And he explained how we could have the dove nature and place ourselves in a position where we could attain the dove wings, or in other words be lifted from our low estate and helped in our times of need. In the evening he likened our lives to that of a beautiful watered garden. Both sermons were exceedingly helpful. Mr. Scoville was entertained at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Wilbur C. Parker.

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued.

They saddled their horses and mounted and rode up to the door. After their acknowledgments and farewells Brimstead came close to Samson and said in confidence: "I enjoy being a millionaire for a few minutes now and then. It's as good as going to a circus an' cheaper."

"The feelings of a millionaire are almost as good as the money while they last," said Abe Lincoln with a laugh.

At early candlelight they reached the sycamore woods very hungry. It was a beautiful grove like forest on the shore of a stream. The crossing was a rough bridge of corduroy. A crude log tavern and a cruder store stood on the farther shore of the creek. The tavern was a dirty place with a drunken proprietor. Three ragged, shiftless farmers and a half-breed Indian sat in its main room in varying stages of inebriety. A well-dressed, handsome young man with a diamond in his shirt-front was leading a horse back and forth in the stable yard. The diamond led Samson to suspect that he was the man Davis of whom Mrs. Brimstead had spoken. Our travelers, not liking the look of the place, got some oats and rode on, camping near the farther edge of the woods, where they built a fire, fed and tethered their horses and sat down and ate from the store in their saddle-bags.

Then with their knives Abe and Samson cut big armfuls of grass from the near prairie for the horses and a bed upon which the three men lay down for the night.

Samson had that gift of "sleeping with one eye open" which the perils of the wilderness had conferred upon the pioneer. He had lain down on the side of their bed near the horses, which were tethered to trees only a few feet away. He had gone to sleep with his pistol under his right hand. Late in the night he was awakened by an unusual movement among the horses. In the dim light of the fire he could see a man in the act of bridling Abe's horse.

"Hold up your hands," Samson shouted as he covered the man with his pistol. "If ye stir a foot I'll bore a hole in ye."

"The man threw up his hands and stood still.

In half a moment Abe Lincoln and Harry had got up and captured the man and the loosed horse.

This is part of the entry which Samson made in his diary a week or so later:

"Harry put some wood on the fire while Abe and I led him up into the fight. He was one of the dirty white men we had seen at the tavern.

"I'll give you four hundred dollars for a horse in good Michigan money," he said.

"If ye can't steal a horse you're willin' to buy one," I says.

"No, sir. I only come to buy," says he.

"I flopped him sudden and asked him why he was putting on the bridle.

"He owned up then. Said a man had hired him to steal the horse.

"That man has got to have a horse," he said. "He'll give ye any price ye want to ask. If you'll give me a few dollars I'll take ye to him."

"You go and bring him here and I'll talk to him," I said.

"I let the feller go. I didn't suppose he'd come back, but he did. Came a little before sunrise with that well-dressed feller we saw at the tavern."

"What's your name?" I says.

"He handed me a card on which I read the words Lionel Davis, Real Estate, Loans and Insurance, 14 South Water Street, Chicago, Ill."

"There's one branch o' your business that isn't mentioned on the card," I says.

"What's that?" says he.

"Horse-thief," says I. "You sent that feller here to steal a horse and he got caught."

"Well I told him if he'd get me a good horse I'd give him five hundred dollars and that I didn't care how he got him. The fact is I'm desperate.

I'll give you a thousand dollars for one of your horses."

"You couldn't buy one of 'em at any price," I said. "There's two reasons. I wouldn't do business with a horse-thief and no money would tempt me to sell an animal to be ridden to death."

"The two thieves had had enough of us and they got out."

"That night our party camped on the shore of the Kankakee and next day they met the contractors. Lincoln joined the latter party and Harry and Samson went on alone. Late that afternoon they crossed the nine-mile prairie, beyond which they could see the shimmer of the lake and the sunlit structures of the new city.

"There it is," said Samson. "Four thousand, one hundred and eighty people live there. It looks like a sturdy two-year-old."

The houses were small and cheaply built and of many colors. Some were unpainted. Near the prairie they stood like people on the outer edge of a crowd, looking over one another's shoulders and pushing in a disordered mass toward the center of interest. Some seemed to have straggled away as if they had given up trying to see or hear. So to one nearing it the town had a helter-skelter look.

Our travelers passed rough boarded houses with grand-looking people in their dooryards and on their small porches—men in broadcloth and tall hats and ladies in silk dresses. It was six o'clock and the men had come home to supper. As the horsemen proceeded larger buildings surrounded them, mostly two stories high. There were some stores and houses built of red brick. Beyond the scatter of cheap, wooden structures they came to streets well laid out and crowded and busy and "very soft" to quote a phrase from the diary. Teams were struggling in the mud, drivers shouting and lashing. Agents for hotels and boarding houses began to solicit the two horsemen from the plank sidewalks. The latter were deeply impressed by a negro in scarlet clothes, riding a horse in scarlet housings. He carried a scarlet banner and was advertising in a loud voice the hour and place of a great land sale that evening.

A sound of many hammers beating upon boards could be heard above the noises of the street and behind all was the constant droning of a big steam saw and the whir of the heavy stones in the new grist mill. It was the beginning of that amazing diapason of industry which accompanied the building of the cities of the West.

They put out in the livery stable of the City hotel and at the desk of the latter asked about the price of board. It was three dollars a day and no politeness in the offer.

"It's purty steep," said Samson. "But I'm too hungry for argument or delay and I guess we can stand it to be nabors for a day or so."

The hotel clerk had a Register of the Residents of the City of Chicago wherein they found the name and address of John Kelso. They went out to find the house. Storekeepers tried to stop them as they passed along the street with offers of land at bargains which would make them millionaires in a week. In proceeding along the plank sidewalks they were often ascending or descending steps to another level.

On La Salle street they found the home of Jack Kelso. It was a rough boarded small house, a story and a half high. It had a little porch and dooryard enclosed by an unpainted picket fence. Bim, in a handsome, blue silk gown, came running out to meet them.

"If you don't mind I'm going to kiss you," she said to Harry.

"I'd mind if you didn't," said the young man as he embraced her.

"We must be careful not to get the habit," she laughed.

"I'd enjoy being careless for once," said Harry.

"Women can be extravagant with everything but carelessness," she insisted. "Do you like this gown?"

"It is lovely—like yourself."

"Then perhaps you will be willing to take me to the party tonight. My mother will chaperon us."

"With these clothes that have just been hauled out of a saddle bag?" said Harry with a look of alarm.

"Even rags could not hide the beauty of him," said Kelso as he came down from the porch to greet them. "And look at her," he went on. "Was there ever a fairer maid in spite of all her troubles? See the red in her cheeks and the diamond glow of youth and health in her eyes. You should see the young men sighing and gutturing around her."

"You'll hear me tuning up," Harry declared.

"That is father's way of comforting my widowhood," said Bim. "He has made a wonderful beauty mask and often he claps it on me and whistles up a band of sighing lovers. As a work of the imagination I am a great success."

"The look of you sets my heart afe again," the boy exclaimed.

"Come—take mother and me to the party at Mrs. Kinzie's," said Bim. "A very grand young man was coming to take us in a wonderful carriage, but he's half an hour late now. We won't wait for him."

So the three set out together afoot for Mrs. Kinzie's, while Samson sat down for a visit with Jack Kelso.

The Kinzie's house was of brick and larger and more pretentious than any in Chicago. Its lawn, veranda and parlor were crowded with people in a curious variety of costumes.

Nearly all the festive company wore diamonds. They scintillated on fingers, some of which were knotted with toil; they glowed on shirt bosoms and morning as well as evening gowns; on necks and ears, which should have been spared the emphasis of jewels.

Col. Zachary Taylor, who had just arrived from Florida and was presently returning with a regiment of recruits for the Seminole war, was at Mrs. Kinzie's party. He remembered Harry and took him in hand and introduced him to many of his friends as the best scout in the Black Hawk war, and, in spite of his dress, the young man became one of the lions of the evening.

After refreshments the men went outside to smoke and talk—some with pipes—of canals, railroads and corner lots, while the younger people were dancing and being proudly surveyed by their mothers.

As Harry and the ladies were leaving Col. Taylor came to them and said:

"Young man, I am the voice of your country. I call you to Florida. Will you go with us next week?"

Harry looked into Bim's eyes.

"The campaign will be over in a year, and I need you badly," the Colonel urged.

"I can not say no to the call of my country," Harry answered. "I will join your regiment at Beardstown on its way down the river."

That night Harry and Bim stood by the gate talking, after Mrs. Kelso had gone into the house.

"Bim, I love you more than ever," said the boy. "Abe says you can get a divorce. I have brought the papers for you to sign. They will make you free. I have done it for your sake. You will be under no obligation. I want you to be free to marry whom you will. I would be the happiest man in the world if you were to choose me. I haven't the wealth of some of the city men. I can only offer you my love."

