SAVING OF BARNEGAT LIGHT UP TO LIGHTHOUSE CHIEF

Friends of Barnegat lighthouse continue their campaign to save that historic structure and United States Senator Frelinghuysen and Congressman Appleby have never ceased in their efforts to have the lighthouse protected from the swift currents at the inlet to the Barnegat bay.

G. R. Putnam, the lighthouse commissioner, has made his third visit to Barnegat City, and it is believed he favors spending $100,000 to save the light. He was accompanied by Congressman Appleby. At the conference two plans were presented. One was suggested by Mr. Howland, as the outcome of conferences with lighthouse bureau engineers. It is to build a wall of stone, eighteen feet above mean low water, starting from the sand hill inside the lighthouse and curving around it on the lines of the present partly destroyed timber jetties and leaving an opening at the east end, into which the sand may wash. This stone pile, or wall, would be higher by several feet than the ground at the base of the lighthouse. The second proposition was presented by R. F. Cresson, Jr., consulting engineer of the state department of commerce and navigation, with Henry J. Sherman, assistant engineer, and Robert F. Engle of Beach Haven, one of the commissioners of that department. It would be to build jetties of timber piling, with a row of sheet piling between two rows of piles, all cross braced and strengthened with a rip-rap of stone on each side. These jetties would take somewhat the same shape as the Haupt jetties that were not completed.

It is estimated that the Howland plan would cost $100,000. Messrs. Cresson and Sherman think their plan could be worked out for half that, but the stone piles would not be so massive.

Accompanying Congressman Appleby were Ezra Parker and former Senator David G. Conrad, of Barnegat; E. Moss Mathis of the Tuckerton Beacon; Colonel Clifford M. Elwell, U. S. A.; William Fischer, of Toms River and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Thompson of New Egypt.

Secretary Hoover was converted to the idea of saving the light at his visit last July with Senator Frelinghuysen. At that time the federal engineers said that $175,000 was the least that would do the job. Economy was the order of the day in Washington this summer, and Chief Economist Dawes said they could not spend that much on this lighthouse. The matter went to President Harding, who gave an O.K. as Hoover had done, subject to Dawes' approval. Dawes then sent Putnam for a final visit, and passed the decision up to him whether the work could be done for $100,000, which was the limit Dawes would approve. So it now seems likely that if the state department of commerce and Contractor Howland can satisfy the federal engineers and Commissioner Putnam with a plan inside that sum the work will be started soon.

STATE POLICEMEN FROM EVERY COUNTY BUT OCEAN

Every county in the state except Ocean county is represented in the state police force of 115 men now being trained on the Sea Girt camp ground for their duties in the state. It seemed nobody in Ocean county applied for the job—probably all are too busy down this way.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Mary Crane, wife of Charles Crane, died at her home in Manahawkin on Tuesday, after a severe illness.

Mrs. Crane is survived by her husband, four children, Mrs. Helen Johnson of Delanco, Mrs. Angie Wildonger, of Collingswood, Mrs. Edna Bowen and Harry Crane of this place. She was grandmother of twelve grandchildren and also leaves a sister, Mrs. Rebecca Predmore of Manahawkin and one brother, who resides in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Crane lived a consistent Christian and spent most of her life in service. The Ladies Aid, Sunday School and other branches of the M. E. Church, were always of interest to her and many boys and girls of that place are remembering a faithful loving teacher. She will be missed in many ways, and the family have the sympathy of the community. As this is being put in type we cannot ascertain the exact day of the funeral but it is supposed by those we have inquired of that it will be Saturday P. M.

FLYING BOAT TAKES RIDERS AT BAY AND RIVER TOWNS

A flying boat of the Aeromarine Airways, Inc., whose headquarters are at the Times Building, New York, has been for the past two weeks taking out passengers from the bay and river resorts. After having spent ten days at Bay Head, Mantoloking, Seaside Park, Island Heights, Ocean Gate and similar towns, the boat arrived at Beach Haven recently and among the passengers who made flights were Mrs. N. V. Lewis, son Russel T. Lewis and Mrs. Howard N. Amer.

BAZAAR FOR BENEFIT OF COPING FUND

The Solicitors are about ready to solicit for the Bazaar, which will be held for three days, (date announced later), but the probable date will be November 17, 18 and 19. However, you will know in a short time. Some solicitors have already started out. The funds will be used for the Greenwood Cemetery, finishing the Coping Fund and to improve the Cemetery in many needed ways. This is a Community Bazaar and it is earnestly hoped everyone will take a part and help to make it a success. Any article useful or ornamental, canned fruit or vegetables or anything salable will be acceptable. If everyone does his or her "bit" it will distribute the burden and make it less hard for the ones in charge. Please welcome the solicitors and make them glad by contributing cheerfully.

the organ at the M. E. Church last Sunday in the absence of the organist and the assistant organist.

Have you stopped to take note of the changes in Tuckerton in the past few months? Just look around and you will be surprised at what has taken place in so short a time.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Moss Mathis and children, Edith and Charles, spent the week end in Haddonfield as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Pharo.

Mrs. Paul Sprague have gone to Camden, where Mr. Sprague is employed.

Miss Berta Mathis has returned after spending several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Mathis at Seaside Park.

The meetings in the schoolhouse at West Tuckerton are increasing in interest and attendance and they are having good times. Come out and share them. Rev. R. A. Cake of West Creek spoke last Tuesday night and he preached good old fashioned, plain gospel. It is hoped he will speak again soon.

Chas. Pullen has purchased the property which belonged to his grand father, the late Chas. K. Pullen, on West. Main street. He expects to build a modern bungalow in the near future.

Mrs. M. B. Driscoll has gone to Atlantic City where she will visit relatives. She was accompanied by her grandchild.

Dr. H. Thomas Stockman, wife and daughters, Dorothy, Ruth and Bella, Mr. and Mrs. James Atey, son James and daughter, Anna, Miss William-son, all of Marcus Hook, Pa., spent the week end with their cousin, Mrs. Etta V. Hayes. This is their third trip to Tuckerton and they are so delighted with the place they are coming again.

Mr. and Mrs. William Falkenburg and Mr. and Mrs. T. Wilmer Speck are enjoying a week's vacation in Mr. Falkenburg's automobile. They have gone as far South as Washington and post cards from Virginia, West Virginia and other places en route have been received by friends in Tuckerton. They are expected home the last of the week.

I wish to announce to the public that my new store on North Green Street, will be ready for business soon, announcement of opening will be made shortly.

REUBEN A. GERBER.

The Red Men's Building is receiving a long needed coat of paint and it is a big improvement to the main business corner of the town. The Post Office Building, also owned by the Red Men, is rumored, will also be painted. The colors are gray trimmed in white and presents a pretty appearance. Walter A. Entwistle, Benjamin Dayton, George A. Seaman, Samuel Horner and Charles E. Jones are doing the work.

Look over the big advertisement of Nathan Gerber's Sons on the last page. It will pay you.

Melville Parker has returned from a visit to the Perkins Farm at Beverly.

Harry V. Trewin of Bridgeton, is here to spend a week with his daughter, Mrs. John Piper. Mr. Trewin is recuperating after several weeks' illness. He was formerly in the bakery business in Tuckerton and now has a prosperous business in Bridgeton.

Charles Murray is here from New York for a week's visit. He is stopping at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Adare. Mr. Murray spends his summers here and takes a lively interest in every movement for the advancement of Tuckerton. We are all glad to see him.

Mrs. Florence Kaiser and daughter, Mrs. Ethel Buckingham have moved from Mrs. Hope Gaskill's house on Clay street to Mrs. Annie Brown's double house on Marine street.

A SERVICE MESSAGE

THE BANK THAT HAS ALWAYS MADE IT A POINT TO COMBINE ABSOLUTE SAFETY WITH ACCOMMODATING SERVICE

It is the solemn duty of every financial institution to use every means possible to protect the funds and securities entrusted to its care. To offer that feeling of absolute security is positively due the patron to justify his confidence. The bank must actually protect or it betrays. Being a firm believer that the patrons are entitled to the best, this old and reliable institution has just recently installed one of the most modern Electric Burglar Alarm Systems in existence. It is acknowledged as being absolutely Burglar Proof and is a fitting climax of positive security with our modern forty-five ton steel vault. A most convincing argument in favor of this system is the fact that the premium on our Burglar Insurance was reduced 50 per cent. immediately. With the knowledge of having a perfect equipment and a Service that has always met with popular approval, this bank continues to be in a favorable position to convince you that you should patronize it.

COOLING DRINKS ARE REFRESHING

Almost Any Fruit Juice in Season Is Excellent in Beverages in Hot Weather.

ARE VALUABLE FOR CHILDREN

Citrus Fruits Give Zest to Other Flavors and Can Be Used in Various Combinations—Recipe Given for Fruit Punch.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

When there are only one or two large lemons on hand, with a large, thirsty family demanding prompt refreshment, why not serve a "fruitade" made by combining different fruit juices with the lemon? A small amount of lemon is needed to intensify other fruit flavors, but almost any slightly acid fruit can be used as the basis for a good summer drink. It is a practical plan to keep one or two bottles of water cooling in the ice box to dilute fruit juices readily. Charged water, such as apollinaris or ginger ale, help to convert a simple "fruitade" into a "punch" for occasions when a festive drink is appropriate, but the fruit juices, diluted with water only and well chilled, are very refreshing.

Special Recipe Not Necessary.

A special recipe is not necessary to make a fruitade. Any single predominant flavor may give it its name—raspberry, grape, pineapple or orange; often four or five fruits are blended in approximately equal quantities. The flavor of peaches combines well with pear juice, pineapple, orange and lemon; the juice of blackberries, raspberries, currants, blackcaps, grapefruit, limes and plums can be used in any selected combinations. Lemon is necessary (unless limes are used for the purpose) to make the drink sufficiently acid to quench the thirst on a hot day.

The amount of water added depends somewhat on the kinds of fruit used, and also on the preference of the "taster." A preponderance of very acid juices—lemon or lime—will stand more dilution than the milder flavors. In general, one part of water to one of mixed fruit juice can be tried at first, and more water added if it seems desirable. Tea may be substituted for about one-third of the water if the punch is made for adults; if children are to have any, it is better to omit tea. The individual taste must be the guide in sweetening.

Sugar should be added to fruit drinks in the form of sirup, to get the best effect, as well as to use it in the most economical way. Two parts of sugar to one of water should be simmered for five minutes and then cooled before adding to the other ingredients. Sugar sirup can be prepared for several days at a time, and kept bottled in the refrigerator; leftover fruit juices may also be boiled with sugar and kept in a cold place for short periods until one has enough on hand to make up a good fruitade. A thin slice or two of orange and lemon, some chopped bits of pineapple and banana, a few colorful berries, invite attention to the bowl or pitcher of punch, and a sprig of mint both flavors and completes it. Professional caterers often include a slice of cucumber. When a fruit punch must be prepared for a large gathering of people—a dance, a sociable, or a picnic—it is helpful to have exact ingredients specified. About 40 persons can be served by the following recipe, which is recommended by the experimental kitchen, United States Department of Agriculture.

Fruit Punch.

1 can grated pineapple or apple. 2 pint bottles apollinaris or ginger ale. 3 cups boiling water. 2 cups strongly made tea. Juice of six lemons. 2 pounds sugar. Juice of 10 oranges. 2 quarts water for 1 teaspoonful salt. 5 minutes. 1 quart grape, currant, loganberry, ice or cool.

Cook the pineapple for 20 minutes in the boiling water and strain. Cool, add the remaining fruit juices, the tea, and the cooled sirup. It is better to make the punch a few hours ahead and let it stand closely covered

To Clean White Shades.

To clean white window shades, or remove finger prints or coal smoke, use steel wool.

