GREAT LETTUCE CROP IS WASTED AS PRICES JUMP

A crop of 100,000,000 heads of lettuce is going to waste on New Jersey farms because the public cannot get it at reasonable prices. Growers, who are anxious to sell it at little more than the cost of packing and marketing in order to recover some fraction of the cost of production but find the big city markets blocked, claim their investigations show this condition exists because consumers are being charged "war prices, plus" for the product. Comparisons of prices paid the farmer and prices charged the housewife show a maximum spread of from 400 to 600 per cent and suggest a new record in profiteering on food supplies, State Market officials declare.

S. accepted the challenge and proceeded to prepare for the opening contest which was played at Barnegat on October 7. The contest was hard fought until the final whistle blew with the score 23-15 in favor of Barnegat. Line up:

TIMELY TATTLE ABOUT LINGERIE AND FURS

STYLES in undermuslins are more stable than those in our outer garments, but they change gradually and surely. The trend for some time has been toward sheer fabrics and color; pink and flesh color were the pioneers and are now as well established as white, but they are not alone. This season finds all the pretty, flower-like hues claiming attention and joining their ranks are vivid high colors and black. In the matter of sheer materials we have reached the limit, with chiffon and net. The average woman stops short of such gossamer stuffs and chooses fine

In the list of small fur garments, which includes scarfs, capes and garments with sleeves, scarfs lead, by a long way, in popularity. The scarf, in its smaller sizes, is an all-the-year-round convenience, less costly than its rivals that consume more fur and more time in their making, but quite as becoming as any of them. It is much in evidence just now with tailored suits and dresses and nearly mul, batiste, crepe de chine or French voile, all as soft and dainty as heart could wish and all reliably durable. Voile is a recent acquisition and promises to rival crepe de chine. It has been transplanted to the Philippines and there made up into beautifully embroidered lingerie that comes in many lovely, unaccustomed colors. Nightdresses are designed along the simplest lines and many of them are sleeveless. Those of colored crepe de chine include models that are cut in points at the bottom, and are merely plain chemise lengthened to the ankles.

all these small scarfs are made of dark or stone marten, mink or fox, in one or two-skin pieces.

These same furs, supplemented by sealskin, squirrel, kolinsky, mole and other pelts make the ample scarfs, wide and long, to be worn with muffs in colder weather, and between the extremes of the choker and the long scarf there are a few shaped scarfs somewhat like little capes at the back but having scarf ends. In all scarfs little heads and the natural tails are employed as a finish, but a few models substitute pompons of fur for tall and simply round off the end where one would look for the head.

All edges are picoté and two or three rows of hemstitching above the picoté edge suffices for trimming, but a pretty ribbon rose is posed at the neck and a narrow girdle of two-toned satin ribbon is tied at the front, with long ends hanging to the hem. The envelope pattern remains the favorite and is made up in all the usual materials and some unusual colors. Many bloomers are made of jersey silk.

Sealskin and moleskin are particularly well adapted to small wraps that are something between a cape and a coat, like the handsome garment pictured, and in these rich little affairs the collar is apt to be in a different fur.

A Damp Cellar.

You can cure cellar dampness in the following way: Take one pound of rough kitchen salt, powder it and divide into four portions. Procure four old tins and put the salt in them and stand in the cellar. The salt will attract the moisture from the air. As soon as it becomes saturated with moisture stand the tins on the warm stove. The heat will cause the water to evaporate and leave the salt dry and ready for use again. When potatoes have to be stored in a cellar this plan should always be adopted, as it helps to prevent the potatoes sprouting.

DURABLE FINISH FOR OLD FLOORS

Varnish, Paint and Stain Help Appearance and Make Them Easier to Care For.

NEUTRAL COLOR IS FAVORED

Plane or Sandpaper to Make Level and Smooth as Possible, Carefully Removing or Driving in Tacks Nails and Screws.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"What can I do with these dingy old floors? Until this year they've been carpeted, but I know that the house would be more sanitary and easier to clean with finished floors and rugs that could be taken out of doors every week. I'd like to get the floors fixed while the boys are home from school to help, but I don't know how to start."

This problem is perplexing many housekeepers who want their homes to look well and at the same time to make house cleaning easier.

Dull Neutral Color is Best.

The most durable and attractive finish for a floor depends on the kind of wood and how it has been treated, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Unfinished pine, spruce, or other softwood floors can be varnished, stained and varnished, or painted, depending somewhat on the condition of the wood and the rest of the woodwork in the house. Whatever finish is chosen, a dull neutral color that tones in with walls and furnishing is best.

First of all, make the floor as level and smooth as possible. Plane or sandpaper rough places, and draw out all remnants of tacks or drive them below the surface with a nail set. Then scrub the wood with hot soap suds or scouring powder, and rinse thoroughly with clear water. Ink stains and similar spots can often be bleached out with a solution made by dissolving one teaspoonful of oxalic acid in one cupful of hot water. This solution is poisonous and must, of course, be carefully handled, also all traces of it and of soap suds or scouring powder must be removed with clean water, otherwise they will injure the finish used on the floor.

Homemade Stain for Floors.

When the wood is perfectly dry the stain, paint, or varnish can be applied.

For a pine floor, a good brown stain can be made by dissolving an ounce of permanganate of potash in a quart of warm water. This liquid is violet colored, but when applied to wood, chemical action results and the wood is stained brown.

Another brown stain for either hardwood or softwood is made from 1 1/2 ounces of pulverized gilsonite dissolved in a quart of turpentine.

Apply either of these stains with a clean brush or a sponge, taking even strokes parallel with the grain of the wood, and wipe the stained surface at once with a clean, soft cloth or cotton waste. After the stain has dried for at least 24 hours, polish the floor with a soft cloth, and apply another coat if the color is not deep enough, or finish with varnish or wax.

Use Best Quality of Varnish.

Varnish is generally preferred on soft floors, and the best quality of shellac varnish or that especially recommended for floors should be used. Some varnishes are unsuitable for floors because they leave a hard, brittle coating that is easily marred, and wears off quickly. Shellac varnish may be mixed at home as follows:

Two pounds gum shellac. One-half pound castor oil. One gallon alcohol denatured according to United States revenue formula No. 1. Put these ingredients into a well-stoppered bottle in a warm place, and shake the mixture frequently until the shellac is dissolved. The alcohol should not contain more than 5 per cent of water, and care should be taken not to drop any water into it as it is being mixed with the dry shellac. The castor oil aids in making varnish flexible and less brittle when dry, but may be omitted. In that case the quantity of gum shellac should be increased to 2 1/2 pounds. If too thick, this varnish may be thinned by the addition of more alcohol.

Have the surface of the wood and the air in the room free from dust before varnishing. Also, if possible, have the temperature of the room 70 degrees Fahrenheit or higher, and apply the varnish in the morning, because it dries better in the daylight. Brush the varnish in a thin coat with even strokes parallel with the grain of the wood. Allow the floor to dry for at least two days and apply one or perhaps two more coats in the same way.

Painted Floors Easy to Clean.

Good quality paint of neutral color also makes a good finish for softwood floors. At least two coats should be applied. After the last coat of paint is dry, a soft lustrous finish can be given with equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine. Rub this on with a soft cloth, and polish the floor with a woolen cloth.

CLUB GIRLS PERFECT WORK ASSIGNED THEM

Idaho Members Honored for Completing Their Tasks.

Not Only Make Garments but Put Clothing Work on Business Basis Learn How to Dress Well at Very Small Cost.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The band turned out recently in Twin Falls county, Idaho, to lead a procession of 180 girls who didn't change their minds. They were clothing club girls organized by the county club agent of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural college. The original enrollment of the club was 180 members, and each one completed all of the work assigned. No wonder everyone who could appeared for the "achievement day" celebration in honor of their 100 per cent completion record!

These girls not only made garments but put their clothing work on a business basis. Each one began by making an inventory of her wardrobe. She listed what she should add to it, estimated the cost, planned what would be best for her to make during the year, and then set about securing results as a part of her club program. The girls proved to their families that their work was an important factor in extending the family income, and they demonstrated to all the other girls of the county how to dress well at small cost.

DELICIOUS DISH OF MUTTON

Steak Smothered in Tomato Sauce is Recommended by the Home Economics Kitchen.

Mutton steak (a slice from the thicker portion of the leg) will serve more people when cooked in the following manner than when served plain, and is delicious. The following recipe for this dish is recommended by the home economics kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture.

1 1/2 pounds mutton 1 can tomatoes, or steak 1 quart fresh to- 1 cup bread crumbs matoes cut in 1 small onion slices Poultry seasoning Salt

Spread over the mutton steak a layer of bread crumbs mixed with the minced onion and other seasonings. Roll and tie into shape. Place in a casserole or other dish with a tightly fitting cover. Pour the tomatoes over the meat and cook very slowly in the oven or on top of the stove for three or four hours. If the tomatoes do not cover the meat add a little boiling water.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Boil rice in plenty of water until the grains swell open.

Keep your dish cloth sweet and clean and don't forget to boil it.

If custards are allowed to bake too long they become dry and stringy.

Large boiled beets hollowed and filled with macedoine of carrots make an attractive dish.

When the apples with which you are going to make sauce are tasteless, add some chopped mint.

Spaghetti is delicious reheated in the cream gravy of fried chicken and served on a platter with the chicken.

Delicious bread-sticks are made from slices of bread cut half an inch wide, spread with butter and delicately browned in oven.

Plain egg custard may be made interesting by adding stoned dates before baking.

String beans may be cooked with grated cheese and served as the main dish for luncheon.

In a room only partially carpeted, felt glued to the feet of the chairs will prevent a great deal of noise.

Two ounces of borax sprinkled over a garbage can or refuse pile will effectually prevent flies from breeding.

BACK YARDS MADE BETTER

Contest Spurs Boys and Girls of Findlay to Beautify Their Home Surroundings.

More than 100 back yards of Findlay, O., now look better than most Findlay front yards as a result of an idea of Council President Frank J. Collingwood, whose hobby is attractive environments for the home.

Mr. Collingwood enlisted the support of the local Rotary club and the Chamber of Commerce in what he termed a "better back yard" contest as a means of heightening juvenile interest in Findlay in improved yards and home surroundings, and at the same time bettering the community's outside appearance.

A list of eleven prizes was announced for the contest—one a grand prize for either a boy or girl, five for boys and five for girls. Mr. Collingwood himself furnished the money for the prizes, to the extent of several hundred dollars.

The Chamber of Commerce took charge of the routine of the contest and when the lists closed for entrants there were a score more than 100 in the race for the coveted awards.

The contest lasted a little over a month, in which miracle transformations were wrought in many back yards in the city, by the youthful contestants. Working entirely alone, boys and girls in many instances, the judges reported, had to start with nothing but dump heaps, rough, weed-covered plots and the like. But hoes, rakes and spades, coupled with a generous amount of energy and above all a desire to win one of the eleven prizes, brought results, which were remarkable, according to the judges.

In making the awards, it wasn't alone the neatness of the yards that counted, but the condition of the yard at the start was taken into consideration as well and the progress that was made had a great deal to do with the award. Gardens were a part of the required work.

"There must be some real value in yard beautification, or large concerns wouldn't spend thousands of dollars in it every year," said Mr. Collingwood in presenting the prizes. "In fact, I am told it does pay real interest on the investment in better satisfied employees who like attractive environments in which to work."

BUILT IT WITH POTATOES

How the Citizens of Patricia, Alberta, Obtained Their Much Needed Town Hall.

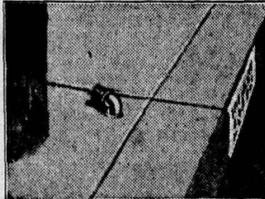

Patricia needed a town hall. Being only two years old, this was a problem to the infant village in the southern Alberta prairies. Ways and means were discussed. It was finally decided to build it with potatoes.

Twenty acres were plowed and planted to spuds. Breaking the land, seeding and cultivating were all done by volunteers. Everybody took a hand. The community potato patch now promises a heavy crop.

The entire town tends it. When the first potato plant peeped above ground it was a municipal event. The town fathers called a mass meeting to take action when a vagrant rooster scratched up a plant. Discovery of a weed that had escaped the community hoes caused as much excitement as a fire alarm. The potato patch is looked after as tenderly as if it were the town's baby.

Two years ago the entire country about Patricia was open prairie with not a human habitation in the round of the horizon. The first house was built in 1919. Today there are 20,000 acres under cultivation.

Many Homes Too Crowded.

Many people have an unnecessary amount of hangings and draperies, ornaments, knick-knacks, and other dust harborers about their houses; rooms have too many ornamental moldings, books, crannies, and corners about them; and all these harbor dirt and dust, and time will not allow them to be cleaned except on quite rare occasions, which may be annually at the time called "spring cleaning." Carpets may be very well in their way, and make a room more cozy, but it is certain they are not so cleanly as linoleum or stained and polished floors, with a few rugs or mats placed where required, and easily taken up and freed from dust.

India Land of Mystery.

India is said to be "the burning heart of Asia." That is to say, it has a genius for religion that is unsurpassed. Of the four great faiths which had their genesis in Asia, three were born in India. It is a land of 147 languages. Some of them are spoken by only a few people, but there are ten of these languages, each of which is spoken by 10,000,000 or more. Of every 100 people in the world, eighteen live in India. The latest census of India gives the population as 318,132,537.

SELF-RELIANCE GOES BANKRUPT

Thin Blood Saps Energy—Gude's Pepto-Mangan Rebuilds the Blood.