"Be careful and, please, let go of my hand," she said. "I'm not going to say a word of love to you. I am not free yet. We couldn't marry if we wanted to. I wish you to be under no sense of obligation to me. Many things may happen in a year. I am glad you are going to see more of the world before you settle down. It will help you to be sure to know yourself a little better and to be sure of what you want to do."

"I think that I know myself fairly well," he answered. "There are so many better men who want to marry you! I shall go away with a great fear in me."

"There are no better men," she answered. "When you get back we shall see what comes of our little romance. Meanwhile I'm going to pray for you."

"And I for you," he said as he followed her into the house, where the older people sat waiting for them. Harry gave the papers to Bim to be signed and attested and forwarded to Mr. Stuart in Springfield.

On their way to the hotel Samson said to Harry:

"I don't believe Bim is going to be carried away by any of these high-fliers. She's getting to be a very sensible person. Poor Jack has caught the plague. He has invested in land. Things it will make him rich. He's in poor health, too—kidney trouble—and Bim has a baby with all the rest—a beautiful boy. I went upstairs and saw him asleep in his cradle. Looks like her. Hair as yellow as gold, light complexion, blue eyes, handsome as a picture."

That night, in the office of the City hotel, they found Mr. Lionel Davis in the midst of a group of excited speculators. In some way he had got across the prairies and was selling his land and accepting every offer on the plea that he was going into the grain business in St. Louis and had to leave Chicago next day. He choked the market with bargains. The buyers began to back off. Mr. Davis closed his carpet bag and left.

"It was a kind of horse steal," said Samson as they were going to bed. "He got news down there on the main road by pony express on its way to St. Louis. I'll bet there's been a panic in the East. He's awake and the others are still dreaming."

CHAPTER XIX.

Wherein is One of the Many Private Panics Which Followed the Bursting of the Bubble of Speculation.

Samson and Harry saw the bursting of the great bubble of '37. Late that night, Disaster, loathsome and thousand-legged, crept into the little city. It came on a steamer from the East and hastened from home to home, from tavern to tavern. Great banks had suspended payment; New York had suffered a panic; many large business enterprises in the East had failed; certain agents for the bonds of Illinois had absconded with the state's money; in the big cities there had been an ominous closing of doors and turning of locks; a great army of men were out of employment. The little city was in a frenzy of excitement. The streets were filled with a shouting, half-crazed throng. New fortunes had shrunk to nothing and less than nothing in a night. Lots in the city were offered for a tithe of what their market value had been. Davis had known that the storm would arrive with the first steamer and in the slang of business had put on a life-preserver. Samson knew that the time to buy was when every one wanted to sell. He bought two corner lots in the city and two acres on the prairie half a mile from town. They got their deeds and went to the Kelso's to bid them good-by.

After hearty farewells Samson and Harry set out for their home. They were not again to see the gentle face and hear the pleasant talk of Jack Kelso. He had once said, in the presence of Samson, that it is well to remember, always, that things can not go on with us as they are. Changes come—slowly and quite according to our calculations, or so swiftly and unexpectedly that they fill us with confusion. Learned and wise in the weighty problems of humanity he had little prudence in regulating the affairs of his own family.

Kelso had put every dollar he had and some that he hoped to have into land. Bim, who had been teaching in one of the schools, had invested all her savings in a dream city on the shore of an unconstructed canal.

AIREDALE DOG NOT SCOTCH

Breed Had Its Origin in Yorkshire, England, and is a Comparative Newcomer.

Your airedale is not a Scotch dog. He is not of Scotch ancestry and no blood of Scotch dogs flows in his veins. He is an Irish and English dog. The name of his breed does not come from the County Ayr in Scotland, but from the River Aire in Yorkshire, England. Nor is the airedale an old breed of dog, as such things are measured in the dog world. It is neither an old family nor a "first family" among dogs. The airedale is a newcomer. Dogs of this breed were first exhibited at Shipley, in Yorkshire, in 1876, and they were then called, not airedale, but "waterside terriers." These dogs were produced by crossing an English otter hound with an Irish terrier, believed to have been a red terrier, and later adding a dash of bull terrier blood. The combination produced a dog second to no other dog in intelligence, bravery, gameness in a fight, loyalty to his master and his master's family, and kindness to children.

The word "airedale," as the name of this new kind of dog, was first used in 1883 at the national dog show at Birmingham, England, where these entries were described as "airedales or waterside terriers." The name "waterside terriers" fell into disuse. The English Kennel club was slow and conservative in recognizing this as a new and distinct breed of dog, but referred to them as "broken-halved terriers."

"Rapid Transit" in the Old Days.

An illustration of the more or less rapid transit facilities between the "villages" of Brooklyn and Flushing as late as 1810 is seen in the announcement of the stage driver who begs "to inform his friends in the city of New York and the village of Brooklyn, Newtown and Flushing that, notwithstanding the opposition which has lately been set up against him, he still continues to run his stage between the villages of Brooklyn and Flushing in an equal if not superior manner to that which he has been in the habit for many years past. He has improved his team with an additional span of very fine horses which enable him to perform his route in a space of 90 minutes, being a distance of 12 miles. Those who wish seats in the above-mentioned stage will please apply at W. & E. W. Nichol's store, No. 8 Fulton St., New York; John Bedell's, Brooklyn, and Samuel Lowry's, Flushing. Fare from Brooklyn to Newtown, 37½ cents, to Flushing, 50 cents."

They Supply Acids and Are Important for Their Flavor and Other Good Reasons.

Fruits are very important in the child's diet. They supply mild acids, and they are important for their flavor, for their laxative effects, and no doubt for other reasons. This laxative effect is well recognized in the very general use of prunes, orange juice, and apples. Fruits, like the vegetables, have mineral elements which the body requires. Serve fruits in some form at least once a day.

CHEESE MAKING OFFERS MEANS OF UTILIZING SURPLUS MILK

Simple Equipment for Making Cheddar Cheese at Home.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

American or Cheddar type cheese is palatable, rich in food value, and it may be kept for long periods without refrigeration. Every housewife knows of a number of palatable dishes made from cheese which serve as a change in the ordinary diet. As it may be made at any time of the year where there is a surplus of milk, cheese making offers an exceptionally advantageous means of conserving for later use milk which might otherwise be wasted, suggest specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture.

fat but not the curd. Rennet is added in the proportion of one-third ounce, or two teaspoonfuls, to 100 pounds of milk. First dilute the rennet with a pint of cold water, then stir it in thoroughly, and leave the milk and container undisturbed for 30 minutes. Cut the curd when sufficiently firm; do not crush or break it. Stir the curd gently from fifteen to twenty minutes. Heat it at the rate of two degrees in five minutes until the temperature reaches 100 degrees F. Stir it while heating.

Hot-Iron Curd Test.

Allow the curd to remain in the whey at 100 degrees F. until firm and until enough acid has developed. Do not let the curd mat together. Sufficient acid has developed when the curd applied to a hot iron will form strings one-fourth to one-half inch long. The curd is firm enough if a handful of it pressed together between the hands falls apart readily when the pressure is released. Draw off the whey and put the curd on a draining rack which has been covered with a muslin cloth. Do not let the curd form into pieces larger than a hickory nut. Keep the curd warm while on the rack.

When the curd forms strings from three-fourths to one inch long on a hot iron, add salt at the rate of three ounces for ten pounds of the curd. Have the curd at a temperature of about 85 degrees F. Put it in a hoop lined with cheesecloth and apply pressure gently. Cheese hoops may be obtained from dairy supply houses. The cheesecloth is left on the finished cheese. After one and one-half hours the cheese should be taken out and dressed, that is, all wrinkles are taken out of the cheesecloth which covers it. When the cheese has been properly dressed it should be put back in the press and full pressure applied for 24 hours. Then the cheese is ready for the curing room where it remains at a temperature between 50 and 60 degrees for two weeks.

The cheese should be turned daily in the curing room until it is paraffined to prevent it from drying too much, and also to prevent molding. The paraffin is heated to a temperature of 240 degrees F. and the cheese rolled in it. After this has been done the cheese need be turned only twice a week. Cheese may be cured enough to be eaten when six weeks old; the flavor, of course, is then quite mild. Farmers' Bulletin 1191, "Making American Cheese on the Farm," gives many details of the process and equipment for cheese making.

GIVES GOOD PICKLE FLAVOR

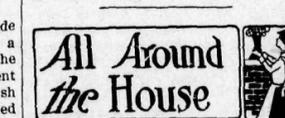

Spiced Vinegar is Frequently Valuable for Pickling—Herbs Useful for Garnish.

Spiced vinegar is used in making pickles, for flavoring gravies, potato salad, and similar dishes. For pickling it is especially valuable, as the flavor from spiced vinegar is the same all through the pickles, while if pepper, cloves, and dill are added directly to the pickles the flavor is more concentrated at the places where these spices are put. The herbs from which the spiced vinegar is made may be used as a garnish by mixing them in the pickle.