Delicious Tuna Fish.

Fresh tuna fish is delicious baked, broiled or fried. Canned tuna makes excellent salad.

Ammonia Helps Woolens.

Flannels and blankets will keep soft and white if washed with a tablespoonful of ammonia to the first water.

on ice to chill and ripen. At serving time, add the apollinaris, ginger ale, or water to dilute to the strength desired. Garnish with thin slices of fruit and mint leaves.

Salt Intensifies Flavor.

It can be noticed that a little salt is called for in this punch. A "suspicion" of salt, as the French say, intensifies the sweetness and the flavor of any fruit drink. Blackberry juice combined with lemon and a few grains of salt is recommended. Canned pineapple juice appeals to the whole family, but it needs a dash of lemon to give pungency. Orange juice is desirable in children's diet but it should not be limited to the children. There are many delicious drinks to be made with orange juice as a basis. The fresh oranges must of course be used. Commercial orange flavor will not answer the same purpose.

Grape juice may be canned at home for use in beverages. It is particularly refreshing combined with lime juice, and diluted with an equal amount of carbonated water. Loganberry juice, which has a fine flavor similar to raspberry, is commercially bottled in the West. The housewife who can get loganberries may well can some of this excellent fruit juice for home use. Nutrition specialists of the Department of Agriculture point out that fresh fruit drinks, especially those made from grape juice and the various citrus fruits, are important for children because they supply vitamins. A pitcher of orangeade or grape punch, therefore, is not a mere gratification, but a real contribution to the day's food.

CLUB YOUNGSTERS TO RAISE BEST RABBITS

Breeders' Association Donates Purebred Animals.

Recipients Were Selected by Various County Home Demonstration Agents—Aim is to Encourage Rabbit Growing.

Members of the National Breeders' and Fanciers' Association of America recently donated thirty pairs of purebred and registered rabbits to as many boy and girl club members in Florida. The youngsters who were the recipients were selected by the various county home demonstration agents in the state. The aim is to encourage the rabbit-growing industry and the young owners have been organized into a boys and girls' rabbit club.

The gift pair, in each instance, together with a litter, is to be shown at the South Florida fair this year. The youngsters are to give back to

A Club Member and Her Pet Rabbit. The home-demonstration agent pair of rabbits from the first litter for redistribution, thereby creating an endless chain. The following breeds were donated: New Zealand Reds, Belgian Hares, Flemish Giants, American Blues, Silver Fawns, and Gray Fawns.

WAYS TO SERVE VEGETABLES

If Supply of Fresh Product is Not Generous Use Them With Juice in Which Cooked.

Serve most vegetables when cooked as a separate dish, either steamed, boiled, baked or stewed. If the supply of fresh vegetables is not generous, use with them the juice in which they are cooked, as far as possible, or put it into soups or stews.

Household Questions

Small fruits, as plums and cherries, should be preserved whole.

Never stir cereals with a spoon. It makes them pasty. Use a plated silver fork.

Serve jellied chicken ring on crisp lettuce and fill the center with diced pickled beets.

In cooking sweet potatoes always boil them with the skins on, then peel and use as preferred.

A lump of camphor placed in the china closet will prevent any silver which may be in it from tarnishing.

Very satisfactory underclothes can be made from pongee. Dry pongee garments thoroughly before ironing.

A roast of beef should be put into a very hot pan on top of the stove and browned on all sides before it is put into the oven. This will prevent the juices from cooking out.

To remove the water marks from a vase, rub a few drops of olive, or any other sort of oil inside where the water mark is evident.

Scald black stockings and black cotton gloves in salt and water before wearing them and they will not crock.

COATS FOR LITTLE MISSY ARE SIMPLE AND COZY

THERE are coats and coats for little persons from two years old up to twelve, most of them of warm, soft wool materials, simply designed and trimmed. The wool fabrics include duvetyne and similar cloths, broadcloth, velours, camel's hair, chinchilla—in fact, any good substantial and pliable wool; and many are the thrifty and resourceful mothers who make coats for their little girls from garments that are passed on by older members of the family. Velvet and silk become important when the smallest member of the family must be provided for; she is the proud owner of more than one coat—or may be if her mother is clever with the needle. These little coats are not difficult to make by the patterns which pattern companies provide. Narrow bands of fur, or plush and simple needlework are used for their decoration. The coat of velours shown in the illustration, is representative of this season's models. It is cozy looking, with its close-fitting collar of fur, fur bands on the cuffs and pockets and big fur buttons. Nearly all children's coats are like it in outline, except those that take on a cape that reaches a little below the elbows. There are several models that introduce a yoke, especially among coats for tiny girls. Turned-back cuffs, often bordered with fur, and wide collars that fit snugly about the throat and are also edged with narrow fur bands, dispose of these two details in nearly all models.

WOOL SKIRTS AND SILK WAISTS MAKE FROCKS FOR SCHOOL USE

CHILDREN'S clothes have taken on new charm and much added importance since specialists in designing them have worked out their inspirations from season to season. This fall the modes for grown-ups appear to have little influence with them. Instead of making small replicas of older people's belongings these designers have almost forgotten them. They have eyes for the world of childhood and are making independent excursions into new fields—what they see is translated into clothes as fascinating as things that express childhood should be. Even the simplest frocks for school and play reveal the hand of genius in little original touches.

Just now mothers are concerned with school clothes, and manufacturers have foreseen the needs of schoolgirls from the kindergarten stage on to the aspiring and critical, but often underestimating, high school senior. These manufacturers have taken over the responsibility of designing for the schoolgirl clothes that she ought to wear and will like to wear. For girls from about eight to twelve

SLABS PROTECT THE GRASS

Ornamental Garden Walk of Peculiar Design Has Been Found to Serve Purpose Admirably.

SCENERY MARRED BY SIGNS

Public Justified in Taking Strict Measures to Put a Stop to Growing Nuisance.

Everywhere the motorist travels the natural beautiful scenery is marred by glaring signs, not only small boards but immense structures often a hundred feet or more in length and twenty or more feet in height. Just at a bend in the road where the tourist expects to have a fine view sweeping over a broad valley the scene is completely cut off by a monstrous and offensive structure covered with a glaring advertisement.

At some points both sides of the road will be lined with these unsightly and ugly advertising walls. In England the disfiguring of fences, buildings and other places with signs is prevented by law on the ground that the good taste of the people is offended and the landscape disfigured.

Some of the worst offenders are manufacturers who are interested in the development of motoring. They have boarded up the roadways along the whole eastern part of the United States, much to the annoyance of motorists and the disfigurement of the landscape. If the nuisance cannot be stopped any other way, motorists can at least agree not to patronize any concern aiding in detracting from the natural beauty of our country and the pleasure of the public.—New York Sun.

Writer Waxes Sarcastic.

The trustees of the city of Roseville, Calif., have clearly no eye for art. At first, it may seem as if they were justified in refusing permission to a certain advertising firm to erect billboards within the city limits. But then these were no ordinary billboards—at least, so the advertising firm declared. They were in fact, "beautiful panels, real works of art." Yet the city trustees refused. Worse and worse, the women of Placer county, in which Roseville is situated, have banded themselves together to prevent the erection of any more billboards in Placer county, whether in the form of "beautiful panels" or otherwise. It seems strange, but then some people are notoriously blind to their privileges.—Christian Science Monitor.

Woman in Civic Affairs.

There is promise of better things for Connecticut in the fact that the League of Women Voters of that state has sent out a questionnaire befitting the slogan, "Know Your Own Town." This should be well worth doing for the information to be obtained, intended for the local communities, and as a basis of future state legislation. But no doubt the most important factor in the activity is, as the workers seem to think, the awakening among women of an interest in civic affairs. The neighborhood is certain to hold interest for anyone, and so is a good starting point.—Christian Science Monitor.

Seattle Saves Money.

Seattle, Wash., is saving its citizens approximately $1,000,000 a year by reason of the lower rates it enjoys for electricity through its municipal plant. The retail rate is 6 cents per kilowatt hour, whereas the rate under private ownership was 8½ cents.

Proud of Her "Fever's."

Little Maude very much admired her papa's chickens. Observing for the first time the little hairs on her arms, she ran very excitedly to her mamma, saying: "See! Mamma, see! I dot some fever's, I dot some fever's."

Bullfrog Stuck to Machine.

A big bullfrog, although uninvited, took a ride in an airplane in the Philippines, and the pilot was unable to spill him out into the atmosphere even though he performed all the stunts of an aerial circus.

SPIDER ATTRACTED BY MUSIC WAX MUST FIRST BE HEATED

According to Organist, He Was Always Sure of One Listener Whenever He Played.

An organist, telling of his experiences while playing the great instrument in a Boston hall, relates a pretty story of his most regular listener—a spider that had taken up his abode in the organ case over the performer's head. It remained there for about a year.

It was a musical little fellow, and when the man began to play it would spin down almost to a level with his shoulder and gently swing to and fro and listen. When he had finished a piece it would draw itself up to its nest, and when he began another, down it would come again and resume its position as an interested listener.

It had six legs. Two it put out in the air as a balance pole, two it handled the web with, and the third pair it used in pulling itself up hand over hand, as sailors climb a rope.

The organist came at last to watch for the little fellow, and it was always faithful, so that he was sure of at least one attentive and appreciative listener.

No Kick in Watermelon. Juice of the watermelon contains a high content of sugar and table sugar has been made from it, but not in a commercial way. There is one peculiarity about the watermelon: Unlike nearly all other plants, fruits and vegetables having sweet juice, good wine has not been made from the juice of the watermelon. Cantaloupes, on the contrary, when their juice is fermented, and distilled, produce a good quality, or a bad quality, of brandy, according to one's point of view or palate. But the watermelon is innocent.

Only One Right Action. There can no more be two kinds of right action than there can be two kinds of straight lines.—Herbert Spencer.

Impossible to Get Light From Wax Candle Without the Presence of Necessary Gases.

A wax candle really is a gas torch. You will find that when you apply a lighted match to the wick of a candle it will not light readily. You have to hold the match to the wick until the wick burns sufficiently to heat the wax hot enough to turn it into gases which, on mixing with the oxygen in the air, produce the fire in the form of light.

The candle will continue to be lighted and to burn as long as the wax continues hot enough to give off the gases or until the candle is entirely consumed. Any interruption to this process of transforming the wax into gas will result in the extinguishing of the light.

The reason the candle goes out when you blow on the flame is that the gases which feed the flame at the end of the wick are blown away, the process of turning the hot wax into gas is interrupted and with the gas supply shut off the flame is extinguished.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MR. DOG'S HEN HOUSES.

MR. DOG had been bothered with Mr. Fox until he was about worn out, for, no matter how well he kept watch, Mr. Fox managed to get a chicken or a hen once in a while.

Very often Mr. Dog would see Mr. Fox and scare him off, but though he had tried and tried he could not catch him.

One day when the farmer was putting some beehives in the yard back of the barn Mr. Dog thought of something which made him smile, but he was not going to laugh until he was sure the plan would work, for he knew full well that he had a very clever and suspicious fellow to deal with. That night when the moon was shining Mr. Dog went down the road with his friend, Mr. Hound Dog, first making Mr. Hound promise he would not chase Mr. Fox, because he would spoil everything.

It was very hard for Mr. Hound to understand what could be more sport than chasing Mr. Fox, but on being promised a very large bone he said he would do just as Mr. Dog told him.

They hid behind some bushes, and pretty soon along came Mr. Fox, but hearing Mr. Dog and Mr. Hound talking, he listened, making sure he could run away if they moved.

"Yes," Mr. Dog was telling his friend, "the master had decided that Mr. Fox is too smart for us, and so he has bought some new hen houses and put them in the yard back of the barn."