Wrestling with a weakened condition of the blood is a desperate struggle. Thin, watery blood deprives the body of energy and causes a played-out feeling not unlike utter exhaustion. A man with weak blood has not the full use of his powers. He lacks decision, and vacillates until he loses self-confidence.

Some men, and women too, go faltering along for months scarcely realizing that they need Gude's Pepto-Mangan, the blood-builder. But when they have taken it for a while, what a difference there is in the feelings! The old-time vigor and the red-blooded hue of good health return. The new rich blood, lifting the spirit up to its normal standard. Physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for years as a blood-builder. Druggists sell it in liquid and tablet form. Look for the name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" on the package.—Advertisement.

A Joke on the Judge.

An old man had been found guilty of theft, and was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment.

"Thank you, yer honor," he said, on hearing the sentence; "I'm very glad; I didn't think at my age I'd got half as long as that to live."

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

The "Bayer Cross" means the genuine, world-famous Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over twenty-one years.—Advertisement.

Dangerous Curves.

The Sandman Story

THE REDBIRD'S COLOR

ONCE upon a time the redbird, or Summer Tanager, was not red all over, as he is now, but, like his little wife, the upper parts of his little body were yellowish-olive green and the underneath parts of the orange-yellow shade.

One day while he was singing in an orange grove and thinking of beautiful things, which, of course, made his song very sweet, he wondered if he had a red coat if the picture would not be more beautiful.

So away he went to the dell where the fairies reveled at night, and when the Queen came to him, she said:

SO WHILE SHE CARED FOR THE EGGS, HE CARRIED TO HER SOMETIMES A CHOICE WORM.

The Queen drove over the mossy carpet he flew to her pearl carriage and alighted on the back of it.

He almost tipped it over, for he forgot he was much heavier than the Queen and her little carriage together, but, of course, the Queen forgave him

"What's in a Name?"

Facts about your name: its history, meaning, whence it was derived, significance, your lucky day and lucky jewel
By MILDRED MARSHALL

BELINDA.

THE quaint and charming name of Belinda is derived from the Italian. Though most frequently applied in modern fiction to the sweetest of the sex, and pretty coquettes, Belinda means "a serpent." So beware, young men, of the baby doll who answers to the cunning, old-fashioned name!

How Belinda came to be evolved is not clear to etymologists. She simply appeared in Italy and is believed to have had her origin in the fashionable craze for names ending in "a" which swept Europe in Queen Anne's Augustan age. The first Belinda recorded in history was the wife of Orlando, a debut sufficiently prominent to spread the name far and wide. But greater vogue was to be hers, and when Pope chose Belinda for his heroine of "The Rape of the Lock" her permanence was assured.

In those days it needed only a famous author to immortalize a feminine name by putting her in a book and all the fashionable maids of the country adopted her for their own, just as today a screen favorite's coiffure, and costumes are copied by adoring flappers. Belinda flourished in England and Italy, but her popularity was negligible in France, and Germany refused her completely. Spain took her from Italy, but, despite the vowel ending, she was a bit too harsh for Spanish ears. America welcomed her wholeheartedly, and she flourishes here today, both actually and in fiction.

Belinda's gem is the cat's-eye. It is a talisman against evil and disease and has a mysterious magnetic power which renders its wearer irresistible to those whom she wishes to attract. Friday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number.

Diana Allen

This is a face of a prominent "movie" star familiar to thousands of regular visitors to the motion picture houses. She is the charming Diana Allen, recently starring in a big production constructed from a story by a very prominent author.

Then he told the Queen about his plan and that he wished to have a red coat of feathers, because they would look so beautiful in the orange grove with the golden fruit and green leaves and the blossoms.

"But how about your little mate?" asked the Queen. "It will not be safe for her to wear a red dress when she has the nest and the babies to care for. She should not be too easily seen by those who are not kind of birds."

Mr. Redbird had not thought about that, so off he flew to ask his wife what it was best to do.

The next night he returned to the dell with his little mate, who told the Queen she would continue to wear her modest dress and care for the nest and her babies.

So the Queen called for the tinting fairy and let Mr. Redbird select the color he wished to have for his coat, and while the fairies danced around him and his little wife, the Queen changed his feathers to red, wings and tail and body.

"Oh, isn't he beautiful!" said his little wife. "I am proud of you, my dear; I shall never tire of looking at you."

They then thanked the Queen and flew away, and while Mr. Redbird could not often visit his mate while she was on the nest because of his red coat, he did not forget how unselfish she was and did not make a fuss because she could not have her dress changed to the color of his coat.

So while she cared for the eggs, he carried to her sometimes a choice worm, or blossom or berry, and always, where she could hear him, he sang to her his very sweetest song.

And that is how the Redbird got his red coat, and just as he did long ago, all the Redbirds today sing to their mates and carry choice morsels to them because the dear little mother bird of long ago was willing to wear her old dress, so she could take care of the nest and the birdlings while her husband wears the red coat that everyone admires.

If it is not seemly, do it not—Marcus Aurelius.

JUST because a young woman has accepted your company as escort to a dance is no reason to believe that she wishes to give you any more dances than she does to any of the other young men whom she knows who are present. But it is the escort's duty to see that the young woman has a reasonable number of dances taken, and this result he achieves, even when she is not one of the most popular of the young women present, by introducing her to other young men.

Usually the escort requests the young woman he escorts for her supper dance—if there be one—at the beginning of the evening; but he has no ground for taking offense if she gives this to some one else. However, he is not privileged to take his supper dance with another young woman unless he sees that the young woman he has escorted has a partner for that dance.

It is customary for the escort, after taking off his own hat and coat, to await his companion in the hall or corridor before going into the ball room or reception room. It would be most inconsiderate of him to start filling out his own dance order before she had arrived.

Before beginning the evening's dancing, the escort should inquire of his companion how long she wishes to remain. If she expresses her wish to leave after the first half of the dances are over—or anywhere else on the program—he should make a mark through the section in the dance order beyond this point, as a reminder not to engage any dances after that time. If she signifies her desire to leave before the time she suggested it is clearly the duty of the escort to leave with her even though in doing so he has to cancel dances promised to other young women with whom he has engaged these dances who, if they are familiar with society usage, will take no offense.

Unless a young man is engaged to a young woman or is her brother and hence regards himself as her guardian, he has no right to dictate to her regarding the young men with whom she should dance. At a small private dance, the fact that the young men have been invited by his hostess should be guarantee enough as to their good manners. To suggest to his companion that she should not dance with them would be a discourtesy to the hostess. At a public dance he should introduce her only to young men he can vouch for, but even if his own worst enemy were present he would have no right to expect her to decline to dance with him.

How It Started

THE MODERN NEWSPAPER.

IN ANCIENT Rome military events, results of elections, etc., were written on tablets and posted under the head of Acta Diurna (daily acts). This was the antecedent of the newspaper. In China the Peking Tching-Pao (News of the Capitol) has appeared since 713 A. D. These examples, however, were not true journals. The first regular newspaper was the Frankfurter Journal, published by Egenolph Emmel in 1615.

TIMELY TATTLE ABOUT LINGERIE AND FURS

STYLES in undergarments are more stable than those in our outer garments, but they change gradually and surely. The trend for some time has been toward sheer fabrics and color; pink and flesh color were the pioneers and are now as well established as white, but they are not alone. This season finds all the pretty, flower-like hues claiming attention and joining their ranks are vivid high colors and black. In the matter of sheer materials we have reached the limit, with chiffon and net.

The average woman stops short of such gossamer stuffs and chooses fine

In the list of small fur garments, which includes scarfs, capes and garments with sleeves, scarfs lead, by a long way, in popularity. The scarf, in its smaller sizes, is an all-year-round convenience, less costly than its rivals that consume more fur and more time in their making, but quite as becoming as any of them. It is much in evidence just now with tailored suits and dresses and nearly

It has been transplanted to the Philippines and there made up into beautifully embroidered lingerie that comes in many lovely, unaccustomed colors. Nightdresses are designed along the simplest lines and many of them are sleeveless. Those of colored crepe de chine include models that are cut in points at the bottom, and are merely plain chemise lengthened to the ankles.

all these small scarfs are made of dark or stone marten, mink or fox, in one or two-skin pieces. These same furs, supplemented by sealskin, squirrel, kolinsky, mole and other pelts make the ample scarfs, wide and long, to be worn with muffs in colder weather, and between the extremes of the choker and the long scarf there are a few shaped scarfs somewhat like little capes at the back but having scarf ends. In all scarfs little heads and the natural tails are employed as a finish, but a few models substitute pompons of fur for tails

Small Fur Garments

All edges are pteoted and two or three rows of hemstitching above the pteoted edge suffices for trimming, but a pretty ribbon rose is posed at the neck and a narrow girde of two-toned satin ribbon is tied at the front, with long ends hanging to the hem. The envelope pattern remains the favorite and is made up in all the usual materials and some unusual colors. Many bloomers are made of jersey silk.

Sealskin and moleskin are particularly well adapted to small wraps that are something between a cape and a coat, like the handsome garment pictured, and in these rich little furs the collar is apt to be in a different fur,

DURABLE FINISH FOR OLD FLOORS

Varnish, Paint and Stain Help Appearance and Make Them Easier to Care For.

NEUTRAL COLOR IS FAVORED

Plane or Sandpaper to Make Level and Smooth as Possible, Carefully Removing or Driving in Tacks Nails and Screws.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"What can I do with these dingy old floors? Until this year they've been carpeted, but I know that the house would be more sanitary and easier to clean with finished floors and rugs that could be taken out of doors every week. I'd like to get the floors fixed while the boys are home from school to help, but I don't know how to start."

This problem is perplexing many housekeepers who want their homes to look well and at the same time to make house cleaning easier.

Dull Neutral Color is Best.

The most durable and attractive finish for a floor depends on the kind of wood and how it has been treated, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Unfinished pine, spruce, or other softwood floors can be varnished, stained and varnished, or painted, depending somewhat on the condition of the wood and the rest of the woodwork in the house. Whatever finish is chosen, a dull neutral color that tones in with walls and furnishing is best.

First of all, make the floor as level and smooth as possible. Plane or sandpaper rough places, and draw out all remnants of tacks or drive them below the surface with a nail set. Then scrub the wood with hot soap suds or scouring powder, and rinse thoroughly with clear water. Ink stains and similar spots can often be bleached out with a solution made by dissolving one teaspoonful of oxalic acid in one cupful of hot water. This solution is poisonous and must, of course, be carefully handled, also all traces of it and of soap suds or scouring powder must be removed with clean water, otherwise they will injure the finish used on the floor.

Homemade Stain for Floors.

When the wood is perfectly dry the stain, paint, or varnish can be applied.

For a pine floor, a good brown stain can be made by dissolving an ounce of permanganate of potash in a quart of warm water. This liquid is violet colored, but when applied to wood, chemical action results and the wood is stained brown.

Another brown stain for either hardwood or softwood is made from 1 1/2 ounces of pulverized gilsonite dissolved in a quart of turpentine.

Apply either of these stains with a clean brush or a sponge, taking even strokes parallel with the grain of the wood, and wipe the stained surface at once with a clean, soft cloth or cotton waste. After the stain has dried for at least 24 hours, polish the floor with a soft cloth, and apply another coat if the color is not deep enough, or finish with varnish or wax.

Use Best Quality of Varnish.

Varnish is generally preferred on soft floors, and the best quality of shellac varnish or that especially recommended for floors should be used. Some varnishes are unsuitable for floors because they leave a hard, brittle coating that is easily marred and wears off quickly. Shellac varnish may be mixed at home as follows:

Two pounds gum shellac. One-half pound castor oil. One gallon alcohol, denatured according to United States revenue formula No. 1. Put these ingredients into a well-stoppered bottle in a warm place, and shake the mixture frequently until the shellac is dissolved. The alcohol should not contain more than 5 per cent of water, and care should be taken not to drop any water into it as it is being mixed with the dry shellac. The castor oil aids in making varnish flexible and less brittle when dry, but may be omitted. In that case the quantity of gum shellac should be increased to 2 1/2 pounds. If too thick, this varnish may be thinned by the addition of more alcohol.

Have the surface of the wood and the air in the room free from dust before varnishing. Also, if possible, have the temperature of the room 70 degrees Fahrenheit or higher, and apply the varnish in the morning, because it dries better in the daylight. Brush the varnish in a thin coat with even strokes parallel with the grain of the wood. Allow the floor to dry for at least two days and apply one or perhaps two more coats in the same way.

Painted Floors Easy to Clean.

Good quality paint of neutral color also makes a good finish for softwood floors. At least two coats should be applied. After the last coat of paint is dry, a soft lustrous finish can be given with equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine. Rub this on with a soft cloth, and polish the floor with a woolen cloth.

CLUB GIRLS PERFECT WORK ASSIGNED THEM

Idaho Members Honored for Completing Their Tasks.

Not Only Make Garments but Put Clothing Work on Business Basis Learn How to Dress Well at Very Small Cost.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The band turned out recently in Twin Falls county, Idaho, to lead a procession of 180 girls who didn't change their minds. They were club girls organized by the county club agent of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural college. The original enrollment of the club was 180 members, and each one completed all of the work assigned. No wonder everyone who could appear for the "achievement day" celebration in honor of their 100 per cent completion record!

These girls not only made garments but put their clothing work on a business basis. Each one began by making an inventory of her wardrobe. She listed what she should add to it, estimated the cost, planned what would be best for her to make during the year, and then set about securing results as a part of her club program. The girls proved to their families that their work was an important factor in extending the family income, and they demonstrated to all the other girls of the county how to dress well at small cost.