VEGETABLES NEED CLEANING

Much Care Should Be Exercised Whether Served Raw or Cooked—Use Brush on Potatoes.

Wash all vegetables with great care, whether served raw or cooked. Scrub large vegetables, such as potatoes and carrots with a brush. Greens should be washed leaf by leaf under running water, or in a large amount of water, until free from grit and visible dirt. In the latter case, any sand which clings to them is likely to sink. To prevent it from again getting on the vegetables lift them from the water instead of pouring the water off.

All Around the House

The sweetened omelet is often used as a dessert.

All canned meats and fish should be removed from the cans as soon as opened.

Try putting a piece of camphor ice away with your silver. It keeps it from tarnishing.

Allow two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder to each cupful of flour when no eggs are used.

Two parts of pork fat to one of beef fat form an excellent mixture in which to fry doughnuts.

Take a strip of adhesive plaster, write name and address in ink, and stick inside of your umbrella.

Put a little sand in the bottom of Chinese lanterns and they will not sway and will be less apt to take fire.

To cool food quickly fill the lower part of a double boiler with ice or cold water and place food in the upper part.

To empty the dustbag on a vacuum cleaner use a large manila paper bag. Insert the mouth of the dustbag well inside the paper bag and shake gently but thoroughly.

If a sheet of paraffin paper is put over the board before you roll your powdered sugar on it, you can lift the paper and sift off every bit of the sugar, thus losing none of it.

Try maple sugar with a few drops of maple flavoring in cornstarch pudding. Serve cold.

Yes it's toasted, of course. To seal in the flavor—

Buffalo Bill's Grave

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

YOU presumably know, as all good Americans should, that Buffalo Bill, Col. William F. Cody, is buried on Lookout Mountain in the Front range of the Colorado Rockies.

But do you know that more people visit Buffalo Bill's grave each year than go to the graves of Washington and Lincoln? Well, it is so. And there appears to be ground for the statement that within a few years Buffalo Bill's grave will be the most-visited grave in the world.

This is the way of it: The city and county of Denver have established the Denver Mountain parks, lying between the city and the peaks of the continental divide. There are 3,236 acres; the cost has been $477,850; there are 50 miles of roads. Lookout Mountain is one of the scenic features of these parks. The main automobile road, of which the Lariat trail is a part, climbs to its summit. Buffalo Bill's grave is on the east slope of Lookout Mountain, and is easily reached by a road that turns out at the Golden reservoir on the summit. Close by the grave the city has established a Buffalo Bill museum. In the summer of 1921 approximately 350,000 visitors entered the gates of the Denver Mountain parks. Of these visitors about one-quarter was from other states. Most of these out-of-state visitors stopped to see the grave and the museum. So much for the present.

The tourist business of the scenic West is increasing tremendously year by year. Denver is geographically the gateway to this scenic West with its twelve national parks and thirty-two national monuments. It is the starting point of the National Park-to-Park highway. Most visitors to Denver in the summer drive through the Denver Mountain parks. So, as the tourists grow in numbers, the visitors to Buffalo Bill's grave will increase.

The Buffalo Bill museum on Lookout mountain was opened to the public last Memorial day. The park officials report that it, in connection with Buffalo Bill's grave, has proved to be the most popular feature of the mountain parks this last summer.

Pahaska Tepee is the official name of the Buffalo Bill museum. The name is well taken. "Pahaska" is the name given Buffalo Bill by the Sioux Indians. The word means "Long Hair." The building is typically mountain style in construction. Within it are housed the personal relics and collections of Buffalo Bill. This was made possible through the interest and generosity of his widow, Mrs. Louisa M. Cody, to whom nearly the whole collection belongs. And the crowning touch of the museum is the fact that Johnny Baker is in charge of it—yes; the very same world's champion shotgun and rifle shot who was Buffalo Bill's right-hand man so many years in the show business.

Certain it is that no American youngster—to say nothing of the grownups—can pass by Pahaska Tepee without stopping. The museum houses a decidedly interesting collection. Some of these are:

The more important paintings of Buffalo Bill. Among these is the Papacena equestrian portrait, presented to the city of Denver. When the monument is erected over Buffalo Bill's times placed a ball near the lip of the hole and ten others at intervals behind it; then beginning with the tenth ball he lofts them one after the other over the stymie and into the hole. He began his golfing career as a caddy and at the age of sixteen was appointed professional at Brisbane.—Manchester Guardian.

Must Not Read Speech. The rule in the British house of commons is that speeches cannot be read. However, "copious notes" are allowed, and sometimes they become so "copious," as practically to amount to a complete address. If the member who attempts to read a speech is "young," that is, is new to the house, and especially if he is making his first effort, the house is usually indulgent, permitting him to go on, provided he somewhat conceals the fact that he is reading by keeping his manuscript on his desk and not making a display of it. Such breach of the rule is winked at. The rule, however, is no read speeches.

Modern Housekeeping. "Is your wife a good cook?" asked Smith. "I'll say she is!" replied Jones. "Gosh! You ought to taste her home brew!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

No Doubt. "You can't sell that man an encyclopedia." "Why not?" "He knows it all." "Well, he'll enjoy going over it for errors."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He Couldn't Have Stood That. "Remember Job—he was the most patient man who ever lived." "Yes, but don't forget one thing." "What is that?" "He never had to ride ten miles on a flat tire with a quarrelsome wife."

Save Them. The cores and peelings of the apples you use for pies need not be wasted. Boiling down with a small amount of water, a little sugar, two or three cloves, they make an excellent sauce or flavoring. This can be strained and bottled and kept long if put in a cool, dry place.

Cleaning Gloves. Soap and water will not clean your soiled kid gloves, but soap and milk will. Spread smoothly on a towel which has been folded several times. Dip a piece of clean flannel into the milk and then rub off some of the soap. With this rub the gloves downwards toward the fingers. Continue until the glove, if white, looks yellow, or if dark until it looks black.

Jet Pendants. Tulle, unadorned, except for a single jet ornament, is the newest in gossamer head wear—and vastly becoming to the face with which time has dealt gently.

PAPASKA TEPEE

WILLIAM F. CODY

grave, this painting will be done into bronze. The photograph given herewith gives an idea of how the equestrian statue will fit in with the surroundings.

Paintings of frontier life done for Buffalo Bill by noted artists in accordance with his descriptions of scenes and incidents.

The scalp of Yellow Hand and the knife with which Buffalo Bill killed the chief and lifted his scalp. Yellow Hand was a noted Cheyenne chief who took part in the Sioux war of 1876. Buffalo Bill was serving as a government scout. At the battle of Indian Creek the scout and the chief met in personal combat in full view of the contending forces. In those days it was the proper thing for a victor to "count his coups"; hence the scalp.

The gun used by Sitting Bull in the battle of the Little Big Horn; Sitting Bull's scalp, shirt and peace pipe. Sitting Bull (1837-90) was the famous Sioux chief who led the 6,000 Indians who wiped out Gen. George A. Custer, and his 277 men in 1876. He escaped to Canada, returned in 1890 and was killed in an attempt to rescue him from arrest.

"Lucretia Borgla," the rifle which gave Buffalo Bill his name. When the Union Pacific was being built the scout made a contract with the railroad company to furnish its laborers with meat. In eighteen months, 1867-8, Buffalo Bill is said to have killed 4,850 buffalo with this rifle in carrying out his contract.

Buffalo Bill's guns, saddles, bridles and personal ornaments, including many gifts made to him by Indian chiefs and by crowned heads in Europe.

Mementoes of the tours of the "Wild West Show" in Europe. Now, lest the younger generation should think of Buffalo Bill as merely an Indian fighter, buffalo killer and showman, here are the principal facts in his life, in brief: Born in 1846 in Scott county, Iowa; 1860, "Pony Express" rider; 1861-5, cavalry scout for the Union in Civil war; 1872, member Nebraska legislature; 1890-1, brigadier general Nebraska National Guard in Indian wars; 1891, organized Wild West show; 1901, president of Cody Military college, Wyoming; judge advocate general of Wyoming National Guard; president Shoshone Irrigation company; author of five books written between 1879 and 1916.

Municipal Facts, an official Denver publication, gives the following information of Pahaska Tepee and its purpose: The city of Denver, largely through the instrumentality of W. F. R. Mills, chairman of the mountain parks advisory commission, erected the museum building in accordance with an agreement with Johnny Baker, the world champion shotgun and rifle shot, who was with Colonel Cody in his show business from the time that Baker was seven years old. Mr. Baker operates the building as a concession, but no admission is ever to be charged to the Buffalo Bill museum.

Aside from the historical and romantic interest attached to the building through the collection, the structure itself is so absolutely suited to the purpose for which it was designed, that it seems to have been inspired. The structure is built of undressed pine logs, covered with hand-split shingles. The crowning feature of the building from an architectural standpoint, is the remarkable use made of gnarled and curved logs and branches, stumps and roots of trees. There is probably no chandelier in the world so unique as that which hangs from the two-story ceiling of the Tepee.