"There are two hens in each house, little white houses on benches and I guess now we have Mr. Fox fooled."

Mr. Fox smiled as he listened and

WHEN YOU TELEPHONE.

IN THE business world it is no longer considered good form when you telephone to use the word "Hello"—designated by one of the telephone directors as "an ungraceful and rude little word." Much less then ought it to be used in social telephoning and the telephoning that takes place after business hours and in the home.

"Remember—telephone courtesy begins when the bell rings," says a little booklet recently got out by one of the telephone companies. Now this is something that the young man or woman in business has to remember. He knows, for instance, if he is dealing with possible buyers that he is far more apt to get an order if he does remember it. If he responds to the telephone with a surly, "What do you want?" before he knows who is calling and then, when he realizes that it is a customer, changes the tone of his voice and his mode of speech, he has made a bad beginning, and he is less apt to make a sale than if he opens the conversation with courtesy and cordiality.

Now here are some things that you should remember whether you are using the telephone for business or purely social or personal purposes.

If you open the telephone conversation do not ask any one to give his or her name until you announce your own.

If you are calling a certain person in a household and another member of the family whose voice you recognize answers do not ignore that person, saying, "Hello, I want to speak to Mary," but rather something like this: "Good morning, Jane; this is Claire speaking, May I talk to Mary?"

If another person opens the telephone conversation do not make the mistake of prolonging the conversation after she has finished her errand. Especially if an out-of-town wire is being used, be careful not to cause the other person to have to pay double tolls because of your verbosity.

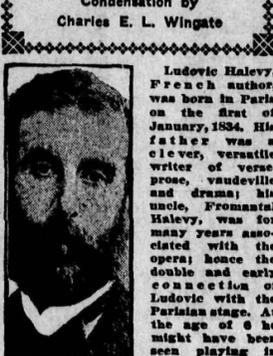

Wellington's Census Return. Although old census papers are supposed to be destroyed after the necessary data have been obtained and the reports finished, a fortunate English collector still possesses a paper filled out by the duke of Wellington for the census of 1851. To the question, Any deaf or dumb in household? he replied, I am deaf, and to the question, Where born? he replied, Born in Ireland—believe in Athy. The Iron Duke was wrong as to his birthplace, however, for records show that he was actually born in Upper Merrion street, Dublin.—The Living Age.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

ABBE CONSTANTIN

By LUDOVIC HALEVY

Condensation by Charles E. L. Wingate

Ludovic Halevy, French author, was born in Paris on the first of January, 1834. His father was a clever, versatile writer of verse, prose, vaudeville and drama; his uncle, Fromental Halévy, was for many years associated with the opera; hence the double and early connection of Ludovic with the Parisian stage. At the age of 6 he might have been seen playing in that "Foyer de la Danse" with which he was to make his readers so familiar.

At eighteen he joined the ranks of the French administration and occupied various posts. In the spring of 1860, being commissioned to write a play for the manager of the Varieties, Halevy asked the collaboration of Henri Meilhac, and the proposal was immediately accepted, thus beginning a connection which continued for more than 20 years.

The joint work of the two authors had a great vogue, but Halevy is best known to more recent readers by his "Abbe Constantin" published soon after the conclusion of the Franco-Prussian war.

Halevy died in Paris on the 8th of May, 1905.

WITH a step still vallant and firm the old Abbe Constantin walked along the dusty road of the little village where for more than thirty years he had been the cure. At the entrance of the castle of Longueval he stopped and mournfully regarded the big blue posters fixed on the pillars.

They announced the sale of the castle, the former home of the cure's dear old friend, the marquis, who had recently died.

And the result of the auction? The great estate bought by two entire strangers!

"Do you know who they are?" asked Madame de Lavardens.

"Yes, Mrs. Scott is an American possessing a colossal fortune. Ten years ago Mrs. Scott begged in the streets of New York, they say. They are rich parvenus who amuse themselves by throwing handfuls of gold out of the window, and who will turn up their noses at us and care nothing for our traditions or our life."

Such was the story. But when young Mrs. Scott and her beautiful sister arrived, to take possession of the castle and called immediately upon the abbe, he learned a different tale. Religious, generous, amiable and lovable they proved.

And they were certainly beautiful, particularly the younger sister, Bettina Percival.

At the cure's little home they met Jean Reynaud, the son of that gallant doctor of the village who, while advancing with the soldiers in the war of 1870 to carry on his work of mercy side by side with his dear old friend the abbe, had suddenly been struck by a bullet and killed on the spot. Jean, inherited the noble traits of his father, was beloved by the whole village.

But he was poor while the American sisters were immeasurably rich. As acquaintances and friendships grew, very pleasing it was to the gentle, lovable old cure to learn that his new parishioners were most anxious to extend their benefactions among the poor in the hamlet, asking him, indeed, to be their medium.

They had, indeed, been poor until an inherited silver mine made them fabulously rich. Now, they had hosts of admirers—Mrs. Scott because she was frankly flirtatious; and Bettina because, as she realized, the fortune hunters—thirty-four of them she counted, including a French duke and a Spanish noble—sought her wealth.

And when, one day, they all went over with Jean to visit the little church, and Bettina at the organ played a reverie of Chopin, good gentle Abbe Constantin's heart was filled with such joy that the tears came to his eyes.

But all this left a deep problem in Jean's mind—"Which of the two sisters is the prettier?" At first he was convinced that it was the coquettish Mrs. Scott who charmed him the more; then he would see Bettina, smiling and blushing amid the sunlit clouds of her floating hair, and he would declare to himself "I was mistaken, the prettier was Miss Percival."

The days went on and Jean and Bettina were often thrown into each other's company. What resulted is best pictured in Miss Percival's own remark to her sister when one day she exclaimed:

"He is the first man, positively the first, in whose eyes I have not read 'Oh, how glad I should be to marry that little body's millions!'"

One day when Jean was telling of his expectations of promotion and the probability that he should wander from garrison to garrison, finally coming back to the little house that was his father's, as an old colonel on half pay, she exclaimed:

"Always quite alone?"

"Why quite alone? I certainly hope not."

"You intend to marry?"

"Yes, certainly."

"Yet you have refused several good opportunities. Tell me why."

"Because," he replied, "I think it best not to marry rather than to marry without love."

"And I think so, too."

She looked at him; he looked at her and suddenly, to the great surprise of both, they found nothing more to say—nothing at all.

But now Jean is no longer tranquil; with impatience and at the same time with sorrow he sees the moment of his departure approach. Yet how could he stay and resist the temptation of Bettina's charm?

As an honorable man Jean felt for Bettina's money horror, positive horror.

In Bettina's mind the sensation of love had come at the same time that it had to Jean's. But, while he, horrified, had cast it violently from him, she on the contrary had yielded in all the simplicity of her perfect innocence to this flood of emotion and of tenderness.

As Bettina grew more tender, Jean became more gloomy. He was not only afraid of loving; he was afraid of being loved. He felt he ought to remain away, but he could not; the temptation was too strong.

He tried to avoid Bettina at receptions and even to leave without saying good-bye.

"If I touch her hand," he thought, "my secret will escape me."

His secret! He did not know that Bettina read his heart like an open book.

When Jean descended the stairs these words were upon his lips:

"I love you, I adore you, and that is why I will see you no more!"

But he did not utter them; he actually fled into the darkness.

Bettina standing in the hall door and taking no notice of the rain driving across her bare shoulders, watched him go.

"I knew very well that he loved me," she thought, "but now I am very sure that I, too—oh! yes! I, too—"

Meanwhile Jean hastens to his dear old friend the cure to tell him that he is going away immediately to Paris to seek exchange into another regiment, to leave the little hamlet forever. And then in his emotion he confessed to the abbe that he adored Bettina.

"It is a madness which has seized me," he exclaimed. "Ah! if she were only poor!"

"Do you know what I think, Jean?" exclaimed his good friend. "Jean, I believe that she loves you."

"And I believe it, too; but that is the very reason I must go. Her money is the great obstacle."

At that moment someone knocked gently at the door.

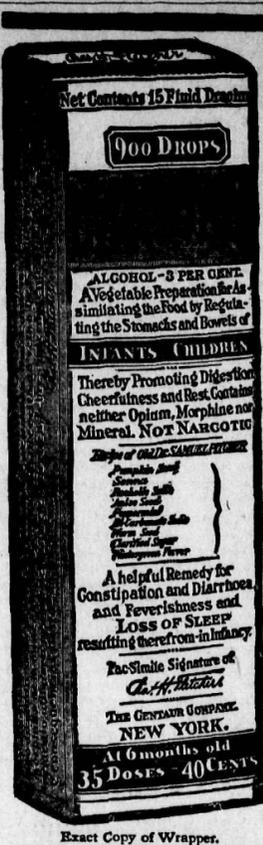

It was Bettina.

Going directly to Jean she cried, "Oh, how glad I am you are here."

Then she took both his hands in hers and addressing the cure she said, "I have come to beg you, monsieur le cure, to listen to my confession."

And to herself she was saying, "I wish to be loved! I wish to love! I wish to be happy and to make him happy! And since he cannot have the courage to say it, I must have the courage for both!"

"I am rich, monsieur le cure," she continued, aloud, "very rich, but I love money most for the good which it allows me to do. So I have the care of this money, and I have always wished that my husband should be worthy of sharing this great fortune in order that he should help me make good use of it. I thought of another thing, too—He who will be my husband must be someone I can love! There is a man who has done all he can to conceal from me that he loves me, but I do not doubt that he loves me. You do love me, Jean?"

Analysis of Aluminum. An important discovery, a new method of extracting aluminum from a certain mineral, which affects the future development of Japanese industry and the formulation of an established air policy of the Japanese government, is the result of the investigations which have been carried out by the experiment station on the production of aluminum and its compounds.

A great refinery plant, driven by electric power, is to be established at Yooyogi. A project is under contemplation to establish a semi-governmental company for the manufacture of aluminum by the new method, which consists in the electrical analysis of ore by Korean alum and other materials and enables the production of more than 95 per cent of aluminum.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine.

A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement

Not Altogether Conquered.

The airman was boasting about his calling.

"At last," he said, "man has crowned his work. After conquering the land, mastering the sea, and harnessing the tides, he has conquered the air. We airmen represent the final achievement of mankind."

"Who's conquered the air?" retorted one of his hearers.

"We have," repeated the airman, blandly.

"Oh, have you?" replied the other. "Well, jump out of a window six floors high and see who's boss?"

"Tall" Story Disproved.

The hoatzin, one of the strangest birds of South America, is notorious for its bad odor. Some authorities say it is so frightful that the bird can only be skinned under water. These stories are denied by Dr. C. W. Beebe of New York, who has not only skinned hoatzins, but also eaten them.

Any young man who can save $1,000 will soon show that he can save a great deal more.

Like a man, and you will believe at least half of his boasts.

When a Mobile doctor came to visit the Robinson family by whom he had been summoned he found Mrs. Robinson in bed, her dusky face decorated with bandages. Mr. Robinson was sitting in stolid misery by the bedside.

"Cheer up, Sam," said the M. D. "She'll pull through all right."

"Don't you go tryin' to cheer me up," answered Mr. Robinson, darkly, "fo' it's impossible, doctor. "Your honor, my wife accuses me of being untrue to her, but the woman I talked about in my sleep is merely my favorite motion picture star, whom I have never seen in person."

"That's a good story and has some originality," replied the judge, "but it has been my experience that no man ever talks about a woman in his sleep whom he has never seen. It simply can't be done."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Tungstic carbide is almost as hard as the diamond, which is still the hardest substance known. By a process of rolling or forging, and by the addition of carbon, German metallurgists hope to make this substance even harder than the diamond.

Hindu Youth Precocious.