DELICIOUS DISH OF MUTTON

Steak Smothered in Tomato Sauce is Recommended by the Home Economics Kitchen.

Mutton steak (a slice from the thicker portion of the leg) will serve more people when cooked in the following manner than when served plain, and is delicious. The following recipe for this dish is recommended by the home economics kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture.

1 1/2 pounds mutton 1 can tomatoes, or steak 1 quart fresh milk 1 cup bread crumbs matoes cut in 1 small onion slices Poultry seasoning - Salt

Spread over the mutton steak a layer of bread crumbs mixed with the minced onion and other seasonings. Roll and tie into shape. Place in a casserole or other dish with a tightly fitting cover. Pour the tomatoes over the meat and cook very slowly in the oven or on top of the stove for three or four hours. If the tomatoes do not cover the meat add a little boiling water.

Keep your dish cloth sweet and clean and don't forget to boll it.

If custards are allowed to bake too long they become dry and stringy.

Large boiled beets hollowed and filled with macedoine of carrots make an attractive dish.

Spaghetti is delicious reheated in the cream gravy of fried chicken and served on a platter with the chicken.

Delicious bread-sticks are made from slices of bread cut half an inch wide, spread with butter and delicately browned in oven.

Plain egg custard may be made interesting by adding stoned dates before baking.

String beans may be cooked with grated cheese and served as the main dish for luncheon.

Home Town Helps

BACK YARDS MADE BETTER

Contest Spurs Boys and Girls of Findlay to Beautify Their Home Surroundings.

More than 100 back yards of Findlay, O., now look better than most Findlay front yards as a result of an idea of Council President Frank J. Collingwood, whose hobby is attractive environments for the home. Mr. Collingwood enlisted the support of the local Rotary club and the Chamber of Commerce in what he termed a "better back yard" contest as a means of heightening juvenile interest in Findlay in improved yards and home surroundings, and at the same time bettering the community's outside appearance.

A list of eleven prizes was announced for the contest—one a grand prize for either a boy or girl, five for boys and five for girls. Mr. Collingwood himself furnished the money for the prizes, to the extent of several hundred dollars.

The Chamber of Commerce took charge of the routine of the contest and when the lists closed for entrants there were a score more than 100 in the race for the coveted awards.

The contest lasted a little over a month, in which miracle transformations were wrought in many back yards in the city, by the youthful contestants. Working entirely alone, boys and girls in many instances, the judges reported, had to start with nothing but dump heaps, rough, weed-covered plots and the like. But hoes, rakes and spades, coupled with a generous amount of energy and above all a desire to win one of the eleven prizes, brought results, which were remarkable, according to the judges.

In making the awards, it wasn't alone the neatness of the yards that counted, but the condition of the yard at the start was taken into consideration as well and the progress that was made had a great deal to do with the award. Gardens were a part of the required work.

"There must be some real value in yard beautification, or large concerns wouldn't spend thousands of dollars in it every year," said Mr. Collingwood in presenting the prizes. "In fact, I am told it does pay real interest on the investment in better satisfied employees who like attractive environments in which to work."

BUILT IT WITH POTATOES

How the Citizens of Patricia, Alberta, Obtained Their Much Needed Town Hall.

Patricia needed a town hall. Being only two years old, this was a problem to the infant village in the southern Alberta prairies. Ways and means were discussed. It was finally decided to build it with potatoes.

Twenty acres were plowed and planted to spuds. Breaking the land, seeding and cultivating were all done by volunteers. Everybody took a hand. The community potato patch now promises a heavy crop.

The entire town tends it. When the first potato plant peeped above ground it was a municipal event. The town fathers called a mass meeting to take action when a vagrant rooster scratched up a plant. Discovery of a weed that had escaped the community hoos caused as much excitement as a fire alarm. The potato patch is looked after as tenderly as if it were the town's baby.

Two years ago the entire country about Patricia was open prairie with not a human habitation in the round of the horizon. The first house was built in 1919. Today there are 20,000 acres under cultivation.

Many Homes Too Crowded.

Many people have an unnecessary amount of hangings and draperies, ornaments, knick-knacks, and other dust harborers about their houses; rooms have too many ornamental moldings, books, crannies, and corners about them; and all these harbor dirt and dust, and time will not allow them to be cleaned except on quite rare occasions, which may be annually at the time called "spring cleaning." Carpets may be very well in their way, and make a room more cozy, but it is certain they are not so clean as linoleum or stained and polished floors, with a few rugs or mats placed where required, and easily taken up and freed from dust.

India Land of Mystery.

India is said to be "the burning heart of Asia." That is to say, it has a genius for religion that is unsurpassed. Of the four great faiths which had their genesis in Asia, three were born in India. It is a land of 147 languages. Some of them are spoken by only a few people, but there are ten of these languages, each of which is spoken by 10,000,000 or more. Of every 100 people in the world, eighteen live in India. The latest census of India gives the population as 318,182,537.

SELF-RELIANCE GOES BANKRUPT

Thin Blood Saps Energy—Gude's Pepto-Mangan Rebuilds the Blood.

Wrestling with a weakened condition of the blood is a desperate struggle. Thin, watery blood deprives the body of energy and causes a play-acted feeling not unlike utter exhaustion. A man with weak blood has not the full use of his powers. He lacks decision, and vacillates until he loses self-confidence.

Some men, and women too, go faltering along for months scarcely realizing that they need Gude's Pepto-Mangan, the blood-builder. But when they have taken it for a while, what a difference there is in the feelings! The old-time vigor and the red-blooded hue of good health return. The new rich blood gets to work, building, fortifying, lifting the spirit up to its normal standard. Physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for years as a blood-builder. Druggists sell it in liquid and tablet form. Look for the name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" on the package.—Advertisement.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper. Advertisement.

THE REDBIRD'S COLOR

ONCE upon a time the redbird, or Summer Tanager, was not red all over, as he is now, but, like his little wife, the upper parts of his little body were yellowish-olive green and the underneath parts of the orange-yellow shade.

One day while he was singing in an orange grove and thinking of beautiful things, which, of course, made his song very sweet, he wondered if he had a red coat if the picture would not be more beautiful.

So away he went to the dell where the fairies reveled at night, and when

"What's in a Name?"

Facts about your name: its history, meaning, whence it was derived, significance, your lucky day and lucky jewel
By MILDRED MARSHALL

BELINDA.

THE quaint and charming name of Belinda is derived from the Italian. Though most frequently applied in modern fiction to the sweetest of the sex, and pretty coquettes, Belinda means "a serpent." So beware, young men, of the baby doll who answers to the cunning, old-fashioned name!

How Belinda came to be evolved is not clear to etymologists. She simply appeared in Italy and is believed to have had her origin in the fashionable craze for names ending in "a" which swept Europe in Queen Anne's Augustan age. The first Belinda recorded in history was the wife of Orlando, a debut sufficiently prominent to spread the name far and wide. But greater vogue was to be hers, and when Pope chose Belinda for his heroine of "The Rape of the Lock" her permanence was assured.

In those days it needed only a famous author to immortalize a feminine name by putting her in a book and all the fashionable maids of the country adopted her for their own, just as today a screen favorite's costume, and costumes are copied by adoring flappers. Belinda flourished in England and Italy, but her popularity was negligible in France, and Germany refused her completely. Spain took her from Italy, but, despite the vowel ending, it was a bit too harsh for Spanish ears. America welcomed her wholeheartedly, and she flourishes here today, both actually and in fiction.

Belinda's gem is the cat's-eye. It is a talisman against evil and disease and has a mysterious magnetic power which renders its wearer irresistible to those whom she wishes to attract. Friday is her lucky day and 7 her lucky number. (Copyright.)

Do you care as much for your babies as a florist cares for his flowers?

EVERY florist knows this: Flowers which will thrive in air warmed by hot-water radiators will wilt in the heat from a hot-air furnace or stove.

Warm, moist air builds health; hot, dry air undermines it.

Have you ever considered these facts in their relation to the winter health of your babies?

The American Radiator Company considered them when conducting the scientific experiments that produced ARCOLA.

You simply must see ARCOLA. It is new and different. Built by the Company whose larger heating plants warm mansions, cathedrals and even the White House itself, it is guaranteed to be the most perfect hot-water heating outfit for small homes and stores which science has produced.

The red and yellow card at the right is the sign of a Heating or Sanitary Engineer who you used to call him Steamfitter or Plumber who can show you ARCOLA. Look for it in his window. It will pay you to consult him twice a year as you do your Doctor or Dentist. To have him examine and report on your heating and plumbing costs little. It may save you a very great deal.

A MAN FOR THE AGES A STORY OF THE BUILDERS OF DEMOCRACY BY IRVING BACHELLER

CHAPTER XXII.

Wherein Abe Lincoln Reveals His Method of Conducting a Lawsuit in the Case of Henry Brimstead et al., vs. Lionel Davis.

They found many of Davis' notes in Tazewell county. Abe Lincoln's complaint represented seven clients and a sum exceeding twenty thousand dollars.

With the papers in his pocket Harry went on to the Honey Creek settlement. There he found that the plague had spent itself and that Bin had gone to a detention camp outside the city of Chicago.

Harry spent the afternoon with Mrs. Kelso and Bin's baby boy. He wrote a very tender letter to Bin that day. He told her that he had come to Chicago to live so that he might be nearer and ready to help her if she needed help.

"Dear Harry: Your letter pleased and pained me. I have been so tossed about that I don't know quite where I stand. For a long time my life has been nothing but a series of emotions.

"I went because there was no escape from it and with the shadow of God's wrath in my soul," Samson writes. "The sun rose as we halted our horses. We paced the field. The two men took their places twenty yards apart. The pistols rang out at the command to fire and both men fell. Davis had been hit at the left shoulder.

"If I ever feel the soul within me elevate and expand to those dimensions not wholly unworthy of its Almighty Architect, it is when I contemplate the cause of my country deserted by all the world besides, and I standing up boldly and alone and hurling defiance at her victorious oppressors.

"I'm glad you like the boy. He is a wonderful child. I named him Nehemiah for his grandfather. We call him Nim and sometimes 'Mr. Nimble' because he is so lively. I'm homesick to see him and you. I am going to Dixon to teach and earn money for mother and the baby.

"God bless you!" "BIM." In a few weeks the suit came on. Davis' defense, as given in the answer, alleged that the notes were to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of lots and that in consequence of the collapse of the boom there had been no such proceeds.

"The surgeon said that Harry would live if lung fever didn't set in. It set in, but he pulled through. He mended slowly. I had some fear of arrest, but the conspiracy of silence kept the facts under cover. It was partly due, I guess, to the friendship of John Wentworth for me and Honest Abe. He kept it out of the papers. There were no complaints and the rumors soon fell into silence.

"The boy, 'Mr. Nimble,' is a cunning little man. When he began to get better, Harry loved to play with him and listen to his talks about fairies. The young man was able to leave his bed, by and by, but he didn't get over his weakness and pallor. He had no appetite. I sent him with Nuckles into the Wisconsin woods to live in the open. Then I took the small boy to Dixon with me in the saddle. Bin had just got back to her work. She told me that Eliphaz Biggs had been there. He had heard of the boy and wished to see him and demanded to know where he was. For fear that Biggs would try to get possession of 'Mr. Nimble' I took him with me to Springfield in the saddle.

"I learn that Davis has recovered his health and left the city. A man can not do business without friends and after the trial Chicago was no place for him."

"So you called on the famous novelist?" "Yes," said Mrs. Gawker. "Did you find him in a brown study?" "Why, no. I think the room was finished in blue." Birmingham Age-Herald.

"I shall not fight with Judge Douglas. A fight could prove nothing at issue in this campaign. It might prove that he is a more muscular man than I, or that I am a more muscular man than he, but this subject is not mentioned in either platform. Again, he and I are really very good friends and when we are together he would no more think of fighting me than of fighting his wife. Therefore, when the judge talked about fighting, he was not giving vent to any ill feeling, but was trying to excite—well, let us say, enthusiasm against me on the part of his audience."

Justice accomplished her ends now and then with comic displays of violence in the prairie capital. One night Abe Lincoln and certain of his friends captured a shoemaker who had beaten his wife and held him at the village pump while the aggrieved woman gave him a sound thrashing. So this phase of imperialism was cured in Springfield by "hair off the same dog," as Lincoln put it.

One evening, while E. D. Baker was speaking in the crowded village courtroom above Lincoln's office and was rudely interrupted and in danger of assault, the long legs of Honest Abe suddenly appeared through a scuttle hole in the ceiling above the platform. He leaped upon it and seizing a stone water pitcher defied any one to interfere with the right of free speech in a worthy cause.

So it will be seen that there were zealous moments in these sundry vindications of the principles of Democracy in the prairie capital. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Samson for his troubles, flung an insult at the sturdy Vermont. Samson, who had then arrived at years of firm discretion, was little disturbed by the anger of a man so discredited. But Harry, on the sound of the hateful words, had leaped forward and dealt the speculator a savage blow in the face which for a few seconds had deprived him of the power of speech. That evening a friend of Davis called at the city hall with a challenge. The hot-blooded young soldier accepted it against the urgent counsel of Samson Traylor. Mr. Lincoln having left the city.

As to the details of the tragic scene that followed next day, the writer has little knowledge. Samson was not the type of man for such a chronicle. The diary speaks of his part in it with shame and sorrow and remorse. We know that it was at daybreak when he and Harry rode to a point on the prairie "something more than a mile from the city limits." There he tells us they met Davis and one friend of the latter and two surgeons. It is evident, too, that great secrecy had been observed in the plan and its execution and that, until some time after the last act, Lincoln knew nothing of the later developments in the drama of Davis' downfall. For the rest of the deplorable scene the historian must content himself with the naked details in the diary of a puritan pioneer.