Heads and skins of wild animals hang from the walls and balcony rails. Two snarling wolves' heads gleam from recesses in the great stone fireplace. At the entrance an ancient buffalo skull, with the skin and hair partly adhering, bears the legend, "The Last of the Buffalo."

Aside from the museum features Pahaska Tepee fills a long-felt want in the mountain parks. For several years the park authorities of Denver have been desirous of establishing a pavilion somewhere in Lookout Mountain park, equipped with a high-class, popular-priced restaurant, for the convenience of Denver's residents and guests.

Fronting the plains is an immense balcony from which, with a pair of field glasses, one may look into the states of Wyoming, Nebraska and Kansas, the states that, with Colorado, were the stamping grounds of Buffalo Bill during his life as hunter and government scout. Denver stretches out on the plains, ten miles distant on an air line, and at night the lights of the city, twinkling in unison with the stars above, blaze in a wide diamond-studded bank from north to south. The view is superlative either by day or night; there are few views in America more interesting and impressive.

Eventually a monument to Colonel Cody is to be erected at his grave. The Cody Memorial association was raising funds for this purpose when America entered the war and, of course, the movement, like many similar ones throughout the country, had to be abandoned for the time being. It is expected that the association will now revive the project

TOOK HIS BREATH AWAY.

It was a chemistry class and the aged professor, who was anything but a light drinker, was doing a stock experiment, which consisted of blowing vigorously upon some blue crystals, whereupon they turned yellow. When he had finished he asked the class if they had any questions to ask.

"Yes, sir," came a voice from the back of the room. "Will anybody's breath do that?"—Judge.

Getting Down to Realities. "Father, speaking to you as an experienced quarterback, with a record of four years on the gridiron—"

"We are not using quarterbacks in this business," interrupted the self-made man. "If you can talk to me as a clerk who is ambitious to work his way up to a position of responsibility without any applause from the grandstand, I'll listen."

WELL NAMED

"Blank's wife's name is Crystal, isn't it?" "Yes; why?" "It suits her; she's always on the watch."

Best Place, Anyhow. "Go to the aunt, thou sluggard!" He went—she would give him no more. So he had to go to his uncle. Where of he had been before.

Supplementary Cover. "My friend," said the inquisitive person, "I see you have an armful of old newspapers."

"Your eyes do not deceive you, sir," replied the shabby citizen. "Ahem! What do you get out of them?" "Heat, sir. I sleep under 'em."

Her Decision. "So you've decided not to marry him."

"Yes." "What's the reason?" "I've thought it all over carefully, and reached the conclusion that he doesn't look like a man for whom I could darn socks."

Not Enough for Two. "Why did you quit smoking?" asked Bolt.

"Had to," answered Nut. "Since smoking has become fashionable my wife decided she would have to do it too, and I cannot afford to support two smokers on my salary."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Exception. "Are all the men in Crimmon Gulch good poker players?"

"All but me," replied Cactus Joe. "Isn't your ignorance disastrous?" "No. I'm the feller that gets criticised by the entire assemblage for being a winner in spite of the fact that I play my cards all wrong."

SHERLOCK BUG

Bug Detective—Ah, a foul deed has been done. I'll compare the finger prints and capture the criminal.

Didn't Start It. His wife reproved him sharply when he was razor cursed. "Why don't you scold the blade?" he said. "It lost its temper first."

Stops En Route. "Have you allowed for the stops in your contemplated tour?" "Not all," replied Mr. Chuggins. "We have a list of the hotels, but there's no reliable way of figuring on the station houses and repair shops."

Like Amateur Farmers. Ezra (with newspaper)—Says here, "fine-edged tools lose their temper if exposed to the light of the sun for a considerable length of time."

Uriah—Spose that's on account of them being mostly city-made, hey?—Buffalo Express.

Modern Housekeeping. "Is your wife a good cook?" asked Smith. "I'll say she is!" replied Jones. "Gosh! You ought to taste her home brew!"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

No Doubt. "You can't sell that man an encyclopedia." "Why not?" "He knows it all." "Well, he'll enjoy going over it for errors."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

He Couldn't Have Stood That. "Remember Job—he was the most patient man who ever lived." "Yes, but don't forget one thing." "What is that?" "He never had to ride ten miles on a flat tire with a quarrelsome wife."

HER BEST-LOVED FROCK BELONGS TO AFTERNOON

ALWAYS a volume could be written about some frocks—as about hats. The story is never all told until the season is over and gone—and before that time arrives, fashion has underway a sequel to follow. The best-loved of gowns is that one which makes a success of its wearer's afternoons. There is a long list of fabrics at hand to choose from including several crepe weaves, duvety velvet, satin, tulle and fine wools, but the accent just now is to be placed on crepe and velvet. The slim silhouette remains the favorite, with variations that take in tunics, straight line and bloused models, having long waistlines. The exception to the rule of the slim silhouette appears in those frocks with a quaint flavor of days gone by, that are made with light bodices and full skirts, or in others made on the lines of the handsome frock pictured. In this model the designer has made an overgarment, innocent of waist line and flaring in the skirt portion where panels are introduced at each side. He has pinned his faith to rich embroidery of silk and metal threads, placing it in borders and almost covering the front of the dress with it, and we can imagine the effect with duvety in a dark color as the foundation. There are many points in the autumn modes that give designers of afternoon frocks advantages. There is the featuring of sleeves, the uneven hem line, figured and plain crepes, beads, braids, fringes and embroidery all yearning to look their best on the frocks that must bear many comparisons.

THE NEW COATS SAY "WE AIM TO PLEASE"

"WE AIM to please" appears to be the motto that has governed the makers of our wraps for the coming winter season, for they have presented several distinctive styles in coats. You may choose a voluminous wrap, wide and full, or a cape-coat, wholly concealing the outlines of the figure, or a slim affair with snug-fitting hip line and long, bloused body, or a first cousin to the dolman or just an ample coat, but in all of them there is the flavor of the new season.

The materials used, however, are the same as those of last year or their direct descendants with new names, perhaps. Velours, chinchilla, bolivia, marveila, camel's-hair, cheviot and dayvet will account for the coats for the winter wear, at least, with velvet, like fur, doing service for both day and evening. Fur has been appropriated by all materials and on most of them is found in the company of embroidery, but the embroidery is used in novel ways, and new collars and sleeves seem to increase the importance of fur trimming. The handsome coat pictured shows how effectively it is used to finish off the full, bell sleeves and to make the new, straight high collar. This model is of velours, with braid embroidery.

When Beading Georgette. In embroidering and beading dresses stamp the design on the wrong instead of the right side of the material, then placing same in hoop or frame the work is done, leaving no anxiety as to the stamping showing.

Thursday Afternoon, Sept. 29, 1921. A FAVORED REGION

The Ocean County Shore is a favored region. The past summer has been the best it has ever known in a good many ways. Not everybody has got rich and not everybody has made a big summer's money, but it seems that at least, everybody has made a living.

This is a favored region, anyway. There is less real war here than any other section I ever visited; and there is more independence of thought and action, as well as more independence economically.

BACK TO RELIGION

(From the New York American) Surprising and encouraging is the news that our theological schools are either working for applications for admission this fall than had been expected.

Little has occurred recently to enhance the ministry as a lure to ambitious youth. It is still painfully underpaid. The hearts of the multitude have not yet been sufficiently humbled by adversity to give large increase of recognition to its claims of moral authority.

Yet young men are hastening once more to prepare for this precarious profession. This can only mean that the call of the world, of flesh and the devil is yielding, as in times of stress it always yields, to the call of the spirit.

Certainly our sad old world offers chances for high service to young men who can brave its perils and effectively point the path to better things.

If among the students now preparing to study for the ministry are only a few who will ripen into wise teachers and good exemplars of religion, the gain to society will be incalculable.

Benjamin R. Bowker spent a delightful visit at his old home here. He returned to his home at Jersey City Heights on Sunday.

Rally Day at both the Methodist and Presbyterian churches on Sunday next.

Rev. Pennington Corson and Joseph Couch went out on the bay crabbing on Monday, but they don't seem to hand out any information concerning the day's catch.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rutter motored to Howell on Sunday to visit their daughter who is teaching there. They returned on Monday.

Col. Colgate spent Saturday in town on business.

Autumn will continue until December 22nd.

There is a general complaint that the attendance at our churches for years has been gradually falling off. The cause is attributed partly to the automobile and other out door sports. There is no disputing the fact that the observance of Sunday these days is vastly different than say fifty or sixty years ago. When the writer was a school boy there was scarcely a boy or girl who did not attend Sunday school and church. We believe in moving along with the times, but can't we take the Church and Sunday School along with us. Religion never goes out of style. Christ's teachings are just as much for us as they were for the disciples who were with him when he was on earth.

When is an Oyster Really Ripe?