A tourist traveling in India wrote home that he was astonished by the precocity of the Hindu children, says the Home Journal. Many of them are skilled workmen at an age when other children are learning the alphabet. One of the most expert carvers in wood he saw was a boy of seven, and many of the handsomest and most costly rugs and carpets are woven by children not yet in their teens.

Henna Stain on Hair.

Henna leaves, dried and powdered and made into a paste or pomade with hot water, produce a reddish or orange stain and are used largely by eastern peoples for staining the finger nails and finger tips, as well as the hair. The hair is covered with this paste and enveloped with a hot cloth, which is allowed to remain for two or three hours as desired. A mixture of henna and indigo will color the hair jet black if used in the correct proportions.

"AMERICANS SHOULD BE PROUD OF WORK BY NEAR EAST RELIEF"

Says American High Commissioner. Congress Is Told of Great Accomplishment

Washington.—The annual report of the activities of the Near East Relief organization, filed with Congress by Charles V. Vickrey, General Secretary, constitutes the modest history of one of the greatest pieces of philanthropic work ever undertaken and carried through by American men and women, according to well informed persons in the capital. Admiral Mark L. Bristol, United States High Commissioner to Turkey, for example, declares: "I have been closely associated with the work of the Near East Relief committee for about 22 months. On the whole the work of this relief committee has been such that Americans should be proud of this great humane effort. The Near East Relief here in Constantinople is run more like a business organization than any relief organization with which I have ever come into contact."

CHARLES V. VICKREY

Charles V. Vickrey's summary of the activities of the Near East Relief shows the disbursement of over $60,000,000.00 in cash and supplies, contributed by the American people to the salvaging of the Christian populations of the Near East. 711 American and Canadian men and women relief workers have been engaged in this huge task on little more than a volunteer basis. 63 hospitals, with 6,522 beds, and 123 clinics; 11 rescue homes, where young girls rescued from lives of shame in Turkish harems are taught to forget their sufferings, and to begin life anew, self-supporting and independent, are maintained. 110,000 Little Children The most remarkable feature of the work of the Near East Relief is, however, the salvation of tens of thousands of children who have lost parents and relatives during the past six years. For these little ones American generosity has provided, through the Near East Relief, 299 homes—one, in Alexandropol, Armenia, housing 18,000 children—where, last year, 64,600 children were housed, clothed, fed and taught, while an additional 56,039, outside the Near East Relief orphanages, were saved from starvation and death by food and clothing sent them from the United States.

Mr. Vickrey's report states that approximately 2,790,490 Armenians are still living in the Near East, out of a pre-war population of over 4,000,000 and estimates that had it not been for the aid given by the American people through the Near East Relief, fully half of those now living would have perished. Food was furnished to 561,970 homeless refugees during a large part of 1920, while 300,000 garments, comprising 1,500,000 pounds of clothing sent out from the United States were distributed to barefoot and rag-clad wanderers, all the way from the Mediterranean to the Caucasus mountains.

Work Must Continue Commenting on these figures Mr. Vickrey stated that "this distinctive humanitarian relief work, as an expression of brotherhood, should help to mark the beginning of a new era of peace and inter-racial good will in the Near East."

"The tremendous task undertaken by the American people in saving the children of the Near East is one which cannot be left unfinished. We have an investment of over $60,000,000 in human life, that America has saved. If we falter, or pause now, that investment is imperiled, or may even be lost altogether. Most of the children we have saved from death are still too little to take care of themselves, and conditions throughout the Near East are still too uncertain to let them shift for themselves. It is morally sure that for at least five years, and until these little ones that we have snatched from a terrible fate are able to support themselves and enjoy an even chance of life as useful citizens, the American people who have rescued them must see them through."

"It is the purpose of the Near East Relief to do just this, and we appeal to the generosity of the American people to see this noble work is carried out in the spirit of mutual helpfulness and Christian charity which is so essentially characteristic of the American ideal. Contributions to the work of the Near East Relief may be sent to Cleveland H. Dodge, Treasurer, 1 Madison Ave., New York City."

Lyceum Course Part of Modern Community Life—Ticket Sale Should Be Large.

The attractions for this season's Lyceum course have been definitely announced. The course is an especially excellent one and the sale of season tickets should be large. The attractions on the course are all to be furnished by the Redpath Bureau, and this means that they are sure to please everyone. Lyceum courses, with their informative, inspirational lectures and good, clean amusement, are an integral part of modern community life, and there is no question but that the local course will be splendidly received. The numbers on the course are as follows:

The first will be on Tuesday October 11. The Lillian Johnson Company will appear in a musical. The second will be on Wednesday, December 7. The Fine Arts Company will give musical sketches. The third will be on Monday, January 9. The Novelty Four Quartette will appear in instrumental music and songs. The fourth will be Monday, March 27. Charles R. Taggart, the musical humorist will furnish an evening of musical fun. Tickets are now on sale at $2.00 for the series or 75 cents for individual tickets. These entertainments are to benefit the American Legion and any member can furnish you with tickets.

Mrs. Retta Conover. The second vice-President was Miss Sadie Randolph; fourth vice-President, Miss Alma Corliss. Rally Day at the M. E. Sunday School was well attended. Collection amounted to $22. Capt. Alexander Chandler spent the past week at the Trenton Fair. He was demonstrating the Remington trap and gun. Wm. Hazelton was also present and assisted the captain in his work, which interested the crowd, who were present. Mrs. Fredna Perrine and children of Barnegat City, spent Monday in town. Miss Helen Ridgway attended the Trenton Fair on Thursday last. Mrs. Kopcho entertained her sister from Wenonah the week end. Eggs are advancing in price owing to the scarcity.

A number of folks from Waretown are employed in the wrapper factory on Railroad avenue. Percy Matthews of Harvey Cedars was a recent caller in town. It is earnestly hoped that we will have street lights of some kind in the near future. The nights are much longer than during the summer. Capt. Henry Smith is furnishing a new light in front of his residence on East Bay street. It is gasoline and gives a good light lighting that part of the street and also some on Maple avenue. W. F. Lewis is in receipt of a few copies of the Inter-Borough Press of Spring City, Pa., edited by Wm. H. Brown, a former principal of the Barnegat High School. It is full of local news, interesting and very readable. Since he has owned the paper he has enlarged it from a four page paper to an eight page sheet. I note that he published a full report of the school and their doings of his locality. We wish to extend congratulations. I note that in Chicago a marriage license costs $1.50 and a dog license $3.00. I do not see why the fee for a marriage license should not be raised to the dignity of a dog license. A young man about to be married is so full of joy and hope that I am sure few if any, would object.

COPIING FUND GAINING BUT SLOWLY NOW

The money for the coping for the Cemetery in Tuckerton is coming in rather slowly. Are you preparing for the bazaar to be held before Christmas? This is expected to swell the fund quite substantially.

We know of several interested persons who have not as yet sent in their contributions and the ladies will not commence this work until the cash is on hand. So send in your money now and let's clean this work up.

Me-o-my, how you'll take to a pipe—and P. A.!

Before you're a day older you want to let the idea slip under your hat that this is the open season to start something with a joy's jimmy pipe—and some Prince Albert! Because, a pipe packed with Prince Albert satisfies a man as he was never satisfied before—and keeps him satisfied! And, you can prove it! Why—P. A.'s flavor and fragrance and coolness and its freedom from bite and parch (cut out by our exclusive patented process) are a revelation to the man who never could get acquainted with a pipe! P. A. has made a pipe a thing of joy to four men where one was smoked before!

The White House and your house

We guarantee ARCOLA to warm any small house as perfectly as our larger heating plants warm mansions, clubs, cathedrals, and even the White House itself

WE guarantee that ARCOLA has these five advantages which no small-home heating equipment has ever offered: 1-Connected with American Radiators it will fill every room of a small house, upstairs and down, with healthful hot-water warmth.

The perfection of ARCOLA, after years of experiment in our research laboratories, means that now, for the first time, the small home can be as perfectly warmed as our larger heating outfits warm clubs, mansions, and even the White House itself.

ARCOLA. Look for it in his window. It will pay you to consult him twice a year as you do your Doctor or Dentist. To have him examine and report on your heating and plumbing costs little. It may save you a very great deal.

A MAN FOR THE AGES

A STORY OF THE BUILDERS OF DEMOCRACY
BY IRVING BACHELLER

CHAPTER XIX—Continued.

Like many who had no experience with such phenomena they underestimated the seriousness of the panic. They thought that, in a week or so, its effect would pass and that Illinois would then resume its triumphant march toward its high destiny. Not even Samson Traylor had a correct notion of the slowness of Time.

The effect of the panic paralyzed the city. Men whose "red-dog money" was in every one's pocket closed their shops and ran away. The wild adventurers cleared out. Their characters may be judged by the words of one of them reported by the editor of the Democrat:

"I failed for a hundred thousand dollars and could have failed for a million, if Jackson had kept his hands off."

Hard times hung like a cloud over the city. Its population suffered some diminishment in the next two years, in spite of its position on the main highway of trade. Dream cities, canals and railroads built without hands became part of the poetry of American commerce.

That autumn, men and women who had come to Mrs. Kinzie's party in jewels and in purple and fine linen had left or turned their hands to hard labor. The Kelsoes suffered real distress, the schools being closed and the head of the house having taken to his bed with illness. Bim went to work as a seamstress, and with the help of Mrs. Kinzie and Mrs. Hubbard was able to keep the family from want. The nursing and the care of the baby soon broke the health of Mrs. Kelso, never a strong woman. Bim came home from her work one evening and found her mother ill.

"Cheer up, my daughter," said Jack. "An old friend of ours has returned to the city. He is a rich man—an oasis in the desert of poverty. He has loaned me a hundred dollars in good coin."

"Who has done this?" Bim asked.

"Mr. Lionel Davis."

"We must not take his money," said Bim.

"I had a long talk with him," Kelso went on. "He has explained that unfortunate incident of the horse. It was a bit of offhand folly born of an anxious moment."

"But the man wants to marry me," said Bim.

"He said nothing of such a purpose."

"He will be in no hurry about that," said Bim. "He is a shrewd operator. Every one hates him. They say that he knew what was coming when he sold out."

That evening Bim wrote a long letter to Samson Traylor, telling him of the evil days which had come to them. This letter, now in possession of a great grandson of Samson and Sarah Traylor, had a singular history. It reached the man to whom it was addressed in the summer of 1844. It was found with many others that summer in Tazewell county under a barn which its owner was removing. It brought to mind the robbery of the stage from Chicago, south of the sycamore woods, in the autumn of '37, by a man who had ridden with the driver from Chicago and who, it was thought, had been in collusion with him. A curious feature of the robbery had been revealed by the discovery of the mail sack. It was unopened, its contents undisturbed, its rusty padlock still in place. The perpetrator of the crime had not soiled his person with any visible evidence of guilt and so was never apprehended.

Then for a time Bim entered upon great trials. Jack Kelso weakened. Burning with fever, his mind wandered in the pleasant paths he loved and saw in his fancy the deeds of Ajax and Achilles and the topless towers of Ilium and came not back again to the vulgar and prosaic details of life. The girl knew not what to do. A funeral was a costly thing. She had no money. The Kinzies had gone on a hunting trip in Wisconsin. Mrs. Hubbard was ill and the Kelsoes already much in her debt. Mr. Lionel Davis came.

He was a good-looking young man of twenty-nine, those days, rather stout and of middle stature, with dark hair and eyes. He was dressed in the height of fashion. He used to boast that he had only one vice—diamonds. But he had ceased to display them in his shirt-front or his fingers. He carried them in his pockets and showed them by the glittering handful to his friends. They had come to him through trading in land where they were the accepted symbol of success and money was none too plentiful. He had melted their settings and turned them into coin. The stones he kept as a kind of surplus—a half hidden evidence of wealth and of superiority to the temptation of vulgar display. Mr. Davis was a calculating, masterful, keen-minded man, with a rather heavy jaw. In his presence, Bim was afraid of her soul that night. He was gentle and sympathetic. He offered to lend her any amount she needed. She made no answer, but sat trying to think what she would best do. The Traylor had paid no attention to her letter, although a month had passed since it was written.

