who had found him at times prowling through the building.

Miss Williams and Miss Ellis were walking at Illinois and Ohio streets when they said Jones passed them and Miss Williams recognized him. They followed him to where Policemen Reilly and Mullin were called. The police say Jones admitted asking the women for locks of hair.

THE VULTURE OAK

"WHO'S Who" in the Trees: An interesting proposition, isn't it? For surely there is a "Who's Who" of the trees, just as there is one of men and women. For one thing, they are quite as individual as men and women. Again, like men, "some are born great, others achieve greatness and others have greatness thrust upon them." A nation which has no memory of its departed great is in a bad way. So also is that nation which has no thought of its historic landmarks. And how often is that historic landmark a tree!

Anyway, the American Forestry association of Washington is compiling a "Who's Who" of trees in America and people all over the country are nominating worth-while trees for a Hall of Fame for Trees. The movement is popular. It should be. Many a tree has associations worth preserving for posterity.

If a tree can be said to be born great, here is one. It is the Stratford-Avon oak in Central park, New York city, nominated for the Hall of Fame by Miss Viola Overman. This tree was sent to Walter Hines Page, when he was ambassador to the Court of St. James, by the mayor of historic Stratford. It was forwarded to the Shakespeare Garden committee in Central park and planted, with appropriate ceremonies.

Of course, the finest example of achieved greatness is the Gen. Sherman sequoia in Sequoia National park, California. It is the biggest and oldest living thing on earth. It is 36.5 feet in diameter and 279.9 feet high. It is more than 4,000 years old. A tree that has achieved greatness of a different kind is the Carbondale (Pa.) elm, nominated by E. M. Peck; it is believed to be the most perfectly proportioned elm tree in the United States.

A tree that had greatness thrust upon it—or at least notoriety—was the giant cottonwood that stood in the middle of the street in Pueblo, Colo., until it was cut down in 1883. Its age was estimated at 380 years; its circumference was 28 feet. Beneath this tree the first white woman who died in Colorado was buried. Thirty-six people were massacred by Indians under it. Fourteen men were hanged on its branches.

Many of our historic trees are dead; more's the pity. For the Old Mulberry tree at St. Mary's, Md., the claim is made that it was the most famous tree in the colonies. The claim will be disputed by many, particularly by the friends of the great trees on Boston common, which saw so much history written. Both trees fell in 1876, one hundred years after the Declaration of Independence. All the history of Maryland is written around the Old Mulberry, for it was there Lord Calvert landed and it was for years the site of the capital of Maryland. The old Mulberry tree is nominated by Mrs. Della Harris Maddox, who has written a poem about the famous tree.

Of the historic Boston common it has been written: "Probably no other spot in the United States has seen so many thousands of men recruited for military service . . . or so many millions of dollars contributed for the cause of human liberty." None of the trees on the common today is of primeval origin. All have been planted, and range between one hundred and two hundred years of age. The two greatest were Liberty tree and the Great elm. The former was destroyed in 1775 and its place is now marked by a memorial table. The Great elm was the native king of the common and was full-grown about 1722. It was destroyed in a gale in 1876.

It was only last May that the famous Morse elm at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fourteenth street, one of the oldest landmarks in the national capital, was removed, after a long, but losing fight for its life, which began when Fourteenth street was widened.

This tree had looked down upon every inaugural parade held in Washington. It was named for Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph.

Under the Lafayette elm at Kennebunk, Me., General Lafayette lunched while touring the United States. The tree is nominated by Miss Ellen Darrah of West Philadelphia.

Soldiers of five wars have been drilled beneath the John Pemberton oak, nominated by Mrs. H. F. Lewis, secretary of Virginia for the D. A. R. Under this tree Col. John Pemberton mustered his troops for the battle of King's mountain in 1781. A marker has been placed on the tree by the Sycamore Shoals chapter.

The DeSoto oak at Tampa was nominated by J. E. Worthington of the Tampa Times. It has a spread of 120 feet with a height of 80 feet. In 1539 Ferdinand DeSoto was appointed governor of the provinces of Florida and Cuba, and with about 1,000 of Spain's most wealthy and adventurous young men set out for the conquest of the New World.