"I went because there was no escape from it and with the shadow of God's wrath in my soul," Samson writes. "The sun rose as we halted our horses. We paced the field. The two men took their places twenty yards apart. The pistols rang out at the command to fire and both men fell. Davis had been hit at the left shoulder. My handsome boy lay on his face. The bullet had bored through his right lung. Before I could reach him he had risen to his feet to go on with the battle. Davis lay like one paralyzed by the shock of the bullet. His seconds declared they were satisfied. I saw them take the bullet out of

The Two Men Took Their Places.

Harry's back, where it had lodged under his skin. I helped them put the wounded men into the wagon and rode to the home of one of the doctors near the city wherein were rooms for the accommodation of critical cases, leading Harry's horse and praying for God's help and forgiveness. I took care of the boy until Steve Nuckles came to help me. Bin arrived when Harry was out of his head and didn't know her. She was determined to stay and do the nursing, but I wouldn't let her. She did not look strong. I loaned her the money to pay the debt to Davis and persuaded her to go back to her work in Dixon. She went and was rather heartbroken about it.

"The surgeon said that Harry would live if lung fever didn't set in. It set in, but he pulled through. He mended slowly. I had some fear of arrest, but the conspiracy of silence kept the facts under cover. It was partly due, I guess, to the friendship of John Wentworth for me and Honest Abe. CHAPTER XXIII. Which Presents the Pleasant Comedy of Individualism in the New Capital, and the Courtship of Lincoln and Mary Todd.

Samson, with "Mr. Nimble" on a pad stuffed with straw in front of him, jogged across the prairies and waded the creeks and sloughs on his way to Springfield. The little lad was in his fourth year that summer. He slept and talked much on the way and kept Samson busy with queries about the sky and the creeks and the great flowery meadows.

They camped the first night in a belt of timber and Samson writes that the boy "slept snug against me with his head on my arm. He went to sleep crying for his mother." He adds: "It reminded me of the old days of my young fatherhood. 'Mr. Nimble' wanted to pick all the flowers and splash his bare feet in every stream. In the evening he would talk to the stars as if he were playing with them. He is like some of the grown folks in Chicago. He would sit hanging on to the reins, and talk to the horse and to God by the hour. He used to tell me that God was a friend of his and I think he was right. It was good luck to get back to Sarah and the children. They took the little stranger into their hearts. 'Heart room, house room' is the motto of this part of the country."

It was a new town to which Samson returned. The governor and the state officers had moved to Springfield. The new capital was nearing completion. The hard times which had followed the downfall of '37 had unjustly diminished Mr. Lincoln's confidence in his ability as a legislator. He enjoyed the practice of the law, which had begun to turn his interest from the affairs of state. But the pot of political science boiled before the fireplace in the rear of Joshua Speed's store every evening that Lincoln and his associates were in Springfield. The wit and wisdom which bubbled into its vapors and the heat that surrounded it were the talk of the town. Many came to witness the process and presently it was moved, for a time, to more accommodating quarters. Before a crowd of people in the Presbyterian church, Lincoln, Logan, Baker and Browning for the Whigs, and Douglas, Calhoun, Lamborn and Thomas for the Democrats, having assiduously prepared for the trial, debated the burning issues of the time. The effort of each filled an evening and Lincoln's speech gave him new hope of himself. Wise men began to have great confidence in his future. He had taken the style of Webster for his model. He no longer used the broad humor which had characterized his efforts on the stump. A study of the best speeches of the great New Englander had made him question its value in a public address. Dignity, clear reasoning and impressiveness were the chief aims of his new method, the latter of which is aptly illustrated by this passage from his speech in reply to Douglas in the debate mentioned:

"If I ever feel the soul within me elevate and expand to those dimensions not wholly unworthy of its Almighty Architect, it is when I contemplate the cause of my country deserted by all the world besides, and I standing up boldly and alone and hurling defiance at her victorious oppressors. Here without contemplating consequences before high heaven and in the face of the world I swear eternal fidelity to the just cause, as I deem it, of the land of my life, my liberty and my love."

In these perceptive utterances one may find little to admire save a great spirit seeking to express itself and lacking as yet the refinement of taste equal to his undertaking. He was no heaven-born genius "spring in full panoply from the head of Jove." He was just one of the slow, common folk, with a passion for justice and human rights, slowly feeling his way upward. His spirit was growing. Strong in its love and knowledge of common men and of the things necessary to their welfare, it was beginning to seek and know "the divine power of words." Every moment of leisure he gave to the study of Webster and Burke and Byron and Shakespeare and Burns. He had begun to study the art of Irving and Walter Scott and of a new writer of the name of Dickens.

There were four men who slept with him in the room above Speed's store, and one of them has told how he used to lie sprawled on the floor, with his pillow and candle, reading long after the others had gone to sleep. Samson writes that he never knew a man who understood the art of using minutes as he did. A detached minute was to him a thing to be filled with value. Yet there were few men so deeply in love with fun. He loved laugh at a story-telling and to match his humor with Thompson Campbell—a famous raconteur—and to play with children. Fun was as necessary to him as sleep. He searched for it in people and in books.

He came often to Samson's house to play with "Mr. Nimble" and to talk with Joe. Some of his best thoughts came when he was talking with Joe and some of his merriest moments when he was playing with "Mr. Nimble." He confessed that it was the latter that reminded him that he had better be looking for a wife.

But Lincoln was only one of many remarkable personalities in Springfield who had discovered themselves and were seeking to be discovered. Sundry individuals were lifting their heads above the crowd, but not with the modesty and self-distrust of Honest Abe. "Steve" Douglas, whom Samson had referred to as "that little rooster of a man," put on the stiffs of a brave and ponderous vigor. His five-foot stature and his hundred pounds of weight did not fit the part of Achilles. But he would have no other. He blustered much with a spear too heavy for his hands. Lincoln used to call him a kind of popgun.

This free-for-all joust of individualism—one of the first fruits of freedom in the West—gave to the life of the little village a rich flavor of comedy. The great talents of Douglas had not been developed. His character was as yet shifty and shapeless. Some of the leading citizens openly distrusted him. Lincoln never liked this U-man, in opposing whom he was to come to the fulness of his power on the platform. It is evident that Lincoln regarded him as an able advocate of small sincerity looking chiefly for personal advancement.

There is a passage in the diary which illustrates the character of Douglas and Lincoln's knowledge of it. The passage relates to a day in the famous debates of 1858. Lincoln had not reached Havana in time to hear the speech of his opponent. A great crowd had come by train and in wagons. Taking advantage of his absence, Douglas had called Lincoln "a liar, a coward and a sneak," and declared that he was going to fight him. Lincoln heard of this and said in his speech:

"I shall not fight with Judge Douglas. A fight could prove nothing at issue in this campaign. It might prove that he is a more muscular man than I, or that I am a more muscular man than he, but this subject is not mentioned in either platform. Again, he and I are really very good friends and when we are together he would no more think of fighting me than of fighting his wife. Therefore, when the judge talked about fighting, he was not giving vent to any ill feeling, but was trying to excite—well, let us say, enthusiasm against me on the part of his audience."

Justice accomplished her ends now and then with comic displays of violence in the prairie capital. One night Abe Lincoln and certain of his friends captured a shoemaker who had beaten his wife and held him at the village pump while the aggrieved woman gave him a sound thrashing. So this phase of imperialism was cured in Springfield by "hair off the same dog," as Lincoln put it.

One evening, while E. D. Baker was speaking in the crowded village courtroom above Lincoln's office and was rudely interrupted and in danger of assault, the long legs of Honest Abe suddenly appeared through a scuttle hole in the ceiling above the platform. He leaped upon it and seizing a stone water pitcher defied any one to interfere with the right of free speech in a worthy cause.

So it will be seen that there were zealous moments in these sundry vindications of the principles of Democracy in the prairie capital. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

EARTH'S SURFACE IN UNREST

Scientists Have Proved That It is Never at Any Time Without Some Movement.

No portion of the earth's surface is ever at rest, though all but the great movements of earthquakes escaped attention until recent years. The minute vibrations are followed by J. J. Shaw in Nature as an unending train of waves, waxing and waning in amplitude, that are incessantly coursing along the earth's crust and reach to unknown depths. The wave period ranges between 4 and 8 seconds; the amplitude is between one 50,000th and one 2,000th of an inch, but with a wave length of 8 to 16 miles. The speed of the waves is believed to be about two miles per second. Such local causes as air tremors and the swaying of buildings and trees were formerly suggested, but it is now known that they are wide-spreading earth movements. Earthquakes are easily followed on the recording apparatus by the primary and secondary phases and the long waves rising to a maximum. The minor movements—microseisms—are not easily separated from one another, and there has been no means of studying their propagation. But recently certain tremors have been traced on recording instruments 60 feet apart. Continuing the investigation, the range has been extended to two miles, and it has been made practicable to pick out individual tremors on the two sets of records. One result is the showing that the travel of the microseisms is independent of wind and weather, though the source and cause of the movements are still a mystery.

CULTIVATE HABIT OF THRIFT

Practice Means That One Will Be Ready to Seize Opportunity When it Comes.

Practice thrift habitually. Make it as much a part of your routine as eating and sleeping. Get yourself systematized. Work on a definite schedule. Save regular amounts. Plan your work and your actions so that you will have no idle time, no lost motion, no wasted energy.

These are among the secrets of success, happiness and progress.

The most important message that can be conveyed to the people of this nation today is: "Get the thrift habit." Practice thrift not for a brief interval or intermittently, but habitually.

This brief sentence furnishes one of the best reasons for practicing thrift that ever has been given. It presents a phase of the question to which not enough attention is paid. Ordinarily thrift is looked upon as a means of safeguarding one against possible emergencies or of building up an accumulation of money for some definite purpose. But there are many unexpected turns in the pathway of life.—Thrift Magazine.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

THE DEERSLAYER

By J. FENIMORE COOPER

Condensation by Alfred S. Clark

To James Fenimore Cooper's boyhood may be traced his genius for picturing primitive forests and adventures alive with April. Son of a hardy and vigorous pioneer, he lived by a rushing stream at the very edge of a deep, mysterious wilderness, in which lurked wild men and wild beasts. About the great roaring fire in his father's hospitable hall sat men of formidable will and daring. They had grappled with nature and with men in their most primitive ferocity. They told true but lurid tales of doings that profoundly stirred the child's imagination. These men risked death and torture to carry on the life of their new country; so the boy James was saturated with that patriotism which vividly flashed through his life and characterized so clearly his writings.

Small wonder is it that this child later set himself the task of describing the frontier scenes of his native land, and achieved the famous "Leatherstocking Tales" which have kindled the hearts of so many adventure-loving boys. Of these "The Pathfinder" and "Deerslayer" seemed to Cooper himself his best novels. They were both vividly recalled when they first appeared, because their author had created so much personal hostility.

When the young hunters, Deerslayer and Hurry Harry, reached the Lake Glimmerglass, the Hurons were on the warpath. Floating Tom Hutter, the only settler on the lake, knew the redmen's ways and had built his house on piles, a quarter of a mile from shore. With him lived his daughters, Judith, handsome and flirtatious, and Hetty, a young woman with the mind of a child. Hurry Harry, a handsome giant of the woods, had been one of Judith's many wooers.

Floating Tom had another home, the Ark, a crude houseboat propelled by sweeps and a sail. Here the hunters found him. As the Ark passed an overhanging sapling, warriors, bearded by war paint, leaped for the roof. They fell into the lake, but yells and pattering bullets from shore told that they were out in force.

Hutter was a hardy fighter, Hurry and Natty Bumppo had won the name of Deerslayer because of his unerring aim with the rifle. They might have withstood a siege of weeks. But Hutter and Hurry, tempted by the bounty for scalps, determined to raid the Indian encampment, where they expected to find only squaws and children. Deerslayer refused to join this cowardly warfare. But warriors were in the tents and the raiders were captured. Deerslayer, now the sole leader of the girls in Hutter's lake-girdled house, could not attempt their rescue.

His simple honesty and modesty made a profound impression upon Judith, who had hitherto listened to him willingly to the honeyed words of English officers. Her arts were forgotten in the presence of this native woodsman who was blind to feminine wiles.

Although the Indians had no canoes, Deerslayer knew that they could quickly make rafts, and he was glad enough that he had agreed to meet at the lake that night his dearest friend, the young Delaware warrior, Big Serpent. At sunset he maneuvered the Ark near the rendezvous and Big Serpent leaped aboard. The bank resounded with exultant yells, and a score of savages splashed into the water. Deerslayer and Big Serpent bent to the sweeps and folled them. Big Serpent's hatred of the Hurons was white hot, for they were carrying into captivity his betrothed, the lissome Hist-oh-Hist.

It was simple-minded Hetty who first went to the rescue of Hutter and Hurry. She believed that reading her Bible to these savages would soften their hearts. She was allowed to converse freely with the captives, for the Indians had a superstitious belief that the gods spoke through those whose wits were weak. Her pleading words, however, fell upon deaf ears. Deerslayer, with keener knowledge of Indian character, ransomed Hutter and Hurry with some ivory chessmen that the redmen deemed idols.

While the released captives slept and the girls watched, Deerslayer and Big Serpent paddled away to rescue Hist-oh-Hist, who had sent word by Hetty that she would be on a conspicuous point of land when a bright star came out over the hilltop. The star came out, but Hist did not appear. The Delaware and his paleface comrade crept noiselessly to a ridge where they could overlook the encampment. Big Serpent chirruped like a squirrel and Hist, guarded by an old hag, was so suddenly silent that they knew she understood.