In a moment she rose and gave him her hand.

"It is very kind of you," said she. "If you can spare me five hundred dollars for an indefinite time I will take it."

"Let me lend you a thousand," he urged. "I can do it without a bit of inconvenience."

"I think that five hundred will be enough," she said.

It carried her through that trouble and into others, of which her woman's heart had found abundant signs in the attitude of Mr. Davis. He gave the most assiduous attention to the comfort of Bim and her mother. He had had a celebrated physician come down from Milwaukee to see Mrs. Kelso and had paid the bill in advance. "I cannot let you be doing these things for us," Bim said one evening when he had called to see them.

"And I cannot help loving you and doing the little I can to express it," he answered. "I would like to make every dollar I have tell you in some way that I love you. That's how I feel and you might as well know it."

"But I do not love you, Mr. Davis," she pleaded. "Is there any reason why I shouldn't?"

"Yes, if there were no other reason, I love a young soldier who is fighting in the Seminole war in Florida under Col. Taylor."

"Well, at least, you can let me take the place of your father and shield you from trouble when I can."

"You are a most generous and kindly man!" Bim exclaimed with tears in her eyes.

So he seemed to be, but he was one of those men who weave a spell like that of an able actor. He excited temporary convictions that began to change as soon as the curtain fell. He was no reckless villain of romance. If he instigated the robbery of the south-bound mail wagon, of which the writer of this little history has no shadow of doubt, he was so careful about it that no evidence which would satisfy a jury has been discovered to this day.

On account of the continued illness of her mother Bim was unable to resume her work in the academy. She took what sewing she could do at home and earned enough to solve the problems of each day. But the payment coming due on the house in December loomed ahead of them. It was natural, in the circumstances, that Mrs. Kelso should like Mr. Davis and favor his aims.

Mrs. Kelso's health had improved slowly so that she was able then to spend most of each day in her chair.

One evening when Davis sat alone

"Let Me Lend You a Thousand," He Urged.

with her, she told him the story of Bim and Harry Needles—a bit of knowledge he was glad to have. Their talk was interrupted by the return of Bim. She was in a cheerful mood. When Mr. Davis had gone she said to her mother:

"I think our luck has turned. Here's a letter from John T. Stuart. The divorce has been granted. I am going to write to Harry and tell him to hurry home and marry me if he wants to. Don't say a word about the divorce to our friend Davis. I want to make him keep his distance. It is hard enough now."

Before she went to bed that night she wrote a long letter to Harry and one to Abe Lincoln, thanking him for his part in the matter and telling him of her father's death, of the payment due and of the hard times they were suffering. Two weeks passed and brought no answer from Mr. Lincoln.

The day before the payment came due in December, a historic letter from Tampa, Fla., was published in the Democrat. It was signed "Robert Deming, private, Tenth Cavalry." It gave many details of the campaign in the Everglades in which the famous scout, Harry Needles, and seven of his comrades had been surrounded and slain. When Mr. Davis called at the little home in La Salle street that evening he found Bim in great distress.

"I throw up my hands," she said. "I cannot stand any more. We shall be homeless tomorrow. No, not that—so long as I live," he answered. "I have bought the claim. You can pay me when you get ready."

He was very tender and sympathetic. When he had left them Bim said to her mother: "Our old friends do not seem to care what becomes of us. I have no thought now save for you and the baby. I'll do whatever you think best for you two. I don't care for myself. My heart is as dead as Harry's."

CHAPTER XX.

Which Tells of the Settling of Abe Lincoln and the Traylor in the Village of Springfield and of Samson's Second Visit to Chicago.

Bim's judgment of her old friends was ill founded. It was a slow time in which she lived. The foot of the horse, traveling and often mired in a rough muddy highway, was its swiftest courier. Letters carried by horses or slow steamboats were the only media of communication between people separated by wide distances. So it is easy to understand that many who had traveled far were as the dead, in a measure, to the friends they had left behind them and that those separated by only a hundred miles had to be very enterprising to keep acquainted.

In March Abe Lincoln had got his license to practice law. On his return from the North he had ridden to Springfield to begin his work as a lawyer in the office of John T. Stuart. His plan was to hire and furnish a room and get his meals at the home of his friend, Mr. William Butler. He went to the store of Joshua Speed to buy a bed and some bedding. He found that they would cost seventeen dollars.

"The question is whether you would trust a man owing a national debt and without an asset but good intentions and a license to practice law, for so much money," said Honest Abe. "I don't know when I could pay you."

Speed had heard of the tall representative from Sangamon county.

"I have a plan which will give you a bed for nothing if you would care to share my room above the store and sleep with me," he answered.

"I'm much obliged, but for you it's quite a contract."

"You're rather long," Speed laughed. "Yes, I could lick salt off the top of your hat. I'm about a man and a half but by long practice I've learned how to keep the half out of the way of other people."

"I'm sure we shall get along well enough together," said Speed.

Mr. Lincoln hurried away for his saddle-bags and returned shortly.

"There are all my earthly possessions," he said as he threw the bags on the floor.

So his new life began in the village of Springfield. Early in the autumn Samson arrived and bought a small house and two acres of land on the edge of the village and returned to New Salem to move his family and furniture. When they drove along the top of Salem hill a number of the houses were empty and deserted, their owners having moved away. Two of the stores were closed. Only ten families remained. They stopped at Rutledge's tavern, whose entertainment was little sought those days. People from the near houses came to bid them good-by.

Pete and Colonel, invigorated by their long rest, but whitened by age and with drooping heads, drew the wagon. Sambo and the small boy rode between Sarah and Samson. Betsey and Josiah walked ahead of the wagon, the latter leading a cow. That evening they were comfortably settled in their new home. When the beds were set up and ready for the night Sarah made some tea to go with the cold victuals she had brought. Mr. Lincoln ate with them and told of his new work.

Betsey was growing tall and slim. She had the blond hair and fair skin of Samson and the dark eyes of her mother. Josiah had grown to be a bronzed, sturdy, good-looking lad, very shy and sensitive.

"There's a likely boy!" said Samson as he clapped the shoulder of his eldest son. "He's got a good heart in him."

"You'll spoil him with praise," Sarah protested and then asked as she turned to the young statesman, "Have you heard from Bim or any of the Kelsoes?"

"Not a word. I often think of them."

"There's been a letter in the candle every night for a week or so, but we haven't heard a word from Harry or from them," said Sarah. "I wonder how they're getting along in these hard times."

"I told Jack to let me know if I could do anything to help," Samson assured them.

Late in November Mr. Lincoln went out on the circuit with the distinguished John T. Stuart, who had taken him into partnership. Bim's letter to him bears an indorsement on its envelope as follows:

"This letter was forwarded from the circuit the week I went out on the circuit and remained unopened in our office until my return six weeks later.—A. Lincoln."

The day of his return he went to Sarah and Samson with the letter.

"I'll get a horse and start for Chicago tomorrow morning," said Samson. "They have had a double blow. Did you read that Harry had been killed?"

"Harry killed!" Mr. Lincoln exclaimed. "You don't mean to tell me that Harry has been killed?"

"The Chicago Democrat says so, but we don't believe it," said Samson. "Here's the article. Read it and then I'll tell you why I don't think it's so."

Abe Lincoln read the article.

"You see it was dated in Tampa, November the fifth," said Samson. "Before we had read that article we had received a letter from Harry dated November the seventh. In the letter he says he is all right and I calculate that he ought to know as much about it as anyone."

"Thank God! That's a mistake," said Lincoln. "We can't afford to lose Harry. I feel rather poor with Jack Kelso gone. It will comfort me to do what I can for his wife and daughter. I'll give you every dollar I can spare to take to them."

Samson hired horses for the journey and set out early next morning with his son, Josiah, bound for the new city. The boy had begged to go and both Samson and Sarah thought it would be good for him to take a better look at Illinois than his geography afforded.

Joe and his father set out on a cold clear morning in February. They got to Brimstead's in time for dinner.

Henry put his hand on Samson's pommel and said in a confident tone: "El Dorado was one of the wickedest cities in history. It was like Tyre and Babylon. It robbed me. Look at that pile of stakes."

Samson saw a long cord of stakes along the road in the edge of the meadow.

"They are the teeth of my city," said Brimstead in a low voice. "I've drawn 'em out. They ain't goin' to bite me no more."

"They are the towers and steeples of El Dorado," Samson laughed. "Have any of the notes been paid?"

"Not one and I can't get a word from my broker about the men who drew the notes—who they are or where they are."

"I'm going to Chicago and if you wish I'll try to find him and see what he says."

"That's just what I wish," said Brimstead. "His name is Lionel Davis. His address is 14 South Water street. I sold him all the land I had on the river shore and he gave me his note for it."

"There Are All My Earthly Possessions," He Said.

"If you'll let me take the note I'll see what can be done to get the money," Samson answered.

"Say, I'll tell ye," Brimstead went on. "It's for five thousand dollars and I don't suppose it's worth the paper it was written on. You take it and if you find it's no good you lose it just as careful as you can. I don't want to see it again."

SHE ALSO KNEW TENNYSON

Poetic Business Man Got Something of a "Jolt" When He Tackled Little Waitress.

The man with the superior air was a poetic business man. He generally patronized a small lunchroom near his office. When he was not selling eggs at wholesale or something, he liked to read verse. His favorite was Tennyson's "Idylls of the King." And because he felt that he knew so much about it he thought he would have a little fun with the lunchroom waitresses, in a superior sort of way.

It began by naming the girls after the heroines in the poem. His regular waitress was a tall, gaunt person, but somewhat queenly as she bore down on him with a plate of hash. Her real name was Sadie.

"Sadie," he announced one night, "hereafter I'm going to call you Guinevere. Mind?"

"I should worry," said the waitress, shifting her gum, "but who's she?"

"The bride of King Arthur," was the reply.

"Awful, but I hope she's respectable. I ain't seen that fellow."

So it went. All the girls were properly renamed. And then one day a new waitress was on the job. She was small and dark. Exceedingly pretty, he thought.

"I haven't named you yet," he told her after a couple of nights.

Then he explained his little indoor sport.

"I'll tell you be Elaine," he said.

"How ridiculous," she answered. "I can't be Elaine."

"Why not?"

"Tennyson says she was fair. I'm a brunette. Elaine the fair, Elaine the beautiful, Elaine the lily maid of Astolat." Evidently you don't remember how the lines went.

The superior bookworm called for his check.—New York Sun.

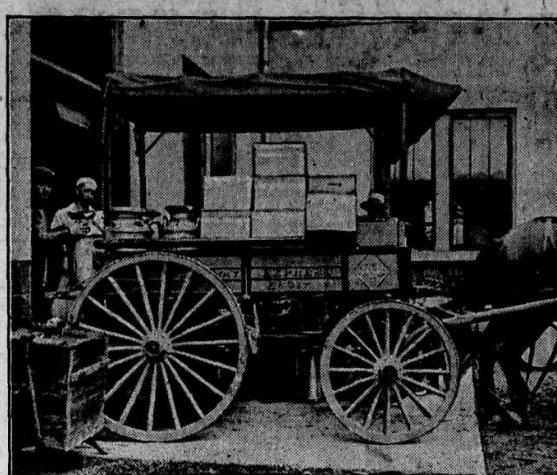

Advertisers at First Shy.