"The Corner oaks at the foot of Marlin's mountain at Marlinton, W. Va., are nominated by Andrew Price. These oaks were marked "General Andrew Lewis, October 6, 1751." Gen. Lewis was the hero of Point Pleasant and was the military trainer and patron of George Washington, who tried to get Lewis appointed commander in chief in the Revolution.

Other candidates announced as having been given a place in the association's records are as follows: The Battle Ground oak, marking the battle of Gullford (N. C.) courthouse in the Revolutionary war.

The Sycamore tree, shading the headquarters of Gen. Washington at White Plains.

The Cornwalis-Aaron Burr oak at Charlotte, N. C.

The Lewis Cass tree in the City park of Elvira, O.

The McDonough oak at New Orleans, named for the man whose fortune helped to found the public school systems in New Orleans and Baltimore.

The Crosswicks oak in New Jersey, marking the site of a Revolutionary war hospital and headquarters of the Hessians troops.

The Live oak at Pomona, Cal., marking the spot where in 1837 the first white settlers camped in Pomona valley.

The White oak that marks the site of the battles on Keith's hill in King Phillip's wars and "Hassanimesco," now Grafton, Mass.

BISCUITS SERVE TO ADD VARIETY

Never Go Begging When They Appear on Table Tender, Flaky and Baked Properly.

NOT DIFFICULT TO PREPARE

Important to Use Good Recipe, Mix Quickly After Baking Powder is Moistened, Have Dough Right and Use Hot Oven.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Hot biscuits and butter, hot biscuits and honey, or hot biscuits and marmalade—no one's face except a confirmed dyspeptic's could but brighten at the sight of a plate of them on the table if they are what proper biscuits should be—tender, flaky and well baked.

Biscuits are not difficult to make when a few important points are kept in mind. These are to use a good recipe, to mix as quickly as possible after the baking powder is moistened, to have the dough just stiff enough to handle, and to bake in a rather hot oven.

The following recipes for making biscuits are recommended by food specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture.

Plain Baking Powder Biscuit.
2 cups sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
3/4 cup liquid
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup shortening

Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder. Cut or chop the shortening into the flour with a knife or a cookie cutter until well distributed. Finally, if necessary, rub the mixture between the tips of the fingers until it is like meal. Add just enough cold liquid to make a soft dough that can be handled on the board, mixing with a knife if possible. Mix quickly and handle the dough very lightly. Place it on a floured board, roll to the thickness of one-half inch, and cut into desired shape.

Hot Biscuits and Butter Are Fit for a King.

Drop Biscuits.
To save time in preparation or when no cutter is at hand, the dough may be made somewhat softer than above and dropped on the tin by spoonfuls about one-half inch apart. The mixture, although soft, should be stiff enough not to spread on the tin, yet soft enough so that the biscuits when baked have a smooth, rounded surface rather than a rough, lumpy one. If desired, the top may be brushed with milk smoothed gently with a knife dipped into water or milk. Bake as above.

These "emergency" or drop biscuits are not quite like the rolled ones, yet if of the proper consistency they are equally good. Indeed, some excellent Judges of pastry insist that they are always a little more tender.

Sour-Milk Biscuit.
2 1/2 cups sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 cup sour milk
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup sugar

Sift together the flour, salt, baking powder and sugar. Cut or chop in the shortening, add the sour milk, and mix as usual. Bake thoroughly in a hot oven for about 10 to 12 minutes. Be sure that the milk is sufficiently sour to neutralize all the soda. If desired, a drop biscuit may be made, using about one cupful of the sour milk for mixing and one-half teaspoonful of soda.

Potato Biscuit.
2 cups sifted flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup mashed potato
Liquor sufficient to mix.

Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder. Cut or rub into this the cold shortening. In the same way rub into this flour mixture the mashed potato. Finally, add just enough cold liquid to make the mass cling together. Do not knead. Place on floured board, roll until one-third inch thick, and cut into rounds. Place these in lightly floured biscuit tins and bake for 15 to 20 minutes in a moderately hot oven. Bake all potato breads more slowly than those made with flour alone.