At last the two women passed them. Big Serpent dragged his beloved toward the canoe; Deerslayer clutched the old woman, but her screams alarmed the camp. He ran for the canoe, but as he pushed it off an Indian landed squarely upon his back. Deerslayer thought not of himself, but the canoe so powerful a shove that it glided a hundred feet away. He tumbled into the lake, arose with his assailant, and they floundered in breast-high water. He was quickly surrounded, so he surrendered quietly. Morning came and the Ark was swept toward the house. The keen eyes of Hist detected a moccasin floating against a pile and Big Serpent was sure the Hurons were within. Hurry and Hutter laughed at him and clambered inside through a trap-door. Hardly were they within, before there was a heavy fall. To the sharp ears of Big Serpent, the whole house seemed alive. Now and then an Indian yell sounded or a deep hollow below from Hurry.

Big Serpent dared not desert the three girls. Suddenly the door burst open and Hurry came raging forth upon the small platform. He stood panting, eyeing his enemies. Then he seized one brave by the waist and flung him far into the lake; two others quickly followed. Four were left. They were without arms and had little desire to close with this demon. He kicked one into the water, he doubled up another by a prodigious blow, the bigger of the two remaining closed with his white foe. They wrestled fiercely upon the narrow platform. Then Hurry raised the redman high above his head, hurled him down and fell heavily upon him. But at that moment of conquest his arms were bound from behind. The Indian whom he had flung into the lake had scrambled out in time to platoon him.

As the Ark drifted past, Hist cried out to Hurry to roll off. He obeyed and fell with a great splash into the water. Hist threw him a rope, which he clutched with hands and teeth, the bullets of the outwitted Indians fell short, and Big Serpent pulled the exhausted giant on board. The Hurons left the house, and when Judith reached it her father was dying. He had been scalped while still alive.

The two men were soon joined by Deerslayer, who had accepted a furlough, promising to return at noon the next day if Hist and Judith refused to become Huron squaws. To Hurry's disgust, Deerslayer announced that he intended to keep his pledge. It meant death by torture, and Hurry could not understand how honor could drive a man insane. The giant left the lake stealthily that night but promised to guide back a company of soldiers.

Judith, having dismissed Hurry forever, tried to tell Deerslayer that she loved him. But the hunter was so humble and Judith so beautiful that he could not understand. He knew, moreover, that Judith had not always resisted the caresses of an English officer.

The sun was directly overhead when Deerslayer strode back into the Huron encampment. He haughtily refused to save his life by wedding the widow of a warrior he had shot, whereupon her brother hurled a tomahawk at the captive. Deerslayer's hand shot up and caught the weapon as it flew. An instant later it drove back and struck his foe between the eyes.

It gave him his opportunity to escape. As the Indians ran to the dead man's side, he burst away with the speed of a deer. Behind him he heard the savage yells of his pursuers. Bullets whistled past, but he ran on untouched. At the edge of a gully, he leaped upon a fallen tree, shouted as if floating over a free trail ahead, and then crept beneath the tree. His foes jumped upon it as they bounded along, but one after one they raced into the gully. Deerslayer doubled back, reached the lake and threw himself into the canoe. The paddles were gone and he had to drift, lying flat in the bottom. Bullets cut the sides, making peep-holes. Just as he thought himself safely away, the fickle wind changed and he was driven back, again a prisoner.

The Hurons were now enraged. They bound him and the young warriors flung tomahawks at him, trying to see how close they could come. This was but preparatory to the tortures. Then Judith, desperate in her love, stalked out of the trees to save him. Her impassioned words had no effect and the fires were kindled at his feet. Hetty leaped forward and stamped on the flames. Then Big Serpent bounded forth, and with a rapid thrust cut Deerslayer loose. In his hands were two rifles, and for a moment the Hurons were dismayed. The warrior who had hoped to wed Hist hurled his knife at his rival, but Hist struck up his hand and he fell. Big Serpent's knife quivering in his breast, the redmen scattered for their guns, but now a tramping was heard. Redcoats appeared among the trees, led by Hurry. Deerslayer's rifle cracked and two Hurons fell. The rest, cut off from escape, were butchered or made prisoners.

Hetty was mortally wounded, but none of the others were hurt. Judith flung away her reserve as they were leaving this scene of bloodshed, and implored Deerslayer to marry her. But he remembered her past, and she beauty could not move him. She turned away and walked on with the soldiers. The captain had been her ardent wooer of the past, and rumors came later to America that on his great English estate lived a lady of rare beauty who did not bear his name. Whether or not it was Judith, Deerslayer never knew.

He trod another trail, with Big Serpent and Hist, back to the Delawares. The Hurons long knew his wrath, but fifteen years passed before he saw Glimmerglass again. His heart beat faster as he looked through the ruined house and Ark, upon that silent sheet of lovely water fringed by deep woods and green hills.

Private Park.

If the rear yard is properly planted with a border of flowering shrubs and perennial flowers, has a velvety green lawn and a few shade or fruit trees, it will give the family a quiet, peaceful little private park, in which all can enjoy the moonlight during the hot summer evenings without making a long, tiresome trip to the parks. This is the height of pleasure afforded by a well-planted home yard.

Peculiar Disease.

Arithmomania—the medical name for another disease—is full of interest. In this the patient has the irresistible impulse to count a certain number of times before doing anything. One case recorded is of a girl who had to tap on the edge of the bed nine times before getting into it; a hundred times before brushing her teeth; to knock three times on a window by the side of the door, and a similar number of times before going to sleep.

MRS. HAYDOCK SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Followed Advice of Her Druggist's Wife and Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 23 bottles, never missing a dose, and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved Mrs. Haydock from an operation we cannot claim that all operations may be avoided by it, but many women have escaped operations by the timely use of this old-fashioned root and herb medicine.

Kids Spurn Gifts of Pennies. Once upon a time children would be glad to get a penny or two a day from their parents. Today, as any mother will tell you, nothing less than a nickel measures up to their standards of daily needs. It is usually 6 cents.

"Aw wadaya want?" exclaimed little Jeddy the other day when his mother forgot herself and offered him 2 cents. "How da ya 'spect a feller to get anything for a couple cents? 50,000 Miles In Motor Launch

EVERYBODY dreams about slipping their anchor one of these days and going down to the sea in a snug little boat, outward bound for strange, far-away lands. To all who love the water this is an uncut page of romance, the thing they always hope to do and never quite accomplish. But a few days ago the ebb tide carried a 98-foot motor yacht through Ambrose channel on a trip around the world and marked the beginning of a dream to come true for at least one man. His craft is the first of its kind and size to undertake such a voyage which is expected to last a year and a half. It carried the "venturers' club," writes the New York Times.

The sailing of the Spee-Jacks, as this modern argosy is named, was the first step in realization of a castle built in the air two years ago by Albert Y. Gowen, Jr., of Cleveland, yachtsman and big business man, who has been visualizing soft southern skies and the "feel" of the swelling tide between decks in the workaday world. Mrs. Gowen joined in the dream, and now she is aboard the Spee-Jacks as the yacht travels southward, the only woman who ever started on a 50,000-mile trip in a craft not much larger than many motorboats.

But the Spee-Jacks is a miniature ocean liner, said to be the most completely equipped vessel of its sort which has come off the ways. After stopping at Norfolk and Kingston, Jamaica, the Spee-Jacks will cut through the Panama canal and start across the Pacific for the Marquesas Islands, a distance of 3,729 miles, which alone represents a record attempt for a boat of this kind. From there the route lies via Tahiti, Society Islands, thence to Samoa, Fiji, the New Hebrides and New Caledonia. Mr. Gowen plans to cruise through the South Sea Islands, many of which are practically unknown and isolated from anything called by the name of civilization.

The party plans to spend Christmas in Sydney, Australia, then on to Java, Borneo and Manila. From there they will go to China, Siam, India, Arabia, and spend their second Christmas in Cairo. Once more under way, the Spee-Jacks will visit Turkey, Greece, France and Spain, before turning her nose southward to West Africa. Then the long trip across the Atlantic, reaching home again about April, 1923.

Two years ago Mr. Gowen decided that he needed a vacation. He had built four yachts, and set about planning a fifth which was to be unlike anything ever constructed, for a cruise which nobody ever had attempted. He put in a year on the plans before commissioning a Harlem river yard to lay the Spee-Jacks' keel. Another year was spent in the work, which Mr. Gowen personally superintended for the most part. His craft cost close to a quarter of a million dollars, and to a boatman she is the prettiest thing that ever tripped the waves.

The Spee-Jacks is 98 feet long, 100 tons, 17 feet wide and draws six feet. Everything below the water line is made of bronze, and all of the upper works are teakwood, especially imported from India, at a cost of about five times that of mahogany. Even the decks are teakwood. Inside, the Spee-Jacks is finished in natural waxed mahogany, and for completeness and elegance she is without rival. Her driving power comes from two 250-horsepower engines, operated either by gasoline or kerosene, capable of 13 knots an hour, with a cruising radius of 3,000 miles.

The Spee-Jacks carries 3,500 gallons of gasoline and 1,000 gallons of water. As this last would be only three weeks' supply for the party aboard, condensers were installed to obtain fresh water from salt. These will produce six gallons an hour. A refrigerating machine will turn the distilled water into ice as needed.

The Spee-Jacks carries 50,000 feet of moving picture film, and 100,000 feet additional will be picked up en route. There are two cameras aboard and an expert photographer, who will take a complete film history of the whole trip.

The Spee-Jacks' radio has a transmission range of 1,000 miles, and will receive messages from any distance. She carries a wireless telephone outfit with a radius of 600 miles. The Spee-Jacks has four of the latest type machine guns, firing up to 1,000 shots a minute, and an arsenal of small arms. Mr. Gowen plans to go inland in the Straits Settlement, Siam, southern China and West Africa after game.

Aside from being a jaunt around the world, the voyage of the Spee-Jacks has a historical and scientific phase. Mr. Gowen has collected no less than 840 charts for his trip, and he expects to bring back some notable improvements in maps, particularly those of the South Sea Islands, which still remain unexplored to a great degree. As a representative of the National Geographic society and the Field museum, Chicago, he will endeavor to obtain new information on wild life as he finds it.

Bernard F. Rogers, Jr., of Chicago, Yale, 1918, an expert photographer and amateur taxidermist, is the right-hand man of Mr. Gowen on the trip. The Spee-Jacks will be manned for the most part by friends of the host, including Frank Trevor Hogg, Princeton, 1917, former football captain and the yacht's master. Jack Lewis of Cleveland, the chief engineer, is an expert yachtsman. David Williamson, New York broker, has shipped as a sailor, and

James Sterling, the assistant engineer, formerly was a first grade lieutenant in the navy. Ira J. Ingraham, the camera man, a secretary, and two cooks make up the remainder of the personnel.

In anticipation of the hot weather ahead the Spee-Jacks has a ventilation system which makes it possible to obtain fresh air in any part of the vessel every six minutes. There is a hot water heating system should the weather turn cold. But that is improbable, because the route of the vessel will keep it within 20 degrees of the equator at all times. Every part of the yacht can be reached by telephone. It is electrically lighted and furnished in keeping with its general tone.

The Spee-Jacks owner laid out his route with the idea of getting away from all the usual yachting cruises and breathing a breath of real adventure. That he has succeeded probably will be well established before his voyage grows old. He plans to make many landings in out-of-the-way places and there is likely to be some lively times for all. The Spee-Jacks has two motor dories and a dinghy for landing, and the machine guns will not be forgotten among the strange lands which the party is to visit.

The work of preparing for the voyage covered several months. The task of obtaining passports for all of the ship's company in the many lands they will visit was several weeks' work. The boat's odd name was bestowed on the owner at Harvard, from which he was graduated in 1907.

Mrs. Gowen comes from Texas and admitted that this was her first sea trip, a little matter of 50,000 miles on a 98-foot boat. Asked how she expected to keep busy on her long voyage, Mrs. Gowen said that she planned to do a lot of reading. She had been studying about the countries ahead of her, and helped to collect the ship's library, consisting mostly of travel books.

"And Mr. Gowen wants me to write the whole story," she added.

The Wedding Present

By M. MACWILLIAMS.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Josefa sang mockingly, keeping time with head and foot: "Will the flame that you're rich in Build a fire in the kitchen, Or the little god of love turn the spit, apt, apt?"

Ending with a dance merry enough to cure a hypochondriac. But it did nothing of the sort to her sole spectator. Bess Leech, her sometime chum, was deep in very angry blues. "I think you might have a little pity for my head," she scolded. "It's splitting—I came here in hope of quiet—and consolation—and you're so cheerful it's wildly disgusting."

"Why not be cheerful? Praise be, I'm not contemplating matrimony on the grace of God,—and expectations." Josefa retorted. Bess sat up very straight from the couch where she had thrown herself, to say acridly: "Sour grapes, my dear! You know you were quite mad about Wilnot—and he has the same as confessed to me, you attracted him—until I came."

"Not really," Josefa drawled, going off into a gale of laughing that made Bess sob angrily. "I laugh to think of you as the Angel of Deliverance, Elizabeth-Betsy." Josefa explained when she could speak: "With your red hair, and the way you dance! When you give your whole mind, and body to it, nobody's Salome—not the original blown-in-the-bottle article—has anything on you."

"You! You're—disgusting," Bess panted. "I won't stay here to be mocked. I—I thought you were my friend, not a jealous cat." Bess returned, however, without making a motion of departure. Josefa smiled behind her hand.