It took several years after the establishment of newspapers in America for advertising to become popular. John Campbell, the postmaster of Boston, who, in 1704, started the Boston News Letter, the first real newspaper in this country, had great difficulty in persuading his townspeople to advertise their wares or their wants. William Bradford and Peter Zenger in New York were hardly more fortunate at first, and even Benjamin Franklin, for many years after he began the publication of the Pennsylvania Gazette, found his advertising columns very meager. After 1850, however, the reluctance to advertise died away and all the leading papers showed that they were well supported.

Entirely Too Much.

"It is terrible what I spent during the entertainments for charity," declared Mrs. Newrich. "Two thousand for my dress and five hundred for my coat, besides the twenty for my charity contributions. It is too much."

CO-OPERATIVE PRINCIPLES MUST BE FOLLOWED IN ORGANIZATION

A Creamery Which Gathers the Milk or Cream of Many Producers, to Manufacture into Uniform High-Grade Dairy Products, is One of the Best Examples of Successful Co-operation.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture urge constantly the establishing of uniform standards for farm products, and declare that if these standards are maintained, once they have been adopted, the confidence of the public will be established, and the success of co-operative marketing more generally assured. Too many organizations are brought into being as a result of enthusiasm created by appeals to prejudice and by misconception. The proper foundation is through a well-recognized need for an organization.

"Co-operative principles," said a co-operative specialist of the bureau of markets, "must be adhered to in the organization and operation of farmers' marketing associations. The farmers themselves cannot be expected to have a vital interest in a marketing organization operated for the profit of and controlled by a few persons. Such an organization should be operated, of course, to effect savings and to render service and not to earn profits for distribution as dividends on money invested. A fair rate of interest is granted to the capital invested by the members, and the remainder of any surplus to be distributed should be divided in accordance with patronage, that is, the amount of business transacted with the organization.

Loyalty is Essential.

"The membership should be open to producers only who desire to avail themselves of its facilities, and there should be safeguards to prevent the ownership and control of the enterprise from falling into the hands of a few persons. The success of the entire effort depends upon the loyalty of the members and their interest in the organization, the high standards they maintain, and their distinct understanding that as a business association it should be managed by a man or men able to earn a dignified compensation. Disloyalty has caused the failure of more than one co-operative organization, and it is a weakness which can be remedied only by the members themselves.

"The manager, of course, is the keystone supporting the business. The salary offered him should attract high-class ability as in any business looking to success, and he should have authority to support his work. An enterprise business can be ruined by an incompetent manager at its head.

"A co-operative marketing association may be likened to a typewriter, which is a very efficient machine, but useless until you have some one competent to operate it. The success of co-operative marketing depends almost entirely upon obtaining a sufficient volume of business, observing true co-operative principles, employing capable management, having thoroughly modern business methods, and finally, loyal membership."

Steady Growth Tends to Success.

Men who have traveled in every part of the United States observing the work of co-operative organizations of various kinds, believe that the success of widespread co-operative marketing may be endangered through a poorly conceived hope or expectation that a hard and fast organization of producers will make it possible to sell anything and everything at a predetermined price without regard to quality or conditions. This is a dangerous attitude to assume.

Men who have given close attention to the subject declare that there is a widespread feeling that it is possible to revolutionize completely the entire system of marketing and attain success from the outset. This, of course, is impossible because it is necessary to build upon a solid foundation and to work out the many problems involved carefully. Steady, substantial and healthy growth tends to permanency and success.

No one should believe that because he is a member of a certain co-operative association, unusual prices are assured.

TO INSURE HEALTHY CALVES

If Cow Does Not Receive Abundance of Palatable Feed, Weak, Puny Calf Results.

Poorly nourished cows give birth to weak, puny calves which are hard to raise. The feeding of the calf, therefore, begins before it is born. The food elements necessary for the development of the calf are taken into the stomach of the cow, digested, assimilated and transmitted to the calf through the umbilical cord, the connection between the mother and the calf. It is evident that if the cow does not receive food enough to keep herself in thrifty condition and at the same time develop her calf, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, both she and the calf must suffer.

In endeavoring to raise good, thrifty calves many dairymen handicap themselves at the start by not properly feeding the pregnant cows. Such cows should have an abundance of palatable and succulent or juicy feed in order to insure good body flesh and healthy, thrifty condition at calving time. The calves will then be well developed, strong and sturdy, and ready to respond normally to proper feed and care.

PLANT PESTS CAUSE BIG LOSS OF WHEAT

Possible to Reduce Toll Much Below Present Figures.

Bureau of Plant Industry Working Out Preventive and Control Measures for Diseases of Different Cereal Crops.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

If all the wheat now destroyed annually by pests could be saved and made into flour the United States Department of Agriculture says it would add approximately 29,437,700 barrels to the yearly output to the nation. The annual production of wheat in this country for the four-year period, 1916 to 1919, inclusive, was 733,849,600 bushels. The annual loss from disease during this period was 147,318,500 bushels.

While it is not possible entirely to eliminate wheat diseases, it is possible to reduce the toll much below what it has been in recent years, says the department. One branch of the work of the office of cereal investigations in the bureau of plant industry is to work out the preventive and control measures for the diseases of all cereal crops. Another branch of the work of this office, which is of equal importance in increasing production of cereal crops, is the development and introduction of superior varieties of grain which produce higher yields in localities where they are especially well adapted, or which have disease-resistant qualities. This work is carried on in co-operation with the various state experiment stations, and in many cases has made profitable farming possible in sections in which agriculture was hazardous previous to the introduction of new crops or varieties particularly well suited to local conditions.

Heat Must Be Avoided.

Chickens in transit seldom become too cold. It is heat that must be avoided.

POULTRY AND DAIRY PROFITS

One of Very Best Ways Farmer Can Dispose of Surplus Milk is to Feed it to Fowls.

The dairyman (or the farmer who runs a small dairy in connection with his farm) is in an enviable position to make the biggest proportionate profits from a flock of poultry. One reason for this is that the best foods as milk producers are also excellent egg producers. For instance, clover, alfalfa, middlings, rye, etc., are all palatable and beneficial to cows and chicks alike—and so is an occasional mess of finely chopped sludge.

Furthermore, the cows furnish one of the best of foods for laying hens, for milk is a valuable egg food in any form. One of the very best ways any farmer can dispose of surplus milk with profit is to feed it to the hens, or to growing young stock. It furnishes just the materials needed for improving growth of eggs—and does it in a palatable, easily digested form—hence it is an exceedingly valuable product as an adjunct to the grain ration, which often lacks essential elements.

Decrease in Horses.

Before the days of the automobile, Philadelphia had 75,000 head of horses. The present number is approximately 24,000. Stables have decreased from 9,000 to 3,208.

Good Houses for Poultry.

It is not necessary to build expensive poultry houses, but they should be serviceable, fairly roomy, well lighted, and well ventilated without drafts.

Valuable Asset to Farmer.

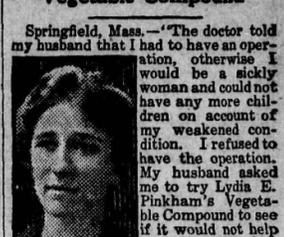

A reputation for honest weight and a uniform, high-grade product is just as valuable to the farmer as to the manufacturer.

Cause of Soft Shells.

Soft-shelled eggs are usually the result of an over-fat condition of the layers, a lack of lime in the feed, forced feeding of eggs or a combination of these causes.

WIFE TAKES HUSBANDS ADVICE

And Is Made Well Again by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Springfield, Mass.—"The doctor told my husband that I had to have an operation, otherwise I would be a sickly woman and could not have any more children on account of my weakened condition. I refused to have the operation. My husband asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see if it would help me. For the first four months I could do but little work, had to lie down most of the time, was nervous and could eat hardly anything, but my husband was always reminding me to take the Vegetable Compound, which I did. Of my eight children this last one was the easiest birth of all and I am thankful for your Vegetable Compound. I recommend it to my friends when I hear them complaining about their illa."—Mrs. M. NATALE, 72 Fremont St., Springfield, Mass.

Sickly, ailing women make unhappy homes, and after reading Mrs. Natale's letter one can imagine how this home was transformed by her restoration to health. Every woman who suffers from such ailments should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It is surely worth while.

PUTTING IT UP TO AUNTIE

Small Girl's Interrogation, Considering What Is Implied, Was Somewhat Embarrassing.

Nine-year-old Ruth had very thin hair, but still it was long enough to come to her waist, and she was proud of it. The family tried to get her to have it bobbed, but she stubbornly refused. One night Aunt Nora's young man, who, by the way, happened to possess a great charm for Ruth, arrived. Auntie, thinking that he might be able to persuade her on this occasion, secretly informed him of the affair, and then when Ruth came into the room mentioned the fact that she wished her niece to have her hair bobbed. He took the cue, and immediately told of how thick it made hair to have it bobbed. Ruth listened a minute and then looked at auntie's mass of pinned-up curls.

"Well, auntie," she said sweetly, "which one of us shall try it out first?"—Indianapolis News.

Pontoon Bridge Across the Hudson?

NEW YORK BRIDGE THE STRONG BRIDGE RIVER

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

PONTOON bridge across the Hudson! It sounds odd, but it seems likely. A year or so from now a pontoon bridge between Yonkers and Alpine, a roadway for automobiles and a footway for pedestrians strung across forty or fifty large ships for nearly a mile, is apt to be the latest new thing of the nation. It will be a new thing only in the United States. For the pontoon bridge is centuries old and is in common use now in Europe.

This pontoon bridge across the Hudson is proposed for these reasons: It is badly needed to relieve congestion; it is entirely feasible; it can be built in a year; it will cost only $2,000,000; ships that can serve as pontoons are already in existence.

There is no question as to the need of the bridge. The automobile congestion is notorious; the New York ferries are inadequate to handle the traffic. One of the great sufferers is the Palisades Interstate park. So it is natural that the first suggestion of the pontoon bridge came from Maj. W. A. Welch, engineer of the park commission.

This Palisades Interstate park it should be noted, is one of the great public playgrounds of the United States. The original park was established by New York and New Jersey to save the Palisades of the Hudson from quarries when they were blasting them for stone. Curiously enough it was the federated club women of the two states who succeeded in getting the park established. After all efforts by men had failed they induced the legislatures of the two states to take the necessary action and to make appropriations. The park was opened in 1909. Mrs. E. H. Harriman extended the area to 10,000 acres in 1910 by gift of land. That year there were a few thousand visitors, many of them campers. The possibilities of the park are seen. Since then everything that money and good management can do has been done for this park. More than $8,000,000 have been expended on it. Of this large sum 55 per cent has come from gifts by public-spirited citizens. It now contains about 30,000 acres, with improvements to fill every need. The bulk of the attendance comes from New York city. Children are sent by thousands on river boats. Boy scouts, Camp Fire girls and hundreds of organizations camp there. Thousands drive there. There are restaurants for every purse; facilities for every kind of recreation. The aggregate of the summer's attendance is enormous.

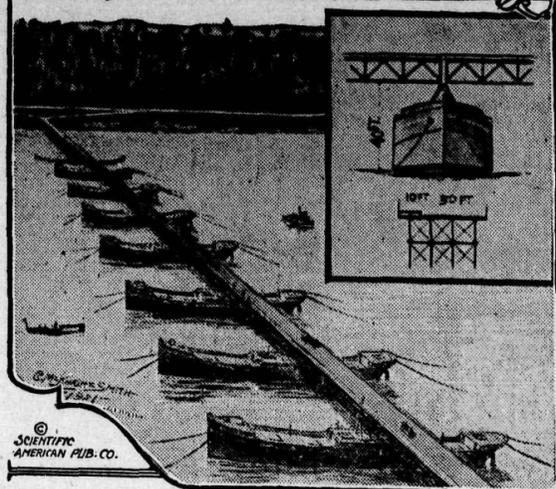

Moreover, this park enjoys the position of an object lesson of efficiency in public playgrounds. A capable engineer with a free hand has secured his money's worth in the improvements. The management is pointed out as a model. The management is vested in a permanent commission of five members from each state. They serve without pay and the post is one of honor. The late George W. Perkins, who was for many years a leading spirit of the commission, once said that the biggest thing the commission had accomplished was to keep politics out of the park.