If Bivalve is Good September 1st, Why Wasn't He Eatable August 31st? Other Questions of Perplexing Nature. "September 1st" cried Jobbles, gleefully. "Oysters R in season."

up from the paper he was trying to read, "what are you fellows rattling about anyway?" "Jobbles wants to know why an oyster that's fit to eat today wasn't just as fit to eat yesterday," explained Gobbles.

Maybe they would have been all right yesterday—and maybe they wouldn't. What's the use of taking chances? Now leave me in peace."

Put into the Bank the Money you have put in the Fire

THIS is a characteristic of rich men: A rich man never hesitates to throw away old equipment if he can save money by doing so.

One of the richest bankers in the United States took out the ten-year old boiler from his cellar this Summer and installed a new heating plant made by this Company. Why? Because by doing so he can save about one-third of what he has been spending for coal.

Yet families of modest means go on heating their homes with old furnaces or stoves and suppose they are being economical.

It is false economy. You can put into the bank every winter one-third of what you are now putting into the fire.

You can—with ARCOLA. ARCOLA is the wonderful new heating invention for small homes, with or without basements, that takes the place of a furnace or stoves. By its one fire, connected with American Radiators, it fills every room with healthful hot-water warmth and provides an abundance of hot water for washing and bathing besides. It burns any kind of fuel.

One-third of your fuel is worth saving. See ARCOLA today.

The red and yellow card at the right is the sign of a Heating or Sanitary Engineer (formerly called Steamfitter or Plumber) who can show you ARCOLA. Look for it in his window.

It will pay you to consult him twice a year as you do your Doctor or Dentist. To have him examine and report on your heating and plumbing costs little. It may save you a very great deal.

$10,000,000 AID FOR VETERANS

Red Cross Provides Friendly Service of Many Kinds to Army of Disabled.

BULK OF WORK BY CHAPTERS 2,397 of These Are Helping Ex-Servicemen Obtain Benefits U. S. Provides.

One field of Red Cross service alone, that of assisting disabled veterans of the World War, entails expenditures $4,000,000 greater than the aggregate receipts of the Annual Roll Call of 1920, the American Red Cross announces in a statement urging a wide-spread increase in membership at the Annual Roll Call, November 11 to 24.

At the present time National Headquarters and the nation-wide chain of Chapters of the Red Cross is spending approximately $10,000,000 annually for the relief of disabled ex-servicemen and their families, while the aggregate receipts from last year's Roll Call were approximately $5,000,000.

It is in the 2,289 of the 8,600 Red Cross Chapters which still are helping solve the veteran's problem of adjusting himself to a normal civilian status that the greater part of the cost of this service is borne. Of the total sum spent for veterans' relief last year, National Headquarters expended a total of more than $2,600,000, while the remaining disbursement of approximately $7,000,000 represents the contribution of Chapters in this country-wide effort to assist the Government in providing the aid sorely needed by these men and their families.

An Ever Expanding Problem That the problem of the disabled serviceman is ever-expanding and probably will not reach the peak before 1925, is the assertion of well-informed Government officials and that 2,397 Red Cross Chapters regard it as their most important work is evidence that the expansion is, in no wise confined to a particular section but is, on the contrary, nation-wide. At the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1921, there were 26,800 disabled servicemen in the 1,692 United States Public Health Service, Contract and Government Hospitals and Soldiers Homes, and that number is increasing at a rate of 1,000 a month.

Thousands of these men receiving medical treatment, compensation and vocational training from the Government today, started their efforts to obtain them through the Red Cross Chapter. The Chapter, acting as the disabled man's agent in claims against the Government, informs the man as to the procedure necessary to gain for him that which is provided him by Federal statute. His applications for compensation, medical treatment and training are properly filed with the aid of the Red Cross Chapter.

Many Forms of Assistance If there is delay before the man's claim is acted upon, the Red Cross Chapter lends the man money to meet the imperative needs of himself and his dependents.

Most vital to the man's gaining full benefit from the Government's care is keeping his mind free from worry about his home. Keeping the veteran's family from hardship of every kind and informing him of its welfare is another province of the Chapter. Free from fear on this score, the man's recovery and advancement usually is rapid.

Every month during the last year, the American Red Cross has given service of one kind or another to an average of 129,215 former service men and their families. An indication of the extent of the faith reposed in the Red Cross Chapter is to be found in the fact that there were 356,544 requests for friendly aid in the solution of personal problems.

448 Workers in Hospitals While the man prior to entering Government care deals largely with the Chapter, afterward he comes into contact with the service provided by National Headquarters. There are 448 Red Cross workers in the United States Public Health Service and contract hospitals and other institutions in which these men are being cared for, whose duty is to provide for his recreation, help him with his compensation claims, keep him in touch with his family; in short, meeting his every need outside of that provided by the Government. While these are a few of the responsibilities of the National Organization, they are by no means all. Among other Red Cross accomplishments for the year are:

It handled 70,732 allotment and allowance claims. It delivered through its Chapter organization 63,655 allotment checks to veterans who had moved from the addresses furnished to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. It provided a special fund of $10,000 for medical assistance to men under vocational training. It made 32,495 loans totaling $450,000 to men taking vocational training, of which 85 per cent has been repaid.

Early Irish Coin. One of the early coins in Ireland was the eagle, made of base metal and current about 1272, but an earlier coin was the farthing, made of silver, during the reigns of King John, and now very rare and of great value.

Ambitious Medical Student Was Slightly Too Precipitate in Jumping to His Conclusions.

"After the first crash," imparted the first hospital surgeon to the second, "I ran over to where it lay on the pavement; and when I raised it up, I saw at once that its ribs were smashed, while a gaping hole was torn in it—"

Do you discriminate at the dining table—or are you thoughtless?

In thousands of homes, a "line" is drawn at the breakfast table. Tea or coffee is served for "grown-ups" and Postum for children. But some parents do not discriminate. Caffeine and tannin, the injurious contents of coffee and tea, seriously retard the development of the delicate nerve tissues in children.

Consequently, instead of rich, satisfying Postum, children are overstimulated by the drugs in tea and coffee; and so may grow up irritable and nervous. Any doctor can tell you that this is a great evil and should be corrected.

Although some parents feel a certain justification for the personal indulgence in coffee, yet the harm to them may be equally serious. It may take a little while longer for the drugs in coffee and tea to affect

625,000 BOTTLES SOLD IN NEW YORK

Biggest Thing of Kind Ever Seen in That State, Declares Big Wholesaler.

The fact that 625,000 bottles of Tanlac have been sold in the state of New York since its introduction there less than one year ago, is a big business item that will attract unusual attention throughout the entire East, for nothing like it has ever happened before. It breaks all records.

Mr. George B. Evans, manager of the Gibson-Snow Company, the well-known wholesale druggists, with branches in Albany, Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse, recently announced that the preparation was now selling in their trade territories alone at the phenomenal rate of approximately 500,000 bottles a year.

"If the present rate continues," said Mr. Evans, "this rate alone will probably require considerably over 750,000 bottles a year. This is a tremendous figure, but I am really conservative in making this statement."

A Career and a Name

By H. OXLEY STENGEL.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"Baltimore, Chicago, St. Louis, Paris, Sacramento, New York, New York, New York, Charleston, Charleston," murmured Elizabeth, as she quickly turned over the neat pile of letters and glanced at the postmark or handwriting on each. With a deep sigh she spread her snowy napkin and began on her grapefruit.

It distinctly annoyed Elizabeth to realize that she had expected a postmark and handwriting which were not represented in the morning's mail—that she had been expecting a certain letter for a month.

"But it would be the least he could do to write a note," she defended, "and he must know about—"

"Good morning, Miss Elizabeth." Martha's silent entrance through the swinging door had not been observed by the girl. She glanced up quickly. The face of the woman told her nothing.

"Good morning, Martha. My, how good your waffles look!" and Elizabeth managed a bright smile.

"But she didn't eat 'em like they were any better than ordinary cooks bake 'em," she never read a single one of the letters—not even Mr. Jack's," mused Martha when, on returning later, she first surveyed the plate from which only one golden-brown waffle was missing and then the retreating figure of the slender girl. "She's just a working to steady in that little study o' her's turning out stories that the editor men are that eager to get now. Old Martha sure is proud of her child if we did have to come to New York an' this here apartment that don't give breathing space an' could be set down an' lost in the old mansion in Charleston. But who was it didn't write to her? Everybody must know—and to think of her caring so."

Settled in her study, Elizabeth resolutely tore open her mail as a duty which must be performed before she turned to the day's program of work. "Freedom," her first book, had been out but a short time, and relatives and friends—as well as publishers—were congratulating her upon its instant success. All except Tom Harrison. Oh, well, one couldn't expect everything in this life! But why was there no thrill? She had hoped the book would be popular and had counted upon these very letters as proof that she had not made a mistake in choosing a career and New York for its setting.

When left alone by the sudden death of her father—so soon after that of her invalid mother, Elizabeth had wanted to get away from the terrible loneliness. There had been much opposition to her plans upon the part of relatives and friends—again with one exception. Tom Harrison had been sure she would succeed. His belief in her had encouraged Elizabeth against every discouragement mere editors could inflict. And now the letter were seeking her stories.