SCISSORS HANDY IN KITCHEN

Rather Long List of Purposes for Which Little Implement May Be Put to Good Use.

Medium-sized scissors hanging in a convenient place in the kitchen are a valuable help. Here are some of the purposes for which they will be found useful, according to workers in the experimental kitchen in the United States Department of Agriculture.

For cutting cold meat into cubes.

For cutting celery or green peppers into small pieces for pickles or salads.

For shredding cabbage or lettuce. For cutting up raisins or dates.

For cutting out the center membrane of a grapefruit in preparing it for the table.

For cutting out the woody core and eyes of fresh pineapple.

For trimming the rinds from breakfast bacon.

After the scissors are used each time they should be carefully washed and dried.

To chop mint easily, place it in a little vinegar.

Lettuce is very good for the system, and is not fattening.

If mustard for the table is mixed with salad oil it is greatly improved.

Vinegar placed in a pot of dried-up glue will moisten and make it liquid again.

Three pints of water should be drunk daily, principally between meals.

Oilcloth or linoleum should be given a coat of varnish twice a year. This preserves and makes it last longer.

Celery, tomatoes, green beans and peas, fruit—in fact, almost all the salad ingredients—are included in the list of non-fattening foods.

When the home owner's thoughts turn to house painting problems Californians, particularly, begin to wonder what color will be best for the movies. A location director for motion pictures in Hollywood, Cal., says that white houses are almost impossible for use in motion pictures and he hopes the people within the area of the picture industry will use neutral or dark shades when they do their house painting.

"Darker shades are more agreeable to the eye than those of dazzling whiteness," so this movie director says, "and they photograph better, in addition to blending with the natural colors of the landscape."

All-white houses are also hard on the eyes.

Beauty Not Matter of Expense.
Beautiful grounds need not be expensive. The loveliest flowers and plants that ever grew are found in the woods and along the banks of streams, in fence corners, and in fields and shady nooks. They are yours for the digging. What is rarer or prettier than a bed of wild violets and ferns in a shady spot near the house? Plant generously of perennials, so that they will bloom and grow year after year with little time and attention and give stability to your landscape effects.

Willie Had a Reason.
Willie Hopkins is only ten years old, but, strange to tell, he brushes his own hair and washes his ears without parental coercion. It must be admitted that Willie just started this most uncommon practice within the last few days. The young man's mother was dumfounded when she walked into his room and found him plastering down his hair with a brush.

"You're a very good boy," she said. "How did you come to think of brushing your hair and washing your face?" Willie looked sheepish and then replied: "Mary Brown told me I was good lookin'!"—New York Sun.

HOME TOWN HELPS

IN FIGHT FOR CIVIC BEAUTY

Commercial Interests of Kansas City Unite for War on Billboards and Uglies.

The commercial interests of Kansas City have gone on record as enemies of the "uglies."
The city planning and public buildings committee of the chamber of commerce adopted a resolution, taking a definite stand against "the encroachment of either filling stations or billboards on the city's boulevards and homes."

The resolution stated that the chamber members are heartily in accord with and desire to lend their moral support to the joint resolution of the two houses of the council to the effect that filling stations and billboards should not be permitted to destroy the effect of Kansas City's boulevard system.

After a protracted discussion the committee declared in favor of a "local option" on the uglies. By that was meant that each neighborhood be permitted to decide whether billboards or filling stations should be allowed to locate in that vicinity. The residents whose homes are within view, or within close proximity of the ugly, should have a voice in denying or permitting its location, the committee members believed.

Billboards in certain localities are not objectionable if properly constructed and lighted, in the opinion of the committee. But their place is not in residence neighborhoods or on boulevards, they agreed.

WAR ON INDUSTRIAL UNREST

"Community Service" Idea is Spreading, for Many Good and Substantial Reasons.

"Community Service, Incorporated" shortly will take its place as a definite factor in the industrial life of Illinois. This announcement comes through Maj. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the executive-financial committee for Illinois. Organization has been completed for Illinois and the plans for the establishment of the work are under way.