As to the ships that can serve as pontoons, they're ready. As everyone knows, the shipping board slightly overplayed its hand in the matter of building wooden ships during the World war. There were 571 of these wooden ships constructed. Only 293 have been sold. It has been costing the government $50,000 a month to take care of the other 275. These ships cost on an average $500,000 each. For a time it seemed impossible to sell them at any price. Indeed, Representative Wood of Indiana recently said on the floor of the house:

"We have 275 of these wooden vessels down here in the mouth of the James river, tied up in units of seven each, with 40 men to the unit, each of them receiving $100 a month and his keep, costing the government $50,000 a month, or $600,000 a year, for a lot of boats that are not worth sinking.

The proposal to build a pontoon bridge at this point came first from Major W. A. Welch, engineer of the Palisades Interstate park commission. At present, because of the utterly inadequate facilities for getting across the river, the park is comparatively inaccessible to millions of New York city people. The matter was suggested to the major by the application of the shipping board for anchorage privileges, for idle wooden ships, in the Hudson river waters adjacent to the park. Major Welch suggested the use of the ships for a pontoon bridge to Mr. Otis H. Cutler, who is chairman of the Hudson River Bridge corporation, and he submitted the idea to Mr. Gustav Lindenthal, the designer of the Hudson river bridge. The undertaking was found to be entirely practical; in fact, Mr. Lindenthal had proposed the construction of a pontoon bridge across the Delaware at Philadelphia to assist the movement of military supplies during the war. This bridge would have been built but for the intervention of the armistice.

The bridge at Yonkers will, of course, be an emergency bridge, built

The government paid $200,000 to tow them in there, and it would be cheaper to pay $200,000 to tow them out and sink them rather than continue this expense for another six months."

Well, the United States shipping board finally agreed to sell 205 of its wooden vessels to the Ship Construction and Trading corporation of New York, for $2,100 each, or a total of $430,000, which is less than the estimated average cost of one of the ships.

The board, as will be noted, held out 70 ships. It conditionally reserved from the sale 50 vessels for use as pontoons to be used in building the proposed new bridge across the Hudson river.

It announced that if the pontoon bridge company wanted them it could have them for $2,100 each, or $105,000 for the fifty, otherwise they, too, would go to the bidder for the fleet, to which the 205 vessels are to be sold. The bidder for the whole fleet also assented to the elimination of 20 ships, to be sold at higher prices.

The Scientific American has published an illustrated article on this proposed pontoon bridge which contains the following interesting information:

It is now proposed to utilize the pontoon method of bridge building on a very extensive scale by a crossing of the Hudson river from Yonkers to Alpine. The width from shore to shore is 5,700 feet, and the length of the pontoon bridge between the trestle approaches will be about 4,900 feet. Provision will be made for the passage of Hudson river steamers by building some form of drawbridge, probably of the lift type, across the main channel of the river. There will be enough clearance between the water and the under side of the bridge to permit of the passage of river tows and the smaller craft, without opening the drawspan.

The proposal to build a pontoon bridge at this point came first from Major W. A. Welch, engineer of the Palisades Interstate park commission. At present, because of the utterly inadequate facilities for getting across the river, the park is comparatively inaccessible to millions of New York city people. The matter was suggested to the major by the application of the shipping board for anchorage privileges, for idle wooden ships, in the Hudson river waters adjacent to the park. Major Welch suggested the use of the ships for a pontoon bridge to Mr. Otis H. Cutler, who is chairman of the Hudson River Bridge corporation, and he submitted the idea to Mr. Gustav Lindenthal, the designer of the Hudson river bridge. The undertaking was found to be entirely practical; in fact, Mr. Lindenthal had proposed the construction of a pontoon bridge across the Delaware at Philadelphia to assist the movement of military supplies during the war. This bridge would have been built but for the intervention of the armistice.

The bridge at Yonkers will, of course, be an emergency bridge, built

Grasshoppers as Food.
Grasshoppers are a staple article of the food markets in Arabia, Syria, Egypt and Madagascar, and when roasted or fried in butter, with a little parsley, are said to be delicious, according to the Detroit News. The nimble grasshopper is a vegetarian; he lives in the sun and his flesh when cooked is white and delicate. In the oriental countries, where it is appreciated, the little creatures are prepared for export by being dried in the sun or preserved in brine.

Platinum Coinage.
Between 1825 and 1845 Russia used platinum coinage.

Flowers and the Seasons
The relation of the colors of flowers to the seasons has attracted the attention of a Canadian professor, who finds that, of 539 flowering plants in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, about one-third have white flowers. Yellow flowers come next and comprise about one-quarter of the total. Purples and blues form about one-ninth or tenth. White flowers are commonest in April, May and June, where-to give temporary relief to the unimaginable crowding of automobiles, which is heavy in any day of the week and unbelievably bad (by those who have not witnessed it) on Sundays and holidays. It is nothing unusual to find one's self on the western side of the river, or on the eastern side for that matter, with a string of automobiles miles in length between one's machine and the ferry; and a wait of several hours is a usual occurrence at these times. The pontoon bridge, which Mr. Lindenthal says can be built in less than a year, at a cost of two million dollars, will afford immediate relief a dozen miles to the north of New York city, and will ease up the crowding of the New York ferries very materially.

The plans call for a series of steel trusses 160 feet in length, which will be carried by steel A-towers rising from the decks of the ships, which will thus take the part of the usual piers. There will be four lines of trusses each 10 feet in depth, upon which will be laid a wooden flooring with a total thickness of 12 inches. The width out-and-out of the trusses will be 30 feet, and the width over all of the floor will be 40 feet. Thirty feet of this will provide a roadway sufficient for three lines of automobiles and adjoining this will be a 10-foot sidewalk for foot passengers. The steel towers or piers will be erected at the middle of the ship, and each tower will consist of four braced bents with their posts batted in the direction of the axis of the bridge, the width being 20 feet where they rest upon the deck of the ship, and 3 feet at the top, where they receive the ends of the steel spans.

The wooden ships which will be taken over from the shipping board will be about 40 in number. They are of what is known as the Ferris type, 231.6 feet in length by 45.2 feet broad. When the bridge is completed, the underside of the trusses will be about 40 feet above the water. The ships will be very securely anchored either by massive anchors sunk in the river bottom or by massed piling driven ahead and astern of the ships. It will readily be understood that because of the great size of the ships, the secure manner in which they will be anchored, and the absence of any waves sufficient to cause any roll or scend of the ships, the bridge, to all intents and purposes, will be as rigid as one whose piers reached to the river bottom. Furthermore, because of the length of the ships, it will be possible in the future to make a very quick and comparatively inexpensive addition to the capacity of the bridge by erecting additional towers and steel spans adjoining those at present proposed.

Safety First.
"Yes," said the timid passenger to the aviator, "I understand I'm to sit still and not be afraid, and all that; but tell me, in case something happens and we start to fall, what do I do?"
"Aw, that's easy?" said the birdman. "Just grab anything we're passing and hang on tight!"

Horror Beyond Any Fiction
Scenes Enacted at Funeral of Madman at Vilna Would Have Staggered Modern Dramatist.

Grand Guignol plays are outdone by a drama enacted at Vilna a short time ago, an exchange states. An inmate of the local asylum died and the confined body was taken into the chapel. Another lunatic, who had seen the body of his comrade carried away, stole into the chapel, took the body from the coffin and put it in the cupboard used to keep the church furniture. This done, he lay down in the coffin, covered himself with a shroud and fell asleep. A few hours later a priest arrived and conducted a requiem service. When it was finished bearers lifted the coffin to take it away for the burial. The motion woke the madman, who jumped out, struck one of the bearers a blow on the head and ran away.

The bearer collapsed and died from fright, while the priest and the others fled panic-stricken. Their cries brought a crowd to the chapel entrance. Eventually some of the bravest ventured inside to ascertain what had happened. They found an empty coffin and a dead man on the floor, and naturally put the corpse into the coffin. They then began to search for the shroud, which the madman had taken away with him. One of the searchers opened the cupboard in the hope of finding something fit to cover the body. Directly he did so the hidden dead man fell on him head first and knocked him down. The live man fainted from fright, and panic again filled the chapel, the crowd rushing out and scattering through the city. It was only after several hours' work by the police that the matter was cleared up.

Character Told by the Nose.
A turned-up nose indicates cheerfulness and somewhat of a chatter-box. A bulging nose, from tip to root, with graceful lines, denotes wit. The hawk nose denotes brain power rather than strength of character; it can be mean, sullen and pessimistic. A pinched, thin nose flaring out at base with expanding nostrils is apt to be voluptuous.

The End of a Feud

By MARTHA MACWILLIAMS.

Miss Sue dropped in upon the gossip, Mrs. Manny, while that lady was washing up breakfast things to say breathlessly: "Must be some truth in this talk of the world coming to an end! Actually Liza Brown came to church last night with a beau—and who should the beau be but Prof. McGoodin!"

"No!" Mrs. Manny cried. "Don't ask me to believe that! Why, she'd run if a man more than said 'Howdy' to her—and as for him—why, Brother Ben says he never recognizes the existence of anything in less than six syllables."

"I know, but I saw them—plain. Be sure they made one stir in church. Don't believe ten people heard the feet, much less the sermon," said Miss Sue. "It was funny after dismissal—everybody standing stock still a minute, as though waiting for bride and groom to go down the aisle. And how they stared—out of eye-sockets, you may say. No telling how long they would have kept it up, hadn't been for Jeff Davis Perry. He may be wild, but he knows what to do in a pinch, so here he steps out, beckons the other boys just the least bit—and there they had the whole congregation moving. Liza and the professor were beet-red, knowing what it all meant—but when they had melted into the crowd they seemed not to mind. How I know is, I walked home right behind 'em."

"What did they talk about?" Mrs. Manny broke in.

Miss Sue giggled. "Stars, and the Chaldees, and the Babe in the Manger," she said. "Oh, he's got words a plenty, when he has the mind for 'em. Then stars really belonged last night—they were so big and bright, and looked to be just above the treetops."

"I do wonder—will that be a go?" Mrs. Manny answered reflectively. "Nothing to hinder. Liza has got a nice property, besides her home. And he has money in the Building and Loan—besides what he gets for fooling with bugs and snails and things at the laboratory."

"Mrs. Parley Pindar knows all that—better'n we do, I reckon," said Miss Sue. "She's nose-ny anyway—then him boarding in the house so long—why, she's Jerry-on-the-spot."

"She always is—about other people's business," Mrs. Manny commented acidly. "But did you ever hear how she spoke to him down town one day—and had to tell him who she was?"

Miss Sue nodded, saying: "I call that rich. She can't have her claws on him very deep. But, mark my word, she'll hold him like grim death. Somebody ought to tell Liza—she's so shy and home-keeping. I doubt if she has ever heard a word."

Multiply this conversation by near half the houses in Hillside—result, Hillside's amazement over the church going. Before next Sunday bets were laid on the event—covertly, because Jeff Davis Perry took it upon himself to discountenance vigorously any making of the nascent romance a sporting event. His word carried weight, socially and financially, albeit he was under thirty, and given to minding his own business. Somehow standing up for those who could not stand up for themselves appeared to him a vital part of his business. Men ought to fight their own battles—therefore McGoodin did not count. But Miss Liza, a faded, pretty thing, close upon forty, withered in the shadow of a stern paralytic mother until the time of love and mating was past, appealed to his manhood. She had nobody nearer than a banker-cousin who thought the whole duty of a kinsman was keeping Liza from wasting her substance in charity and asking her to dinner at Christmas and Thanksgiving. She always declined the invitations—what she did then was something between her and sundry pensioners. Nep and Jim, the loyal black pair, who served her as they had done her mother, could have told fine tales, but they held to the silence they felt due the queer doings of quality white folks.