"Better have lunch before you go," she said. "Swear I won't poison you, no matter if I am jealous, and a cat. Fact is Betsy Lizabeth, I believe you're suffering the pangs of hunger even more than love. Tell me, what did you have for breakfast?"

"Quite all I wanted, thank you," Bess answered with her gravest dignity, speaking truth literal, and fiction actual. She had had all she wanted of rather stale crackers and water from the tap, but now there was a void sensation conducive to weak knees and trembling hands. Josefa knew it, but was too kind, in spite of her rallery, to stress the point. "Me myself has a bear appetite," she said over her shoulder. "Keep house please till I come again; I shan't be long."

She came back quickly to find that Bess had sobbed herself to sleep. Josefa looked at her with kind eyes, if merry ones, murmuring. "If heaven doesn't help these babies in the woods I'm afraid they're in a bad way." But nothing of that was in her voice or manner when she roused Bess to sit at a table well and bountifully spread, and to mind her own business. Wilnot just entering the door, and saying: "You here? Joe fooled me. I thought she was cooking in my honor."

"I'm a designing person you know," Josefa retorted. "Always something up my sleeve. This time it's something for the pair of you—a chance to honeymoon in a heavenly cottage for six weeks or so, rent free, and do work enough meanwhile to take you half through the winter."

Bess bridled at that, but Wilnot, otherwise Billy Johnson, said half-shamefully: "Mighty good of you. Tell us some more."

After the more had been told, specifically the illustrating of a book that might lead to something permanent, he dropped shamed eyes, saying huskily: "Joe—I—we really don't deserve this of you."

By her showing she had "happened" to hear of the chance. Wilnot thought the happening had been really an offer to herself, which she had diplomatically diverted his way, knowing his need. He wanted to thank her; somehow the words stuck, choked back by memory of vainglorious boasts to his new love. Josefa might have had him for the taking. With Bess it was indeed a matter of "catching on the rebound." And he had the grace to be heartily ashamed by this brand of revenge. Well, he would work hard, so as to do Joe credit with the publisher, meantime keeping a wary eye for anything that might lessen in any way his obligation. He had been rather appalled by the prospect of matrimony without money—scarcely the price of a wedding ring. But how gainsay a sweetheart extremely temperamental! Sure, in her lies salvation for her lover and his money. Bess was almost a genius, but lacking in practicality. She could never stand alone, for all her looks, her charm. Wilnot had not understood her, but had shivered at thought of taking the plunge.

Bess ate heartily of Josefa's providings. Certainly she had an appetite for any fate. But, hunger once appeased, she began to ruminate—to mill over things in what she was pleased to call her mind, with results rather startling. Josefa was plotting to separate her from Wilnot. She must be made to understand that Bess would never permit him to be patronized by her. What if she was good friends with John Brennan, head of the big publishing firm whose word made or marred coming illustrators? If Josefa had meant fairly she would never thus have taken things in her own hands. Rather she would have suggested to Brennan sending for Billy Johnson and setting things man to man. No, Josefa was plotting to show Billy what she could do for him—detach him from Bess and by and by appropriate him.

Hence, in her haughtiest drawl, she said, rising from the table: "I think we'll be going, Wilnot—to the club, you know. Izzy Bifski may be there—if we go early. You can tell him your ideas for costumes; you know, he puts on things that are hummers. And once you get him nailed you're made for life."

"But nailing him!" Wilnot gasped. "Bess, of course you're joking, but I'd rather you stopped it—here at least." "I'm not joking. I intend you shall try for a chance at designing for him. Josefa, I dare say, wants you to waste yourself on black and white things—but I say no. Anybody can do them—she herself, after a fashion. But you—I'm marrying you to make a great man out of you, the greatest artist of your time. So come along," Bess said curtly.

"Are you quite mad?" Wilnot demanded, catching her by both shoulders. Josefa, safely out of Bess's sight, said nuttily: "Don't! Let her have it out." Bess was shaken now with passion. She screamed: "Let me go! And come along with me—unless you—you want me to hate you forever and ever."

As Wilnot loosed her Josefa stepped in front of them, saying with a smile: "Bess won't you listen to just one thing? I know what's in your mind; but you're all up a tree, honey. I schemed a bit to get the job and the cottage for you two—chose it as my wedding present."

"I won't have it!" Bess whimpered angrily, her fury but half spent. "You can't help yourself, old girl. Josefa went on evenly. "For, you see, it is a present to myself."

"I—I don't understand," Bess sobbed. You claim to be my friend, yet tell me to my face you want Wilnot— "Not a bit," Josefa interrupted. "Listen! Hard! I'm going to marry John Brennan next week; no fuss of any sort, but he insisted on making me a present in honor of the event, so I hoped to give myself—your happiness. Will you take it?" "On my knees!" Bess sobbed, then fainted in Wilnot's arms.

Realism and Romance.

Man likes to read about creatures in whose nature he envisages his own; and he likes, in fancy, at least, to go exploring strange coasts. Realism ministers to the one desire, and romance to the other; and both are right. For that matter, when either realism or romance reaches its highest development, it does so by borrowing from the supposedly opposite school. The great romantic novels are those peopled by real characters; the great works of realism have found and evoked the romance of the humble. Shakespeare was an incurable romanticist, yet he has left us the greatest portrait gallery of "real" people ever filled by a single author.—Chicago Journal.

Need for Hurry.

The two great chess players had sat facing each other for a long, long time. Neither had spoken or shown any inclination to move. At last one raised his head and half-opened his dreamy eyes.

"What time is it?" he asked. The other's hand went to his pocket. He withdrew his cigarette case.

"Thursday," he answered. His opponent yawned. "I hope we shall be able to finish this game," he drawled, "but we shall have to hurry up. I've promised to go away next Tuesday week."

Australian Gold.

Figures quoted by the Australian Gold Exporters' association show that in 1920 gold to the value of $4,813,431 was exported, and for the first four months of 1921, $882,330, making a total of $5,695,761 within the past 16 months. The Commonwealth government has adhered to its policy of keeping the gold reserves untouched and only permitting the export of the current production of gold and bullion.

Why Marines Are Scarce.

Recruiting for the United States marine corps is again. The enlistments must be for three or four years and the applicants must be physically perfect and of good moral character. A man must be at least 65 inches in height, and weigh not less than 150 pounds stripped, and meet all the requirements of a perfect physical standard.

WIFE OF AMERICUS VESPUCCI

All Florence Mourned When the Beautiful Simonetta Died, the Victim of Plague.

The story of Simonetta, wife of Americus Vespucci, the man for whom this country is named, stands out a clear, delicate cameo among the host of beautiful stories of her day. She was beloved of Giuliano de Medici, brother of Lorenzo the Magnificent, and was the inspiration of Sandro Botticelli, one of the greatest painters of all times.

A girl in her teens when she came from Genoa to the court of Lorenzo in Florence, Vespucci's bride, Simonetta was a fragile, exquisite creature, tall and slender, with skin of ivory and a wealth of wondrous hair. It is recorded. Simple and girlish, she was despised by the other women of the court, who made no secret of their jealousy. Giuliano, prince of the reigning house, loved her in vain.

One day as she wandered stily about the garden she was seen by Master Sandro. Her radiant beauty overwhelmed him and she became his inspiration. She consented to act as the model for his paintings, and the central figure of "The Spring," probably the best-known Botticelli today, is Simonetta. She was the original of all his succeeding madonnas and, although he loved her with a deep fervor, he never attempted to win her for himself.

While still in her early twenties, Simonetta died, the victim of a plague. As beautiful in death as she had been in life, Simonetta was drawn in state through the city while all Florence mourned.

A thrilling beautiful account of the passing of Simonetta is given in Maurice Hewlett's "Quattro Centesima."

Pump Fish Into Vessels.

A contrivance to pump fish from a purse net into the hold of a fishing vessel has been invented. The fish are pumped through a large rubber tube to the deck of the vessel and discharged upon an inclined plane of wire mesh from which they slide into the hold, the water running through the mesh and into the sea.

African Game Preserves

The growing scarcity of specimens in every department of zoology has led to the setting apart of large game preserves in the wilds of Africa and putting them in the charge of experts. There seems to be no animal that cannot be partly tamed if a feeding ground and water in plenty are given it. Attendants venture into the inclosures and stroll among the animals to accustom them to the sight of human beings. Gradually the beasts are herded into smaller paddocks, where any peculiarities that they may have are observed. In that way healthy specimens for the zoological gardens are assured.

Trees Strong.

Trees and plants display a wonderful strength at times. Some of them will lift a heavy stone which blocks their way or even split a rock, but there is one thing which they can not withstand and that is the stranglehold of another plant which encircles them. A honeysuckle will soon kill a tree which it takes hold of and which it kills the trees they save themselves by reaching neighboring trees.

Birds That Dive.

Aquatic birds that are ordinarily able to float high on the water can also sink at will by expelling the air that is inclosed within the film of feathers surrounding their bodies, thus making them heavier than water, says the Making Over Paper.

The chemical processes for the reclamation of printed book paper have been in use for some time, their efficiency is reduced by the fact that the mechanical pulping forces the ink permanently into the fibers, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A mixture of ten pounds of borax, ten pounds of soap, two gallons of kerosene and two gallons of pine oil is used for soaking 2,000 pounds of stock, with enough water to make a three to six percent pulp. The beater is used to pull the stock apart gently, with a minimum breakage of the fibers and the process is continued for an hour or less, with the pulp heated to from 165 to 190 degrees Fahrenheit, by live steam. The separated ink and the chemicals are then washed away by the usual method, and the reclaimed pulp is ready to be bleached.

FINDS NEW YORK IS MANLESS ARE MANY KINDS OF SALMON

Bobbed-Haired Blonde Girl Gets Tired and Decides to Go Back to Dixie.

"Yes," said the serious bobbed-haired blonde, "I've at last made the decision, so with trunk packed and some regrets I'm going back to Dixie. When I came up to New York I came straight from college, full of pep, enthusiasm, modern in every way, I thought, and confident that a great place was waiting for me—maybe star for Belasco. I'd always been told I was a born actress."

"So I arrived in the big town, and you know my rugged road, trying to do something to be independent, and loving it all—hall bedrooms, uninteresting work and what not. But I have come to my senses. I know I shall miss New York, its theaters, bright lights and Fifth avenue. But I see the little southern country town, with its friendly gossip, its 'socials' and sewing parties, its simplicity, and I find I love it best."

"What, how did you guess? Well, I have known him for ages, and always declared I wouldn't, but three years of New York and never meeting the men I wanted to know, for New York is a manless place for most girls, made me ready to go back. Yes, late fall perhaps, and you must come down. I'll see that you meet the catch of the town."—New York Sun.

Waiting to Find It.

"Haven't you had that new cook a week?" "We have." "Such a prolonged stay would indicate that she likes our little suburb." "No, she hates our little suburb. But the good old railroad company has lost her trunk."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bureau of Fisheries, in Report on Pacific Fisheries, Lists Large Number of Varieties.

Salmon is salmon to most persons, but there are many kinds of salmon to those who know a "hawk from a handsaw" and a salmon from a salmon. The bureau of fisheries, in a report on Pacific salmon fisheries, lists the following Pacific species of the renowned fish. Chinook, quinnat or king salmon; humpback or pink salmon; dog or chum salmon; sockeye blue-back or red salmon; silver or coho salmon, and steel-head trout. All these salmon, with the exception of the steel-head, are included in the genus "Oncorhynchus," and that tough-looking word is made up of the Greek word "onkes," meaning a barb or a hook, and another Greek word "rhynchus," meaning a snout, so that genus of fish is distinguished by a "hook snout." The steel-head trout, classed as a salmon, belongs to a closely related genus called "salmo," which is a word probably derived from the Celtic and the significance of which is disputed.

Tree's Winter Plans.

The catalpa tree has a way all its own in getting ready for winter, says the American Forestry Magazine. It places three leaves in a whorl and then at a little distance above there is another whorl so placed that the leaves will cover the spaces between the leaves below. In winter we cannot see these leaves but the leaf scars show where they were and the buds just above add certainty to their location. If we find a tree with the buds arranged in this way on the vigorous shoots we may be assured it is one of the two species of catalpa.

"Have you a careful driver?" "Very. None of the accidents he has been in have been his fault."

OBITUARY
Albert S. Pharo

Albert Smith Pharo was born at West Creek, December 4, 1864, and lived there until he was about 28 years old, at which time his parents moved to a house called the Maria Lippincott property about halfway between Staffordville and Mayetta, which house now stands a few doors to the rear of the Presbyterian Church at Tuckerton and is owned by Charles Berry. From there his parents moved to Staffordville in the Clark Cranmer house. Here the boy lived until the death of his mother, 1873. Before this time as well as after he did a man's work, helping to lay the first rails on the Tuckerton Railroad. During his young manhood, he was a sailor for a few years. He also was quite musically inclined, and with several others, including Jake Trues, conducted a series of musical minstrels. He began the trade of carpenter when he was 25 years old, following the trade all his life.

He was named for his mother's brother, Albert S. Cranmer, who died at his home in Manahawkin, 1895.

Mr. Pharo had seven brothers and sisters, all younger, two died in infancy, the rest in order of age are Adolphus, Pharo, Staffordville; William E. Pharo, who died at his house boat at Bonnet, two years ago; Mrs. Mary E. Hinkle, who died at her home in Mt. Holly in 1885; Mrs. Laura May Dobbins of Moorestown and Miss Julia H. Pharo of Vineland.