The aim of Community Service is to improve living and leisure conditions that through their development a peaceful, settled and contented community atmosphere will prevail and industrial unrest to a great degree be removed.

The work of the organization has passed the experimental stage. It has been found to be a very solid and substantial success in the big industrial communities of Bethlehem and Chester, Pa. The main work of Community Service is the solution of the leisure hour problem. A trained organizer will be sent to various communities to study conditions and make a survey of the social and recreational life, determining what is most needed and most desirable for the occupation of the leisure hours of the community, and then assisting them to provide and build up a service system for themselves.

House Painting.
When the home owner's thoughts turn to house painting problems Californians, particularly, begin to wonder what color will be best for the movies. A location director for motion pictures in Hollywood, Cal., says that white houses are almost impossible for use in motion pictures and he hopes the people within the area of the picture industry will use neutral or dark shades when they do their house painting.

"Darker shades are more agreeable to the eye than those of dazzling whiteness," so this movie director says, "and they photograph better, in addition to blending with the natural colors of the landscape."

All-white houses are also hard on the eyes.

Beauty Not Matter of Expense.
Beautiful grounds need not be expensive. The loveliest flowers and plants that ever grew are found in the woods and along the banks of streams, in fence corners, and in fields and shady nooks. They are yours for the digging. What is rarer or prettier than a bed of wild violets and ferns in a shady spot near the house? Plant generously of perennials, so that they will bloom and grow year after year with little time and attention and give stability to your landscape effects.

Willie Had a Reason.
Willie Hopkins is only ten years old, but, strange to tell, he brushes his own hair and washes his ears without parental coercion. It must be admitted that Willie just started this most uncommon practice within the last few days. The young man's mother was dumfounded when she walked into his room and found him plastering down his hair with a brush.

"You're a very good boy," she said. "How did you come to think of brushing your hair and washing your face?" Willie looked sheepish and then replied: "Mary Brown told me I was good lookin'!"—New York Sun.

The Tibetans never touch water, but clean their faces and hands with butter, which they keep in the ground as long as 60 years.

It takes 15 days for the average human body to recover fully from the loss of two consecutive nights' sleep.

For Silver.
A lump of camphor put in the silver chest will prevent the silver from tarnishing.

TAKE TIME TO SMILE

A MINOR POINT.

"Have you any reference books on Napoleon Bonaparte," asked the timid old lady in a public library.

"Thousands of them, madam," replied the librarian, proudly. "What particular phase of the Great Corsican's career do you wish to study?"

"I don't suppose you'd call it a phase of his career, and I'm sure I won't have to study thousands of books, but I would like to know why he is so often pictured with his arms folded."

Beside the Stream.
"A boy with a bent pin and a piece of string will catch more fish than a man with a fancy outfit," remarked the affable sportsman.

"I have heard so," replied the small boy whose luck had been bad. "But you can't believe most of the fish stories these city fellows make up."

AN EASY MARK

"He's an easy mark."

"That so?"
"Yes. Everybody can get money out of him except his wife."

Luck.
He went to see the dentist. The picture of despair. But came back smiling broadly. The dentist wasn't there.

Different Calculation.
"What do you understand by the problem of unemployment?"
"I have only studied a few individual cases," replied the sardonic citizen. "In these the problem seemed to consist in figuring how to do as little work as possible without going broke."

Historic Figures.
"Don't you think the historic figures of the future will be greater than those of the past?"
"I'm afraid so," replied Senator Sorghum. "The figures suggested in conjunction with congressional appropriations are becoming larger every year."

Seven—Count 'Em.
A correspondent, J. M., sends us a usable little joke, quite all right to the eye, though perhaps not so good to the ear. It is this:

"Miss Daycollette turned her back on me."
"The vertebrazen thing!"

Too Loud.
"Oh, my," said the flapper at the soda fountain as the straw in her soda became bent. "My sucker's broke!"
"Hush!" whispered her escort. "You needn't tell everybody about it if I am."