Jeff Davis was the more bound to her service by the ancient feud between their grandfathers. It had been bitter enough, bloody enough, in the old time to divide a church and disrupt a political campaign. As a very small boy Jeff Davis had been taught to hate the name of Jones. As a man he laughed at that old rancor. However, Miss Liza might feel her name should not be bandied about by light tongues.

She came to church Sunday night as usual—but alone. And Jeff Davis took it upon himself to walk home with her. He had his reward, for seated on the steps was a beautiful, forlorn something which cried plaintively: "If you're Cousin Liza do please let me in! I've knocked till my knuckles are sore and nobody comes."

"Nep sleeps like the dead," Miss Liza interrupted, Jeff Davis the meanwhile busy with her key, but not busy enough to keep from hearing the strange girl run on: "You don't know me but you know my name—I'm Jones—Sarah Southly—and I've run away to you because—"

There she stopped abruptly—the hall light, left burning, flooded; thus she saw Jeff Davis plain—as he also saw the creature of his dreams. The dream-creature held out a hand to him, saying: "Of all things! To find you this way!" Then to Miss Liza: "You look kind enough to help us. I'm here because Aunt Penny vows I'll deserve death unless I give up Jeffy—all on account of some foolishness so long back everybody ought to have forgotten it."

"But—but Cousin Penny is your legal guardian. I don't know what to do," Miss Liza gasped out, "except this—to take you in and give you some supper, then put you to bed. You look fit to drop."

"Carried unanimously—with three cheers," Jeff Davis said before the girl could speak—the part about the rousing cheers was quite underbreath. He took both the girl's trembling hands and half carried her inside. But when he would have explained to Miss Liza she was not there. Very shortly she came back, led them to the dining room, stately with its dark mahogany and old silver. A table richly spread invited appetite. Love may take away appetite—but these lovers, being human and healthy, ate rejoicingly, looking happily at each other, while Miss Liza busied herself with the coffee—it had not boiled, though she set the electric percolator going first thing.

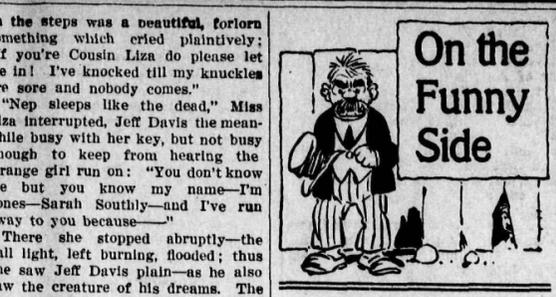

"Now you must tell me everything, both of you," she said when she had set cups steaming fragrantly before them. "It's just like a maze—a puzzle I'm just beginning to see through." Jeff Davis began: "How was I to know Sarah Southly, with whom I fell in love at first sight, was part Jones? Mrs. Gribble—Aunt Penny—wouldn't let me come to the house—but would not, either, give me a reason. Now I understand. It was the family feud. Do you?"—to Miss Liza—"feel that it ought to stand between us?"

"No! A hundred times no!" Miss Liza cried standing up. "It has done no harm enough without that. I say, no more living sacrifices. I myself am one."

"Can you tell us?" Jeff Davis asked, awed, when he thought she could go on.

"Yes—it takes such a little while," she said wilyly. "You know, I'm a Jones inbred—mother and father were cousins. And—and when I was just seventeen I met and loved Arthur Perry, your uncle," to Jeff Davis. "He asked mother if we might marry—father was dead—and she grew so furious with him—with me—it brought on her stroke. After that I couldn't leave her—Arthur said so himself. He was killed in the troubles over Cuba."

"I know," Jeff Davis said, reverently clasping Sarah's hand. Miss Liza laid her own hand over theirs, saying tremulously: "I am going to have you married this night. When that is done we'll let Aunt Penny know all about it."

On the Funny Side

SUBTLE COMPLIMENT.
"Why did you put that sign over your desk, 'This is my busy day?'" "It makes a good impression," answered Senator Sorghum, "when an influential constituent calls."

"But it might give offense."
"Not at all. It adds to a visitor's sense of importance when I give him a cigar and tell him I want a long chat with him."

Spoiled His Usefulness.
"Hon. T. J. Twobble doesn't seem interested in the ordinary affairs of life."
"A great misfortune overtook him."
"A private sorrow?"
"No, a public one. About ten years ago he was mentioned for the presidency and ever since he has worn the air of a man who has served two terms in the White House and doesn't know what to do with himself."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Buying Material.
"You got some drawings?"
"Yes."
"What's the other feller got?"
"Poetry," said the other feller.

"Well, it's this way, boys," said the magazine man. "I gotta have something to wedge the prose articles apart. I don't care what it is. You two toss for it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Maybe There Isn't.
"Pa," said little Thomas Twobble, "what is a philosopher?"
"The only kind of philosopher I'm acquainted with," said Mr. Twobble, "is the man who doesn't seem to think there is anything to worry about as long as his wife conducts a prosperous boarding house."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Spirit of Submission.
"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "hadn't we better keep a little money and jewelry in the hall?"
"I thought you were afraid of burglars?"
"I am. If one should break in and find no valuables, he might be terribly irritated."

Quick Action.

Mohbs—Certainly. Why?
Dobbs—I'm just going in to get divorced.—London Tit-Bits.

Crude Methods of Defense.
Pueblo Indians were never warriors, but in the old days they were subject to frequent attacks by the wandering tribes, such as the Apaches and the Navajos. Therefore many of the crude adobe houses were built with port-holes up near the roof, which the occupants used to defend themselves from the attackers. Many of these old houses are still standing, and port-holes are still there, just as they were years and years ago. Of course they are all occupied, for no new houses are built unless there is an absolute necessity for them.

Reason Enough.
"Why," indignantly asked the prospective customer, as he looked at the ancient relic of the pioneer days of motordom, "did you advertise this reminiscence as a 'late model?'"
"Well, anybody who drives it will never get anywhere on time, that's a cinch."—Retail Ledger, Philadelphia.

WONDERFUL GAIN IN WEIGHT REPORTED

Young Woman Only Weighed 79 Pounds—Now Weighs Over 100 and is Gaining Every Day.

"Before I began taking Tanlac I only weighed 76 pounds. I now weigh over one hundred and am gaining every day," said Miss LaRue Davis of Chattanooga, Tenn.

"I bought my first bottle of Tanlac at Gas City, Ind., and it helped me so much that I continued using it. I have always been very delicate and suffered a great deal from stomach trouble and rheumatism. I rarely ever had any appetite and simply could not relish anything. I fell off until I only weighed 70 pounds and was so thin I looked perfectly awful. This is the condition I was in when I began taking Tanlac.

"Oh, I feel so different now. Even my complexion is improved. My appetite is good and I can hardly get enough to eat. Tanlac is simply grand and I can truthfully say it is the only medicine that has ever done me any good."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

Hard Lines!
"Unfair, I say," remarked the glove-counter girl with the red hair.
"What is unfair?"
"The way they treated that ship that just landed from England."

"What did they do to it?"
"It had been only four days crossing the Atlantic, hadn't laid off an hour, and run every minute—"
"Yes?"
"And still, when it got here, they docked it!"—Retail Ledger, Philadelphia.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Hurry, mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

The Latest Style in Spats.
Brown and his wife were having a lively little family spat because he was going out for the evening, for the third time in one week.

"You never spend an evening at home!" Mrs. Brown informed him. "It's just go, go, go! Why, if you ever spent an evening at home I believe I'd drop dead!"

"Well, it's no use in talking like that," Brown insisted. "You can't bribe me!"—Kansas City Star.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a Tonic and acts through the blood upon the mucous surfaces of the body, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions. All Druggists. ## Measuring Rainfall.

To measure rainfall it is necessary to use a rain gauge. In its common form it consists of a cylindrical vessel closed at the top by a funnel-shaped lip, through a hole in the center of which the rain falls. A narrow glass tube, rising outside of the vessel from near the bottom, shows the amount of rain in the vessel. A very simple rain gauge consists of a copper funnel, the area of whose opening ing is exactly ten square inches. This funnel allows the rain to pass into a bottle, and the quantity of rain caught is ascertained by multiplying the weight in ounces by .173, which gives the depth in inches. A rain gauge must be placed in an open position as possible, away from trees, houses or other obstructions.

Grasshoppers as Food.
Grasshoppers are a staple article of the food markets in Arabia, Syria, Egypt and Madagascar, and when roasted or fried in butter, with a little parsley, are said to be delicious, according to the Detroit News. The nimble grasshopper is a vegetarian; he lives in the sun and his flesh when cooked is white and delicate. In the oriental countries, where it is appreciated, the little creatures are prepared for export by being dried in the sun or preserved in brine.

Horror Beyond Any Fiction
Scenes Enacted at Funeral of Madman at Vilna Would Have Staggered Modern Dramatist.

Grand Guignol plays are outdone by a drama enacted at Vilna a short time ago, an exchange states. An inmate of the local asylum died and the confined body was taken into the chapel. Another lunatic, who had seen the body of his comrade carried away, stole into the chapel, took the body from the coffin and put it in the cupboard used to keep the church furniture. This done, he lay down in the coffin, covered himself with a shroud and fell asleep. A few hours later a priest arrived and conducted a requiem service. When it was finished bearers lifted the coffin to take it away for the burial. The motion woke the madman, who jumped out, struck one of the bearers a blow on the head and ran away.

The bearer collapsed and died from fright, while the priest and the others fled panic-stricken. Their cries brought a crowd to the chapel entrance. Eventually some of the bravest ventured inside to ascertain what had happened. They found an empty coffin and a dead man on the floor, and naturally put the corpse into the coffin. They then began to search for the shroud, which the madman had taken away with him. One of the searchers opened the cupboard in the hope of finding something fit to cover the body. Directly he did so the hidden dead man fell on him head first and knocked him down. The live man fainted from fright, and panic again filled the chapel, the crowd rushing out and scattering through the city. It was only after several hours' work by the police that the matter was cleared up.

NOTICE

To the voters who so generously supported my candidacy and made me the Republican nominee for the office of Sheriff of Ocean County at the Primary Election on Tuesday, I wish to express my sincere thanks.

Should my nomination be followed by election, I pledge to all the people my most faithful service.

JOSEPH L. HOLMAN,
Nominee for Sheriff at General Election, November 6, 1921.

Lakewood, N. J., September 30, 1921.
(Paid for by Jos. L. Holman)

TO THE VOTERS OF OCEAN COUNTY:

I want to thank my friends for the loyal way that they stood by me in the last primary election; that you should have polled over 2200 votes and made me the third highest candidate in a field of eight is greatly to be appreciated when all of the circumstances are known. The splendid tribute paid me by my home town is also appreciated beyond measure.

Sincerely yours,
LILA W. THOMPSON.

FORMER PRESIDING ELDER OF THIS DISTRICT PASSED THE HALF CENTURY MARK OF SERVICE

Celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of his pulpit life, the Rev. Dr. James W. Marshall preached his golden anniversary sermon at Broadway Methodist Episcopal church, Broadway and Berkele ystreet, Camden, on Sunday last, when he observed the sacrament of holy communion and delivered a brief address in the morning.

His was the longest pastorate in the history of the Broadway church, and it was during his pastorate that the present structure was completed.