Mr. Pharo married Susan A. Cranmer early in 1892. She was the daughter of Job E. and Matilda Cranmer of Mayetta, and who mourns the loss of a kind husband. Four children were born to them, three of whom are now living, Mrs. Dorothy Solly, wife of Alfred Solly, (they returned about a month ago from Tulsa Oklahoma, before the father was stricken); Raymond Pharo, of Lakewood and Addison Pharo, of the Lawrenceville school.

The first two or three years of their married life, Mr. and Mrs. Pharo lived at Moorestown but soon built a home on Ocean avenue, Lakewood, where they lived happily for about 25 years, Mr. Pharo passing away October 19, 1921. He was a member of the M. E. Church of Lakewood. His sickness was of short duration. Some time late in the summer he hurt his head, accidentally, which gave him much trouble. Later a stroke deprived him of speech, which never returned except for a few hours the day before he died. Funeral services were held at the home of his brother, Adolphus Pharo, in Staffordville, in charge of undertaker James Westhall of Lakewood. Interment at Cedar Run.

LET'S GO!

Big towns are not made by men afraid,

Lest somebody else gets ahead;

When every one works and nobody shirks,

You can raise a town from the dead.

And if, while you make your personal stake,

Your neighbor can make one, too;

Your town will be what you want it to be,

It isn't the town, it's you.

New Gretna Woman Met Tragic Death When Home Burned

Was Alone in Home and Lost Life in Early Morning Blaze. Origin of Fire Unknown.

The residents of New Gretna were horrified on Wednesday morning at three o'clock when a fire alarm was given and it was found that the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Leeds was in flames. It was at a time when everyone was sleeping and help arrived too late.

Mrs. Leeds was alone in the house and was burned to death.

The doors were found open and it is believed that she made her escape from the burning building but had returned for something and was overtaken by the flames. The neighbors were awakened by barking dogs about 2.30 o'clock and when the fire was discovered, it appeared that it had started from the kitchen, but its real origin cannot be determined, as almost the entire building was in flames when help arrived, making it impossible to get near the house.

The body of Mrs. Leeds was found at the foot of the stairs presumably where she had fallen or was caught in attempting to escape.

Her only son, Mark Leeds, who resides at Somers Point, was notified and came at once.

Mr. Leeds, the husband and father, was in the bay at the time. They have the sympathy of all.

Will Work For Big Revival On This District

The Methodist Episcopal church in the New Brunswick district, which extends from New Brunswick, on the north to Beach Haven on the south, is working out plans to extend the influence of the church and to create a revival of interest in religious matters throughout the whole district. The plan has been outlined by the Rev. James D. Bills, of Ocean Grove, superintendent of the district and consists in forming every community into a group, placing the small churches around each larger town into the group, with the leader in most groups being the pastor of the larger church. Meetings have been held in each of these groups to bring the pastors and leading laymen together, and this will be followed with revival meetings in outlying districts where they are remote from churches, with cottage prayer meetings and with revival meetings in the churches also.

Tuckerton is the center of the district composing the Barnegat, Beach Haven, Manahawkin, West Creek, New Gretna and Lower Bank churches.

Rev. Daniel Johnson will be the leader of this group and although he has been in the Methodist hospital for several weeks, the work has already started in Tuckerton. The Men's Praying Band has been conducting meetings in the school house in West Tuckerton and twenty conversions has been the result.

Mr. Johnson is recovering from an operation and his return will add impetus to the work which will be extended to all the towns in the group.

Upland Gunning Season Opens November 10th

Upland gunning season will begin on November 10, the Thursday after election day. On that day it will be lawful to shoot rabbits, quail, squirrels and similar upland game. There numbers of quail and rabbits, but I've noticed for years now that sportsmen are reports coming in daily of large always see plenty of game before the season opens, and wonder where it all went to after their first trip into the woods and fields with dog and gun. So perhaps it will be just as plentiful at least as on an average year, with perhaps a few more quail than an average year shows, as the dry summer was good for young quail, the gunners say.

Jan Christian Smuts: "New Man" Out of Africa

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

SOMETHING new is always coming out of Africa.—Old Latin proverb. Various writers in the public press seem to think that this proverb is as true now as it was 2,000 years ago and that the "new man" of these latter days is a "new man" in international statesmanship—Jan Christian Smuts, minister of defense of the Union of South Africa. Of course, the phrase "new man" has a special meaning as they apply it to "Silm Jannle" Smuts, for he has been a growing world-figure for several years. By "new man" they mean "new leader." For Oom Paul Krueger's fighting general of twenty years ago is being discussed pretty much all over the world as a possible leader of that new British empire which Smuts himself thus outlines:

"The old prewar British empire is gone. In the sense of colonies or subordinate nations clustering around one master nation. The British empire is developing into a real league of nations, a group of partner peoples."

Smuts is looked upon by many, says Sir Phillip Gibbs, the noted British correspondent, in the Springfield Republican, as "the new leader England has been waiting for" and the proper successor to Lloyd George. Says Sir Phillip:

"Why not make Smuts our next prime minister? A Boer, educated at Cambridge and against us in South Africa, is hardly adapted to be prime minister of England, but stranger things have happened in England." Sir Phillip calls Smuts "a man who never looks back for regret or vengeance, but always forward with free and courageous vision." and concludes with this statement: "There are men in England today in high places as well as low who say he is the man we are looking for."

The Evening World of New York argues at length that the British empire must be translated into an association of nations and declares Smuts to be the logical head of the new and greater empire. The Christian Science Monitor of Boston says he is "the only way which has ever inspired the imagination of the world where nations were engaged in a struggle that involved the destinies of the world."

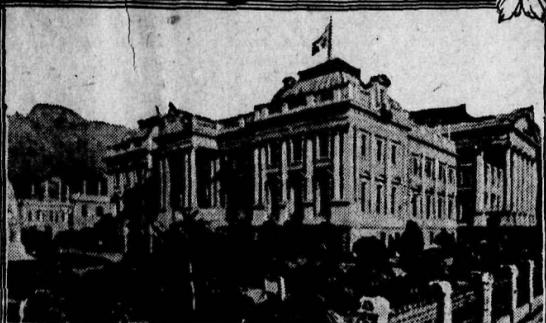

Smuts has been throwing bouquets to this and that boy of the field. The consensus of opinion seems to be that he must be given a place among the world's greatest living statesmen and a front rank among the leaders of the British empire.

Most people know vaguely that this same British empire is so vast that the sun never sets on its flag. In fact, it is so vast that to catalogue its possessions is difficult. There is a hint of its extent in the title of the British sovereign: "George V of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India." These "Dominions Beyond the Seas" extend to every continent and consist of self-governing dominions, crown colonies and protectorates and other dependencies.

As everyone knows, the United Kingdom consists of England and Wales, Scotland, Ireland and the channel islands. In Europe there are Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, etc. India, Burma, Ceylon and a score of other possessions lie in Asia. In Africa its flag waves over more than 2,000,000 square miles, including Egypt and the South African Union. In Australasia are Australia, Tasmania, Papua, New Zealand and Pacific Islands. On the Western Hemisphere its vast holdings include Canada, New Foundland and Labrador, British Guiana and various West Indian Islands. Altogether the British empire contains about 12,000,000 square miles and 450,000,000 people.

So the British empire is strongly suggestive of a league of nations. Moreover, the World War produced a noteworthy effect. There were those who predicted that the British empire would go to pieces under the strain of that titanic conflict. On the contrary, England's needs brought out wonderful proof of loyalty from her colonies. The ties were made stronger. Yet in the end the net result was that the British empire came out of the World War rather, as Smuts puts it, "a group of partner peoples" than "subordinate nations clustering around one master nation."

Whatever may be the future of Smuts, his past is interesting. He was born a little more than fifty years ago in the Transvaal, on a farm in the western province in the Karroo country. His Boer father and grandfather were farmers. He got his early education in the Transvaal and then

PARLIAMENT HOUSE AT CAPE TOWN

CAPE TOWN

For death itself would be sweet compared with the step which we must now take. But let us bow before the will of God.

"The future is dark, indeed, but we will not give up courage nor hope and trust in God. No one shall convince me that this unparalleled sacrifice which the African nation has laid upon the altar of freedom will be in vain. It has been a war for freedom—and not only for the freedom of the Boers, but for the freedom of all the nations of South Africa. Its results we leave in God's hands. Perhaps He will lead our nation through defeat and abasement, yes, and even through the shadow of death, to the glory of a new dawn, to the light of a brighter day."

Smuts called. And his "brighter day" came quickly. He had removed Cecil Rhodes, for quarter of a century the dominating personality on the Indian continent in South African politics, the man "morally responsible" in the famous "Jameson raid," the disastrous expedition which left by will practically his whole fortune of $300,000,000 to the public service. Within a few years after the war, and the leadership of Smuts, the Boer Republics were reconstituted as a Union of South Africa.

Smuts went to Cambridge for a university law. Back again in South Africa he became a lawyer and politician. Then he became secretary of state. Probably his London had more than a little to do with it.

Smuts was a hard-tough man and a parliamentarian. Both of these are official titles. He was engaged on the task of holding together the confederated colonies when the world called him again into the field. This time he went in as the head of an army and took German East Africa from the Germans.

The necessities of the British empire then called Smuts to England for counsel. The war was over, Smuts took a major place at the peace conference through sheer moral force and intellect. He had much to do with forming the League of Nations. He helped construct the treaty and signed it. But he filed a memorandum of protest and explanations as to terms forced into it against his will. That protest, his admirers say, marks him as a prophet as well as statesman.

Smuts has been called an "able compromiser," an "opportunist in politics" and "all things to all men." And his nickname in his own country among the old-time trekkers is "Silm Jannle," "Silm" meaning tricky, slick, evasive.

The career of Smuts, however, seems to support the view of his admirers that in matters of principle he has always stood steadfast as bed-rock. His admirers put it this way: "He has a way of overlooking unessential details which smaller men stumble over." They assert that he is an all-around man of firm will, determined character, great experience and hard common sense. They also speak with admiration for his tact. It is this tact that earned for him the "Silm" of the old-time Boers. He has an easy tact which makes for amiability and smooths over disagreeable situations. Also, he is just about the best whist player in South Africa and the old Boers thought he was very wicked because he played cards!

In the old Boer household, such as Smuts came from, says Mr. Hill, the coffee-pot is always boiling. With a cup of coffee and a piece of biltong (dried meat) the Boer can fight or trek all day long. Smuts' only bad habit, if it can be called a bad habit, is addiction to coffee. He neither drinks liquor of any kind nor smokes, and he eats sparingly.

He is essentially an out-of-doors man and his body is wiry and rangy. He has the stride of a man familiar with long marches and the natural swing of one who is at home in the saddle. He speaks with vigor and sometimes with emotion. The Boer is not a demonstrative or emotional person, and Smuts has much of the racial reserve. At times he is an inspired orator, and something of his place in the world is due to his eloquent tongue. He seems to lack the tricks of the spell-binder's trade. He is forceful, convincing and persuasive.

There is a strong religious trend in the character of General Smuts. He comes of a strain of men who went into battle with supplications to God upon their lips, a stock that held in ridicule and contempt the godless ways of other people.

Wealthy Indian to Have Fling

Jackson Barnett Will Sample City's Luxury With His Bundle of Oil Money.

IS RATED AT FIVE MILLION

Lived Simple Life While Millions Were Accumulating—Invested Many Thousands in Liberty Bonds During the War.

Muskogee.—Jackson Barnett, Oklahoma's richest Indian, has gone to Kansas City to have a fling at metropolitan luxury. If he finds that he can stand it, Barnett will make it permanent—with the consent of the United States government, of which he is a ward.

Barnett until recently lived in a two room block house at Henryetta, thirty miles from Muskogee, wore cheap clothes, smoked cheap tobacco and didn't even own a phonograph—which is an odd way to live for one rated as worth $5,000,000. While at Henryetta Barnett was well satisfied in his two rooms, and let his guardian, attorneys and agents of the Indian agency in Muskogee and Washington worry about the millions flowing from oil wells on his property.

His wants were few and the money went into the banks of Oklahoma on deposits made by the Indian agency to his credit.

Bought Liberty Bonds. When the war was on thousands of dollars of his money went into Liberty bonds and War Savings stamps. Contributions were made to institutions of learning, and Jackson lived the simple life, never going more than a few miles from his cabin.

Then he met Mrs. Anna Laura Lowe and they married. "Kidnaping," is what Barnett's agents called it. Barnett was held under restraint until Victor M. Locke, Jr., became superintendent of the Indian agency in Muskogee. Locke decided: "A wealthy Indian has as much right to spend his money as a wealthy white man." Barnett and his wife and her daughter sought to make a dent in the $5,000,000 pile. Mrs. Barnett said her husband needed a change, and the government consented to a vacation in Canada. After that vacation the Indian was unhappy for the first time in his life and refused to go back to the cabin and cheap clothes.

Let Indian Decide. "We are going to let the Indian himself decide where he wants to live," Superintendent Locke said. "If he wants to live in Muskogee, all right. If he chooses some other city we have nothing to say in the way of objecting, for he has the right to make his own decisions."

If a suitable residence can be found in Kansas City it will be purchased by the government for its wealthy ward. Otherwise, a house will be built.

"There's no truth in the rumour we are going to spend $200,000 on a residence for Jackson Barnett," said, "but we are going to see that he has a house in keeping with his wealth and one with which he is satisfied."

UNCOVERS CITY OF 2,500

Pennsylvania Scientist Reports Excavations at Beth-Shan, Palestine.

Philadelphia.—Remains of the ancient city of Beth-Shan in Northern Palestine, dating back as far as B. C., have been uncovered by Clarence S. Fisher's research, according to a letter received from the University museum here. Already several important discoveries have been made dating to the time when the Semites supposed to have entered Palestine about 2,500 B. C., and it is believed that remains of an even earlier city will be located.