She read her cousin Jack's letter last. It was brief and meant to remind her that she had promised to dine with him on Thursday and go to the theater later. He would congratulate the successful author in person. He would arrive from Baltimore at five and come right out.

Elizabeth glanced at her calendar. Today was Thursday. She must settle down to work at once upon the serial promised this week.

Five o'clock found her still laboring. Martha had brought in luncheon on a tray and had fretted and fumed over "her child losing all her good looks sitting over a desk." As in a dream, Elizabeth heard the ring at the door and a familiar voice—but it was not until she was confronted by Jack himself, that she remembered he was due.

"A fine way to keep an engagement! Pardon the interruption—but hasn't a fellow a right to intrude upon time promised to him?"

"O, Jack, how glad I am to see you! I had no idea of the time—truly. It is just finished," Elizabeth sprang up to greet him.

"I suppose a fellow should count himself lucky to get any time with a popular young author."

"Not every one does," Elizabeth retorted rather vehemently.

"And so some chap doesn't know when he is lucky?"

"Don't, Jack, please! Amuse yourself and I'll be ready shortly."

Jack "amused" himself by going out to the kitchen and inquiring of Martha regarding the care Elizabeth was taking of herself.

"No care at all, Mr. Jack. She don't even eat! Works too hard an' something's worrying her."

When Elizabeth entered the book-lined living room Jack, observing her worn look, exclaimed: "It isn't worth it, Fuss, not even for fame. Come on when they grace a ball dress or are strung on a necklace. Of course, the most costly gems are not thus used, the specimens employed being small. Watch manufacturers of the United States use annually several millions of jewels, and makers of certain classes of instruments also make use of jewels in large quantities. There is, in fact, a steady increase in the number of jeweled bearings applied by instrument-makers to such devices as recording and other electrical meters, gauges, etc.

A Frog Concert. As I sat on the piazza that evening, I noticed first an ominous absence of bird voices, and next the presence of a numerous frog population about the little lake close by. The musical performances of these voluble reptiles began about sunset and increased in volume and power till nothing else could be heard. If all the thrushes in the state had assembled in that spot and sung their loudest, they could not have been heard above the awful volume of frog voices.—Olive Thorne Miller.

Chinese Condemns Bribe. There is a famous oriental saying condemning bribery. It is said that an ancient Chinese sage who lived in the Second century was offered a bribe. His silence being accepted as hesitation, he was assured that he was perfectly safe, as no one knew it. He replied: "Heaven knows it. Earth knows it. You know it. I know it. How can you say that no one knows it?"

Autograph Collecting Old. Emmett Campbell Hall writes in the New York Evening Post that autograph collecting is of very ancient origin, and the first authentic collector was no less illustrious a person than Cleero, who had a fine collection, of which he spoke with gratification. Pliny had a valuable collection, and he mentions one Pompeius Secundus, who had a much finer one, including autographs of Cleero, Augustus, Virgil and Gracchus. Then came the barbarians, and nothing more is heard of autograph collecting until the beginning of the Sixteenth century, when, about the year 1507, a Bohemian nobleman began keeping a book in which he recorded his hunting exploits, and to which are added the autographs of the friends and guests who participated with him in the chase.

Jewels Used in Industries. Jewels are usually thought of as ornamental, but in one form they are employed purely utilitarian. As bearings for watches and other small machines they are no less valuable than and play with me. I've something to tell you, too." They chose a small but gay restaurant.

"Elizabeth," said Jack when they were sipping their coffee, "I know you can tell a love story better than I, but I think mine will interest you. I wanted this chance to tell you."

Elizabeth looked startled and then greatly relieved as he went on. "Lucy is just a dear little girl—not gifted like you, Fuss, but she has made me the happiest man alive."

It was not until they were on their way home in a taxi after the play that Elizabeth asked in a voice which she tried to make sound casual: "Do you often see or hear from Tom Harrison, Jack?"

"Yes, indeed. I go by to see him every day now. But you treat him mighty 'rough,' Elizabeth."

"You go by to see him every day?—I treat him—why, Jack!"

"Can it be that you don't know where he is, Elizabeth?"

"Why, in Washington, of course."

"It is just a month since his operation in Baltimore. His friends have been allowed to see him for two weeks."

Even in the dim light in the taxi Jack saw Elizabeth suddenly turn white.

"Is—is he out of danger, Jack? Oh, why didn't he let me know?"

"Yes, he is out of danger and he did let you know—he told me so himself."

"But I never got his letter."

Jack gave Elizabeth a searching look. She turned away her face. "Fuss," he asked, "is Tom the chap you thought wasn't counting himself lucky, and was he what was worrying you? 'Cause if so, you're the only 'cure' he needs now."

"How do you know that, Jack?" Elizabeth's voice was eager.

"Oh, Tom didn't tell me or the doctor, but a lawyer who is in love knows certain symptoms, I guess. Your book is just an excuse to get me to talk about you every time I see him. My, but he is proud of you, Fuss, but your not writing letters has cut mighty deep. You'll write him now, won't you?"

"No, Jack; it might get lost. I'm going to Baltimore in the morning."

Tom Harrison's recovery was very rapid after receiving the new "cure," on Friday afternoon. It was only a matter of weeks—during which Elizabeth always found a certain letter on her breakfast table—before a tall, pale, young man presented himself at five o'clock on Thursday afternoon to keep a dinner engagement with the young author of "Freedom." She had been ready and waiting for an hour.

The love story which he told over the coffee cups was the sweetest Elizabeth had ever heard.

"But I don't care at all about freedom for myself," she insisted again and again, "and the only name I want is—Harrison."

NEEDED VARIETY IN FOODS

Necessity for Properly Balanced Meals is Something That is Not Generally Understood.

Many attacks of illness would be prevented if we gave our foods the proper attention. Correct eating habits will obliterate doctor bills and do more toward promoting longevity. Therefore the subject of eating should be given our most careful attention.

We all need foods containing protein, such as meat, eggs, cereals, beans, milk, etc. Adults need protein to restore used tissue in working, living and breathing. Growing children require it to furnish them with bone and muscle tissue. At least one-fifth of the meal should consist of protein foods.

Carbohydrates are very essential. These are found in starchy vegetables, such as potatoes and cereals, sugar, honey or fresh fruits. Carbohydrates furnish energy and heat to the body and should be about two-fifths of the meal. Fats also give heat and energy to the body. Food containing fats are butter, salad oils, milk, nuts, oleomargarine, etc.

Mineral foods are needed to strengthen the bone, teeth, hair and nails. Foods that are strong in minerals are the yolks of eggs, meat, rolled oats, fruits and vegetables. They keep body processes in order. The body also requires a liberal amount of good drinking water, which most of us neglect.

A well-balanced meal should consist of some food from each class. Don't try to balance each meal, but make an effort to balance your meals for each day.—Thrifty Magazine.

Choosing Plants Alike in Varietal Character and Earliness.

When Plants Have Fully Ripened Avoid Shattering in Pulling and Hang in Airy, Dry Place Until Seed is Quite Hard.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The best seed of beans and peas is to be obtained by marking a few of the finest plants with a bit of cloth at the beginning of the harvesting season and allowing the crop of these plants to ripen completely, say experts of the United States Department of Agriculture.

In making such selections it is best to choose plants alike in varietal character and earliness. When ripened until dry, pull these plants in the early morning, in order to avoid shattering, and hang or spread them in an airy, dry place until the seed is quite hard. Then shell the seed, spread it out not over two or three grains deep, and when thoroughly dry, store it for the winter in bags of coarse open-meshed fabric hung in a cool, dry place.

Pods which for any reason have been overlooked when picking beans or peas for the table should be saved, since they can be shelled for seed, though inferior to the selected stock described above. In saving seed from remnant crops of this kind it is well to discard all pods containing only one or two seeds, as these may have come from plants with a tendency to produce poorly filled pods.

Some very destructive bean diseases, including pod-spot, are carried in the seed; so it is extremely important to observe the general rule that no seed should be saved from diseased plants when saving beans for seed. Never save seed from pods which are not bright and clean.

SOLVE EGG-MARKETING PROBLEM THROUGH CO-OPERATIVE METHODS

Co-operative Marketing Has Made Egg Production a Business Instead of a "Side Line" With Many Poultrymen.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

From 26 local egg circles which left the problem still unsolved, to a statewide egg-marketing association with central offices in Portland, is the step taken by poultrymen in Oregon in solving the egg-marketing problems. The story, officials of the bureau of markets and crop estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture believe, points a lesson for egg producers in other parts of the country. Recent reports of the success of the association were received by the bureau with much interest, as being an outgrowth of community egg circles along lines advocated by the department.

Egg circles, they say, are good to start small groups of producers along the right course, but do not solve the larger egg-marketing problems, for as soon as a circle grows to such a size as to handle a half carload of eggs it becomes a real business proposition.