LUCK

Young Doctor—I haven't lost a patient since I hung up my shingle. Other Doctor—I wish I had your luck. All mine got well.

Think This Over.
It's wicked to deceive your wife. And any man makes the great error of his life who thinks he can.

Nothing Serious.
"I heard Flubdub say he hadn't a cent left and now he's hunting for his revolver. Hadn't we better watch him?"
"I think not. He's a sensible man and is wisely going to pawn it."

All Manner of Men.
"Some men," remarked the admirer of poetry, "go into politics with the idea of leaving footprints on the sands of time."
"Some do," replied Senator Sorghum. "And others are lucky if they get out without having their thumbprints taken."

Advanced English.
Jessie—Billy swears awfully. James (absent-mindedly)—Yes, I can do better myself.—Notre Dame Juggler.

Tribute to an Unknown Genius.
"Who started the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy?"
"How should I know?" rejoined Mr. Stormington Barnes. "Whoever started it knew his business. It turned out to be the most wonderful press agent stuff in the history of the drama."

Welcome, Stranger.
"He's the sort of fellow you like to play poker with."
"That so?"
"Yes. Doesn't play well enough to win much and can afford to lose."

Quaint Garter Customs.

There are several quaint customs in connection with garters. A description of two, however, must suffice. The one that is prevalent in several mid-European countries, of taking off the bride's garter by the best man at the breakfast, and cutting it up, and distributing the pieces among the groomsmen and guests.

The second is, or rather was, the practice in the German Imperial family of giving the bride thirteen pairs, one pair of which was kept as likely to bring her good luck. This pair is always made of pale blue silk (the maiden's color), and has diamond clasps. Another pair was sent to the museum of Berlin—where there are something like ninety most interesting specimens—and the remaining pairs were given as keepsakes to the young nobles and others who attended the bridegroom at the altar.

Judging from the modern specimens, garters are even nowadays scarcely less dainty, elaborate, or costly than of yore, though perhaps often worn more for ornament and sentiment than for use.—Kansas City Star.

Baby's Play Pen.
Have an open lattice work made, or a paling, about 20 inches high, and 10 to 12 feet long. By using hinges it can be folded up out of the way when not needed. Put a rug on the floor, a clean sheet over the rug, and the wooden wall around it, and the baby will be safe and happy inside.

These superstitious people is that a witch doctor can cure a child of backwardness by means of making a slight incision in the cartilage of the child's ear. The operation must be performed during the waxing of the moon and the art is handed down from generation to generation, the "doctor" usually being a woman. If a cure does not result the operation is repeated until the child is cured. It is said that many women practice this art and that the people pay large sums to have dull children so treated.

MEAT-CANNING DEMONSTRATION

Home Demonstration Agent Giving a Meat-Canning Lesson.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Six more home demonstration agents in Arkansas have learned how to cut up and can a beef carcass and will teach the people in their respective territories. Recently they attended a demonstration school in meat canning conducted by a canning specialist from the United States Department of Agriculture at Lake Village, Ark.

The demonstration was given at a local hospital. Besides the six agents, there were approximately 50 people of the community in attendance, including many nurses and doctors. The head doctor contributed a beef animal, which was slaughtered for the demonstration. After the meat was cut up the pieces were boiled or roasted. The bones and meat scraps were used for making soup stock and beef stew.

The carcass of the beef, not including the head, feet, or the intestines, weighed 137 1/2 pounds. After the bones had been utilized for soup stock, they weighed 35 pounds, which left 135 pounds of meat for canning. From this amount 52 No. 2 cans of roast beef, 8 of steak, 28 of boiled meat with soup stock thick enough to jelly, 11 of beef hash, and 10 of very concentrated meat stock were canned.

All the animal would not have brought more than $10 in the local market. The canned meat was estimated to be worth at least $45. The heart, liver, feet, and head paid for the cost of butchering. The value of the hide was extra profit.

Salt in Damp Weather.
During the damp weather salt cellars are apt to become clogged on the inner side of the holes. By placing a few rice kernels in each cellar and adding the salt last the salt will come out better.

Warming Over Potatoes.
If cold baked potatoes are dipped for a moment into hot water and placed in a moderate oven until warmed through, they are as good as freshly baked ones.

Durable and pretty portieres and couch covers are made from denim.

Doughnuts made with risen bread dough are more wholesome than those made with soda.

After washing the kitchen oilcloth, rub over with skim milk. This will dry more quickly.

The fat of a neck or loin of mutton makes a far lighter and much richer steamed pudding than suet.

Witchcraft in Wales.

Superstitions of the country folk of Wales are discussed in the quarterly report of Dr. Arthur Hughes, medical health officer of the county of Carmarthenshire. Despite the fact that fortune telling and witchcraft are prohibited under the English law, large numbers of the Welsh peasants bring their ailing children to the witch doctors rather than to medical practitioners. One fetish that appeals to Madrid Laundry Women.

The laundry women of Madrid are probably the finest of their profession in the world. Nowhere else does the linen come home so delightfully clean and it is all accomplished with cold water. Within sight of the windows of the royal palace any day of the week, including Sundays, may be seen acre after acre of snow-white linen spread out to dry along the banks of the Manzanares. In the turbulent waters of this creek, for it is nothing more in spite of its sonorous name, virtually all the washing for the million or so inhabitants of Madrid is done.

"Potter's Field."

The term, which is applied to a place where the penniless and unknown are buried, had its origin in Matthew 27:7, when the chief priests "took counsel and bought with them (the thirty pieces of silver for which Judas betrayed the Master) the potter's field to bury strangers in." The name has clung to such plots ever since.

Advice for Movie Hero.

The movie hero, carrying the unconscious heroine, was bravely struggling through a terrible storm. At the point of exhaustion he made the cabin, and bursting in laid the girl on a convenient bed. The storm was raging terribly and the cabin door stood wide open. A little chap, lost in his excitement, yelled: "Shut the door."

REP. APPLEBY URGES BILL FOR FEDERAL AUTO LICENSE

DECLARES THAT HIS PROPOSAL WOULD RELIEVE TOURIST MOTORISTS FROM PETTY ANNOYANCES DURING INTERSTATE TRAVEL.

By T. Frank Appleby Representative From Third District of New Jersey.

In response to requests for a statement in regard to the bill, H. R. 7991, providing for Federal licenses for automobiles, which I introduced in the House of Representatives on July 28th, I beg to say that this is one of the few proposals for increasing revenue where a direct return of far greater value than the actual tax is provided for each individual upon whom the tax will fall.

I am frank to say that I am at a loss to understand the violent opposition of the American Automobile Association to my bill, voiced through an open letter addressed to Chairman Fordney, of the Ways and Means Fordney is quoted in the press as advocating the same method of taxation as provided in this bill in a statement in which he said he "did not think there was any possibility of levying the taxes suggested by Secretary Mellon, unless it was the automobile tax. But if this tax is decided upon by the committee it will be a graduated tax on horse-power, and accompanied by a Federal license obviating the necessity for State licenses outside of the State of registration."

My bill is intended to not only produce revenue, but also to simplify and promote interstate travel and commerce by motor vehicles, and I believe that while it will probably bring in an annual revenue of approximately $10,000,000 to $20,000,000, yet the law will be most welcome to the class upon whom the tax will fall, as they will be only too glad to pay the small registration fee required in order to escape the petty annoyances which they are now forced to contend through the conflicting and burdensome motor provisions and regulations of the various States. No more will the village constable and the county squire prove a thorn in the side of the "see America first" tourist as he winds his way from State to State in his Rolls-Royce or his flivver, as the case may be, or hideous dreams of vari-colored registration tags and angles of illumination for headlights disturb his nightly slumbers, for surcease will be found for all his troubles if H. R. 7991 becomes a law, or its provisions are incorporated in the new revenue act.—The Washington Herald.

A Lucky Throw.

I awoke one night just in time to see a man getting out of my window. I picked up an ink bottle, the only thing handy, and threw it at him. It was a lucky throw, for, although it didn't hit him, it struck the window and splattered him liberally with red ink, which identified him later.—Chicago Tribune.