Handle Eggs for Few Producers. The circles in Oregon were organized in the leading poultry-producing sections and each operated independently of the others for a while, selling their eggs to Portland produce dealers or to private customers, such as hotels and restaurants. They found however, that they were still helpless and had very little control over their products. Some eight or ten circles near Salem co-operated through the Salem circle manager, but the business was so small it was not very encouraging. Things went from bad to worse, and it was decided to form an exchange with offices in Portland to which all the circles could consign their eggs.

This move was ridiculed by produce dealers, for they knew the farmers were not under contract with the circles or the exchange; the dealers, therefore, would be able to obtain their supply of eggs by offering higher prices at the country buying points than the exchange could realize on the market. During the egg-storage season some of the firms paid more in the country, and, as they predicted, the exchange practically failed, and it appeared for a time that co-operation in the poultry business was at an end in Oregon.

A study was made of the Poultry Producers' association of central California, which was more successful, and as a result after a year's effort, the Oregon producers launched forth again to do their own business on a new basis. A state-wide membership campaign was undertaken, and the producers were asked to join the association and sign a three-year contract, or marketing agreement, whereby their whole production was to be delivered to the association to be marketed. These contracts and the storage of surplus production during the storage season placed the association in position to be an important factor in the Portland market.

Modern methods of grading, packing and standardization were adopted, and all eggs are now candled and graded into three classes. Those which are of the finest quality are put under the Diamond brand, while No. 2's, which contain off colors, under-dried and off-shaped eggs, are graded out; No. 3's are sold to the bakery trade. The business during the year was expected to reach a volume of approximately 2,000,000 dozen.

During the present season the association has shipped several cars each week to eastern markets, thus keeping the Portland market clear of surplus and in a stable condition. The success of the association has been so great and the increase in business so rapid that as recently as February no new members were being admitted, although applications at the rate of 30 a day were received. The reason for closing the membership temporarily was that they were storing eggs and the finances of the association did not permit handling additional supplies from new members.

Organized on Co-operative Basis. The association is organized on a co-operative basis, with both common and preferred stock. Each member is obliged to purchase a $10 share of common stock for each 100 hens or fraction thereof. The preferred stock carries no vote and is limited to an 8 per cent cumulative dividend. Some $40,000 preferred stock has been sold and is being retired by a levy of one-half cent on each dozen eggs. The operating expenses of the association are paid out of a charge of 3 cents for each dozen eggs received.

So successful has been this association in the southern portion of the state that a similar organization has been formed, with headquarters at Ashland.

The Department of Agriculture is encouraging egg producers in other parts of the country to form similar associations for disposing of their wares. The success of the Oregon organization, it believes, can be achieved in any other community where the producers go about it in a businesslike fashion. Organized marketing along right lines, it says, has been found to be satisfactory to all concerned.

Watch for Diseases. Notice the yard, the chicken houses and barns carefully. See that no foul places are left to breed disease germs that cause sickness. Health is better than wealth and often the direct cause of it, and ill-health the lack of it.

Get Rid of Weed Pests. Now is a good time to get rid of weed pests. If it is possible to cut weeds or plow land badly contaminated with them this should be done. Every weed destroyed now will save trouble and reduce expenses later. Destroy them.

Start of Poultry Disease. Sickness or disease usually starts in unclean quarters, and in such places lice and mites are always more plentiful.

HOME TOWN HELPS

QUESTION OF TREE PLANTING

Problem is Worthy of Very Much More Consideration Than is Usually Given It.

What kind of tree should one plant beside one's home? asks Good House-keeping. Obviously it should be a fast grower. Also it should be ornamental. Preferably it should give a shade that is lofty and not too dense. A productive tree will answer as well as one that is merely ornamental. If a grafted tree is planted rather than a seedling it will produce in a very few years.

Nut trees are both ornamental and productive. The black walnut and the pecan seem to be well suited to this sort of planting. Why not try one or the other, or possibly both, one on each side of the house?

The black walnut is a rapid grower, reaches large size, and has foliage of great beauty. A mature tree will produce a great quantity of nuts. The pecan is also large and beautiful, as well as long-lived. Among the most beautiful and stately of the trees at Mount Vernon are pecan trees planted by George Washington and still in excellent condition. Commonly one thinks of the pecan as a tree for warm latitudes only. Both it and the English walnut will thrive much farther north than is commonly supposed. For planting near the house, then, the black walnut or the pecan or a good shagbark tree would be an excellent choice. The foliage of the walnut is always beautiful and in the fall the leaves of both the hickory and the pecan are symphonies in brown.

ECONOMIC VALUE OF PAINT

Great Mistake to Imagine That the Only Use of the Brush is for Ornamentation.

Observation in most localities leaves the impression that too many buildings suffer from lack of painting. A great many property owners seem to assume that the use of the paint brush is the special prerogative of the rich, that it holds no advantage for the average man, if he can forego the pleasure of having ornamentation about. But painting is not chiefly valuable for ornamentation. It is chiefly valuable for sanitation, greater life, better service.

While paint does, of course, serve to improve the appearance of property, it is far more useful for protection than for ornament. A small amount of money and work expended in keeping a valuable piece of machinery painted will greatly add to its length of life. The same may be said of buildings.

Another useful object which is accomplished by painting is the improved sanitary condition of buildings and outhouses. The cost of such work (painting) is small, the necessary equipment is not expensive, and with proper care this will last a lifetime.

Beacons for Motorists. The flashing beacon used on the high seas by the leading nations of the world is now to be used as a highway guide for motorists.

Like the beacon at sea, the city traffic is an unwatched light, automatic in operation for months at a time. Fuel is supplied by an acetylene gas accumulator in the base.

To these beacons and highway light-houses is applied the national system of colors approved by the committee of standards of the American Association of State Highway Officials, and by other national organizations and many cities in the United States. Red is used for first degree danger, yellow for second degree, and green for traffic danger only.

Two hundred cities are reported to have standardized on this national color signaling, which is that of the railroad systems, and almost as many have made installation of the flashing light traffic beacon as an effective warning for drivers who are partially, or wholly, color blind, and those who find it hard to distinguish the ordinary signal from other city lights.

The flashing beacon is the invention of Dr. Gustav Dalen, winner of the Nobel prize in physics in 1912.—From The Motor.

Advantages of City Planning. "City planning is merely a common sense set of rules and regulations for the city's growth," declares Charles A. Favrot, an ardent advocate of the proposed "City Planning Commission."

"A city plan shows where homes should be built, where industries should be located, and how traffic should be regulated so as to carry people from one part of the city to another with the minimum delay, while at the same time protecting the city's paving and the lives of its children."

Diamonds in China. The gold mining bureau of Kwang-shan, Kirin province, China, has discovered deposits of diamonds in a gold mine now being worked, says Millard's Review. The stones are large and of an appreciable fineness, and specialists have given the opinion that the deposit is worth while as a working proposition.

Center of Perfume Industry. The center of the natural perfume industry has been for many years in Grasse, France. Here each year more than 5,000,000 pounds of orange blossoms, 4,000,000 pounds of roses, 1,400,000 pounds of jasmine, 800,000 pounds of violets and 80,000 pounds each of tuberose and cassia are used.

Viola Dana

Perhaps out of consideration of the feelings of her parents, Viola Dana, the dainty star, waited until she was quite grown up before going on the stage. Her first public appearance—she made her debut as a dancer—did not come, therefore, until Miss Dana was fully five years old. She was born in Brooklyn; has two sisters, both on the screen—Shirley Mason and Edna Flugrath.

THE FIREFLIES

ONE night when the fairies came scampering out to play at the last sound of the last stroke of midnight they found their queen talking with a moonbeam fairy.

Instead of joining in the revels as was her custom, she kept on with her chat with the little silvery fairy who seemed to have much to tell her.

All the hetering, skittering little winds were tumbling over one another in a game of tag with the Dust Fairies, and the Water Fairies were flying hither and thither playing at hide and seek.

But after a while they began to wonder what the Moonbeam Fairy was telling the Queen, and when she beckoned to them, as she did just then, they ran to her side eager to listen to what the little visitor was saying.

"It was last night that I decided to tell you about them," the Moonbeam Fairy was saying, "for I did not know before how lonely they are."

"How would you like some new playmates?" asked the Queen when the fairies gathered around her. "Moonbeam Fairy has been telling me about the Star Fairies who watch us all down here and want to visit us at night and join in our revels."

"They are very bright little creatures," said the Moonbeam Fairy, "but they are very lonely for you. See, even the Moonbeam Fairies run down on the earth at night and they have no one up there to visit.

"So I stopped on my way home last night to chat with them awhile and it was then they asked me if I thought the Queen would take them into her big family and let them run down the Moonbeam path with us each night to the earth."

"What do you say, my children?" asked the Queen. "Shall we welcome the Star Fairies into our family?"

"Oh, yes, dear Queen, let them come," said all the little Fairies, clapping their hands and dancing about their Queen; "and why not send for them tonight while the Moonbeam path is bright and then they will not trip coming along?"

"Very well," said the Queen, "tell the Star Fairies that I will welcome them for the summer months. That is when we have our gayest revels."

So the little Moonbeam Fairy hastened away to tell the lonely little Star Fairies the good news, and down they came flickering and twinkling with joy over their good fortune.

All this happened a very long, long time ago, and if you have any doubt about this story being a really true one watch the stars smiling up in the sky as the Star Fairies fly hither and thither during the summer for though we mortals call them fireflies, the Earth Fairies call them their friends from far-away Land, the Star Fairies.

CHILDREN'S MANNERS

Whatever you do, do wisely and think of the consequences.—Lester Romanoum.

THE minute a child begins to eat with the assistance of its own small hands, the first lesson in table manners must begin. There is little excuse for the disgusting table manners of some children. They are due, really, to the fact that the mother or other caretaker finds it less trouble to let the child search aimlessly for its small mouth than to insist that it locate it daintily, surely and without experiment.

A very small child can be taught to eat nicely. Teach it that spotted bibs are beneath contempt. Patiently show it how to hold its spoon and cup, and help it to eat slowly. The lesson is a hard one for the teacher as well as for the child. But perseverance is the only way. And once the child has learned to eat daintily, the slovenly ways of untrained children when they are eating will be as distasteful to it as you would find them in a grown person.

Remember that children ape the manners of their elders. For this reason the greatest care should be used in the choosing of nursemaids, governesses or any one else who comes in constant contact with the child. Many well known men have talked, when excited, to their dying day in the brogue or burr of their childhood nurses.

And who can doubt that much of the gentleness of character and strength of spirit of Robert Louis Stevenson were inspired in him by the dear old nurse to whom he dedicated his "Child's Garden of Verse"?

The imitative method is the easiest whereby a child may acquire its manners. The small boy who adores his gallant father seldom forgets to take off his hat and stand in the presence of women. The small girl who looks up to her mother with affection is the pattern of loving courtesy to her father. Children often affect the graces of their elders in a most laughable way. But don't laugh at them. They will outgrow this priggishness. It is only a case of their imitative acquisition of manners.

It is the vogue of the day for small girls, up to the age of ten or twelve, to curtsy when they meet their elders. After that they, like small boys, stand and shake hands. It is also proper for children to be quiet and unobtrusive when they are in the company of grown-ups.

Some of the set rules of children's manners, like these, they cannot learn by imitation. But if they are courteous, thoughtful and happy they will take an interest in acquiring these little superficial manners that will make their acquisition easy.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"DIFFERENT FROM, THAN, TO."

IT IS quite common to hear or read sentences containing the word "different" followed by from, and never by than or to. One hears, "Yours is a very different case than his," whereas the proper form is "Yours is a very different case from his." One hears also, "I have heard your story, and John's is different to it," or "differs from it." The Standard dictionary says that the use of different to is an undesirable English colloquialism.

The word "different" denotes distinction or contrast (indicated by the use of from), while comparison is shown by than; thus, "My hat is different from yours, but your hat is better than mine." (Copyright.)

THE UMBRELLA.

THE modern umbrella is a lineal descendant of the gorgeous canopies which slaves carried to shield the royalties of old from the sun. The folding umbrella, to protect against rain was not generally used till about 1752. Even then it was an object of ridicule. BOBBY'S JAM

BELLE WITKIN.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Peggy's eyes flashed resentfully. Just because Howard Milwood owned half of the town of Milwood was no reason why his daughter should patronize her.

"You must come up to the festival, dear," Betty Milwood was saying kindly—too kindly. "Several young college men will be there, and I'm sure you'll have a good time."

Then she added rather self-consciously, "Did I tell you Kent Wayne was to be there—yes—the Kent Wayne of New York. He is so interesting and so devoted."

Little Peggy's eyes opened wide. Kent Wayne, the artist, at Betty's charity festival!

Betty smiled in anticipation as she thought of Kent. He would be devoted, of course, and she would stroll carelessly about with him. The entire town of Milwood would be duly impressed.

She walked along so absorbed in her thoughts that she did not see a low, black roadster spin up the road in the direction from which she came. Had she seen the gray-capped, tweed-coated driver she might have not been so complacent.

The athletic-looking young man in the motor had seen her, however, and whispered a fervent prayer of thanksgiving when she passed without seeing him.

He rode slowly along enjoying the fine spring day until he came to what he involuntarily called "a picture of wistfulness." Peggy, sitting on the steps, was thinking disconsolately of her scanty wardrobe.

"I suppose the old organist will have to do—and my old hat," she thought. "Well, at least, that is pretty if it is last year's."

Then she became aware of someone standing at the front gate of the little house and looking at her.

Brown eyes, fortified by the smile, looked at gray eyes. Then, his hat in hand, he approached and said, "I beg your pardon, Miss, but my engine needs water badly; that is, it won't run without it, and I—may I have some?"

"Yes, certainly. Don't you want to come in?"

Wayne followed into the long, cool kitchen, where it took him an extraordinarily long time to get a drink.

Wayne had entirely forgotten his "thirsty" engine and was racking his brains for an excuse to linger when there came a dull, ominous crash, followed by a cry from above.

Peggy started.

"Oh, my goodness, what's that!" she exclaimed, entirely forsaking her attitude of calm dignity.

Seated on the bottom stair and gazing tearfully upon a heartless world sat Bobbie, aged six.

"Oh, Bobs," she gasped, "tell us how it happened?"

"Well," said Bobbie, still sobbing, "I—I went to the pantry 'n I—I got some jam—just a teeny, weeny bit. Peggy, honest, 'n then I—"

"You what, Bobbie?"

"I heard you coming 'n I was afraid you'd think jam isn't good for little boys," said Bobbie, very innocently.

Peggy tried to look severe.

"Well?"

It developed that Bobbie had taken a small glass of jam upstairs in preparation for a lonely feast, had dropped it over the banisters and, in panic, had taken the quickest way downstairs, which was not by way of his feet.

Satisfied that he was not hurt, Peggy took him into the kitchen, washed his face, kissed the bruise on his arm to make it "all well" and sent him out to play.

Kent, now recovered, suddenly remembered the errand which had brought him to Milwood, and much against his inclination, took his leave. Peggy watched him out of sight and smiled wisely to herself as she thought: "Water for the engine—but I wonder why he didn't give his name? But then, he doesn't know mine, either."

In which she was mistaken.

The day of the festival came at last. Peggy started out for Betty's home.

As she drew near, she caught sight of a familiar roaster at the entrance to the Milwood grounds. She entered the grounds and was at once carried off by a group of friends to one of the tables where refreshments were being served.

Suddenly the chatter of the girls ceased and someone next to Peggy whispered, "There, Jook—quick, Peg! That's Kent Wayne, the artist."

Peggy looked, then looked again. It was the young man of the roadster and he was coming in her direction. Then he was at the table and she heard him speaking:

"Miss Carter, may I see you for a moment?" They sat in the garden for a long time; then there was dancing on the pavilion. After that there was a strawberry supper, and later in the evening Kent saw Peggy saucily wave good-by.

Milwood saw a great deal of Kent Wayne after that, and the gossips nodded their heads wisely when Kent and Peggy were seen together in the black roadster with Bobbie perched on Kent's knee, blissfully running the car "all by himself" as he later boasted to his admiring friends.

Are You Prepared?

A doctor in the house all the time would be a good idea. Yet you can't afford to keep a doctor in the family to keep baby well or prevent sickness. But you can do almost the same thing by having at hand a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria, because it is a wonderful remedy for indigestion, colic, feverishness, fretfulness and all the other disorders that result from common ailments that babies have.

Fletcher's Castoria is perfectly safe to use. It is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. Children cry for Fletcher's Castoria, and mothers recommend it because they have found it a comfort to children and a mother's friend.

If you love your baby, you know how sweet it is to be able to help baby when trouble comes. You cannot always call upon a doctor. But doctors have nothing but good to say of Fletcher's Castoria, because they know that it can only do good—that it can't do any harm—and they wouldn't want you to use for baby a remedy that you would use for yourself.

There are all kinds of rumors around that the Bay bridge, from Washington street, Toms River, to Seaside Heights, will be closed for repairs a little later this fall. There are many planks that must be replaced, and in some places new piling and caps will be needed. It is said that the engineers have concluded it will be less interruption to travel to close the bridge completely for a while than to try to keep it open and drag the work along.

CEMETERY COPING FUND CONTRIBUTIONS OF PAST TWO WEEKS

It is interesting to hear these ladies tell of the added improvements they are planning for the cemetery. The total sum to date is about $702, and they are expecting the Bazaar, which is to be held in a few weeks, to bring in a few hundred more, if the people respond as they should. After the coping is completed they expect to erect a small building on or near the grounds where bodies being brought on the train can be sheltered and services held, or to be used in any other way the ladies see fit.