University museum authorities believe Doctor Fisher's excavations promise to throw much light on local times and perhaps even on the life of a thousand years before Abraham.

New Species of Fish Revealed

Eruption of Mauna Loa in Hawaii Responsible for Remarkable Discovery.

SIX FROM DEPTHS OF SEA

Dr. David Starr Jordan Classifies Specimens Sent From Honolulu—Lava Stream Brings Strange Specimens to Surface.

Honolulu.—Varieties of fish hitherto unknown were discovered as a result of the eruption of the volcano of Mauna Loa two years ago. This fact has just been announced by Dr. David Starr Jordan, chancellor emeritus of Leland Stanford Junior university, California, a noted ichthyologist. The columns of lava buried deeper into the ocean than most are able to penetrate, and thousands of fish of strange and fantastic colors and color were killed and washed on the beach by the tidal wave caused by the lava flow. Among them were found six varieties hitherto unknown to science because their habitat presumably lower in the water science had been able to observe. Amateur ichthyologists in Hilo, Hawaii, selected species which were known to them and sent them to Dr. Jordan for examination. The result was that the six new species were classified.

Discovery Important. "I consider the discovery, from a scientific viewpoint, to be among the most remarkable and important records," Doctor Jordan said when made public the classifications while he was attending the session of the Pan-Pacific Educational conference.

Rhyacanthus Carlsmithi, named Carl A. Carlsmith of Hilo, who was many of the species to Doctor Jordan. It is a deep rose red in color.

Rhechias Armiger, a conger eel whose snout resembles blackberry thorns and is solid dull blue in color.

Nycticoaster Reinhardt, named the Hilo resident who discovered it. It is a small black lantern fish.

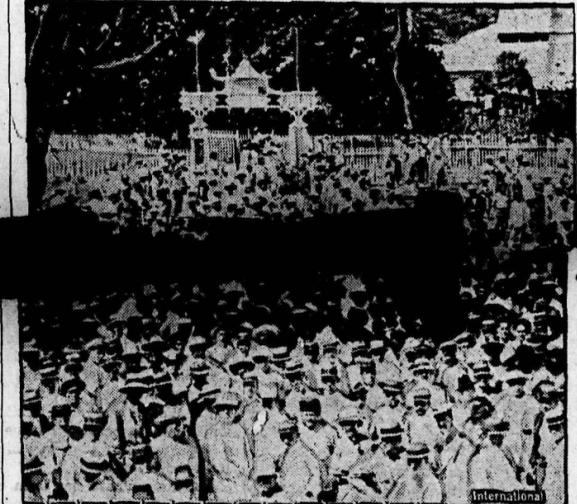

It is a small black lantern fish which gives off phosphorescence. It is black in color.

Pterostedion Eycogeros or alligator fish of a brilliant scarlet hue which is characterized by large bony plates of armor.

Are Deep Water Fish. Each of the six is a deep water fish. All live in water of more than 150 feet in depth, and some as deep as 600 feet. Nothing except such a cataclysm of nature as the Alikka flow could have brought them to the surface, Doctor Jordan said. Rhyacanthus Carlsmithi ranged at least 1,000 feet below the ocean's surface, he added.

Doctor Jordan has sent to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C., a paper detailing the results of the investigation and the new classification.

Tahitians Protest Against Taxes

Even way down in Tahiti, the French Islands in the South Pacific, the people have been wailing about high taxes, and recently there was an incipient revolt which was suppressed by soldiers. The citizens of Papeete, the capital, are here shown gathered in front of the governor's mansion to voice their protests.

D'ANNUNZIO IS WINE MAKER

Italian Soldier-Poet to Produce Vintage of Unequaled Quality, He Says.

Gardone, Italy.—Gabriele d'Annunzio, poet and hero of Fiume independence, has become a producer of wine in his hours of quiet on the lake here.

"I produce very little wine, but enough so that I can call myself one of the Italian family of wine producers," he told a friend recently.

"I expect to produce a wine that will be the envy of the French and Spanish producers. I will give it a new name of my own coining so that it will not be confused with any of the wines at present on the market."

The remarkable volcanic region in Alaska known as the Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes actually contains, not 10,000, but millions of smoking volcanic vents, besides various other wonders, such as Falling mountain, where falls of rock occur every few minutes.

GAMBLING IS STILL SPREADING

Germany in Throes of Wild Orgy of Speculation.

Government is Making Efforts to Halt the Fever, Which Has Spread to All Parts of the Country—Stakes Are High.

Berlin.—The government is trying to halt a gambling fever which has swept Germany for many months and which authorities say continues to spread despite hundreds of arrests, the confiscation of millions of marks, sentencing of scores of persons to jail and the imposition of heavy fines.

Close upon the heels of the gambling and speculation mania which appeared among the people of all classes came a horde of stock-market manipulators, racetrack togs, bucket shop promoters and organizers of get-rich-quick betting associations, who, starting with small sums, subscribed by working men and women, shortly were able to open luxurious gambling houses.

At least a dozen such establishments operating in Berlin, Hamburg, Dresden and smaller provincial towns have been raided and closed by the police.

Sums as high as 12,000,000 marks have been found and confiscated by the police in gambling houses which apparently were catering only to the smaller gamblers. The proprietors have been held on charges of fraud.

The horse racing season, which has been unusually successful, offered the crooked gamblers and promoters a chance which they promptly took advantage of, and it is known billions of marks were wagered on alleged tips. Some of these promoters became widely known as reliable "informants" and made so much money for their clientele that they became popular idols.

The Smith family numbers 14,000,000 members throughout the world.

WASHINGTON ARMS IN RIPON

Remarkable Heraldic Window Has Coat of Arms of Family From Which First President Sprung.

Attention has just been drawn by Canon Solloway of Selby Abbey to a remarkable heraldic window in the north aisle of the nave of Ripon minster. The design in very beautiful color glass is elaborate and intricate, for it contains no less than 15 quarterings representing various alliances into which members of the Norton family (well known locally) entered in bygone years.

"A fact of interest to Americans," said Canon Solloway, "is that among these coats of arms is that of the Washington family; in spite of the thousands of visitors to our minster from the United States, I do not think this has ever been noted before. It certainly would hardly be apparent to a casual observer. And yet there it is; the field, you will notice is white, and in the upper part are three red, five-pointed stars, below which are two red bars.

"It is strange," continued the canon, "that this fine example of the Washington arms should have escaped notice. I am told that some Americans are skeptical as to the heraldic genesis of their national flag, yet any doubter might be convinced when standing before Ripon window. This coat of arms is identical in every way with those at Brighton and Sulgrave, and the people of Ripon should be proud that in their beloved minster is commemorated the fact of an alliance between the local family of Norton and that of the first President of the United States."

GIVE UP FREEDOM FOR MERCY

Prisoners in French Train Wreck Do Rescue Work Instead of Fleeing.

Lyon, France.—Handcuffed in pairs and in charge of four gendarmes, 12 French military prisoners, en route to Algeria to serve sentences ranging from five to fifteen years, were aboard the Strassburg-Marseilles express when it jumped the track at Les Echets, a few miles from here. Forty passengers were killed and seventy injured.

None of the prisoners was seriously hurt, but three gendarmes were killed and the other, pinned under the wreckage, lay seriously wounded.

All semblance of authority and order had disappeared. The prisoners were free, but, instead of running away, they pulled the wounded gendarme out of the tangled mass of wood and iron and laid him on the grass. During the night they rescued 31 injured passengers. They have since left for Algeria to serve their sentences, but it is understood that the minister of war is studying the case, and the opinion is expressed that, in due course of red tape, they will be pardoned.

American Scientist Reports That Oil-Immersed Outfits Prevent Burns and Shocks.

Washington.—Improvement in medical X-ray outfits so that all danger of electrical shocks and burns has been eliminated, was described to the American Roentgen Ray society by Dr. W. D. Coolidge of the General Electric company's research laboratory at Schenectady, N. Y.

He said efficient models but little larger than a camera may be purchased.

We are very glad to report the condition of our pastor, Rev. Daniel Johnson, who is in the Methodist hospital recovering from a serious operation, to be all that could be desired. He will probably be home in a couple of weeks, better in health than he has been for two or three years. It will not be many weeks before he will be able to resume his duties and noone will be happier than he that this is so.

Baymen say that eels and crabs are bedding down in the mud for the winter. There were more crabs this summer than in many years.

This probably due to the mild weather winter and the early spring. Some of the bay crabs bed down in the mud and some of them go outside the nets to bed down in the bottom of the open sea.

Hallow E'en falling on Sunday this year, the youngsters made merry Saturday and Monday, the night being the most popular and there were many grotesque and beautiful costumes in evidence.

The bluefish seem to have gone for the most part, and the weakfish too. Winter fish are coming along the coast. Tomcods are biting and most fish are due on the beaches the first real cold nights. There is still fishing outside the inlets; but bay fishing, except for flounders, is about over.

High Flyer. It is no rare occurrence for the condor to soar to a height of four miles.

Leprosy Not Fully Understood.
Leprosy is still somewhat of a puzzle to medical science, and the means by which it is spread has never been satisfactorily determined. The housefly is suspected of occasional agency in the matter, but the case against that insect has never been proved. In a considerable majority of cases studied personal contact with lepers seemed unquestionably to be accountable for the infection.

Cynical Definition.
"A bachelor," remarks a disappointed lady, "is a man who lives alone with the one he loves."

A Feminine Victory

By FREDERICK HART.

You carried the Ninth by 1,500! We win! We win!

The shock of the unexpected words threw Livingston off his mental balance for an instant. When he recovered himself he heard wild footsteps on the stairs and a great shouting in the streets. The city was celebrating his election and his friends were rushing to congratulate him. He had won!

Very late that night, when the last well-wisher had retired and the last rocket had sputtered and died, Livingston went into the room where he had before consulted with Colonel Cutler. He had come to the Cutler house to receive his friends, as the colonel had invited him, as his own office was too small. Now that his battle was over he wanted his reward.

"Well, my boy, I don't see any objection if Phyllis doesn't," said the colonel. "You won your victory and you deserve her. To tell you the truth, I didn't think you'd do it, for the Ninth seemed dead against us. I couldn't stir to help you. I'd give something to know what swung it your way."

Into the room there burst Phyllis—a laughing, a happy Phyllis. "Oh, daddy, I was listening again. I'm so glad you want Charlie as much as I do. And I'm so happy! And—listen!" She drew the two men confidentially to her. "I carried the Ninth myself."

"What?" Colonel Cutler could hardly believe his ears. "Yes, I did. You men were helpless—I knew that—but don't forget that we women have votes and influence—and every girl in the Ninth is a personal friend of mine! Social position does help, sometimes. I talked to them and convinced them that Charlie was the man, and they voted for him and made their men friends vote for him. That's all."

"Oh!" Colonel Cutler's voice was amazed. "And what arguments did you use? Did you tell them what a wonderful thing it would be for the town and all that sort of thing?" "I did not! I told them—I told them that Charlie and I couldn't get married unless he was elected—and that settled it!"

United States Embassies. A glance at the names of the few countries where the United States minister is appropriately installed in his official mansion betrays a rather eccentric choice. Instead of London, Paris, Rome, we find diplomatic residences in Bangkok, Pekin and Morocco. The legation at Pekin is particularly creditable, being of substantial masonry and placed in a spacious compound. That so worthy a reservation should have been acquired in the heart of Pekin might strike the traveler curiously. When did congress become so generously well disposed toward our diplomat in China? The rather shame-faced answer is that we never bought it. In the boxer rebellion of 1900, United States marines occupied that particular piece of territory, and, in a sense, they have occupied it ever since.—Terressa Long in World's Work.

The Millennium. "The millennium is a term applied to the thousand years during which Satan will be bound and Christ—Revelations 20:2-3. This long triumph is to be preceded by the decisive victory of Christ over the adversary, and followed by a general resurrection and the temporary release of Satan; then comes the last judgment and the new heaven and new earth—Revelations 20:21. Attempts to fix the date of the advent, the second coming, the dawn of the millennium have been proved by lapse of time to have been failures. Some of the dates that have been fixed for the beginning of the millennium have been 1785, by a man named Stilling; 1836, by Bengel; 1843, by Miller; 1866, 1867 and 1868, by Dr. Cumming.

Various Stages of the World. Scientists, for purposes of convenience, have placed all peoples and all states of savagery, barbarism and civilization into four arbitrary stages—the two ages of stone, the Paleolithic, or Ancient Stone age, and the Neolithic, or Newer Stone age, the age of Copper or Bronze, and the age of Iron, according to knowledge or lack of knowledge of these materials. Paleolithic men were very crude workmen in stone, but later Neolithic men were finished workmen in the material.

Two Resemblances. She—Did you ever see the two Jacksons? He—Yes. "Don't you think the boy is a perfect photograph of his father?" "Yes; and I think the girl is the photograph of her mother."

Well Named. Professor (endeavoring to impress on class the definition of cynic)—Young man, what would you call a man who pretends to know everything? Senior—A professor—Lehigh Burr.

OF EARTH'S OLD STORIES All Peoples Have Had Some Concerning "the Man in the Moon." "The man in the moon" Nearly everyone the world of the good-natured old o watches from afar by at all goes well on this pictures the moon is a broad, smiling face earth.

Dante's Beautiful Imagery. Dante believed that when Lucifer was cast out from heaven he made a deep pit as he fell in one side of the Earth (the pit of Hell, or the Inferno), and on the other side a corresponding projection, the Hill of Purgatory. The poet's description of his arrival at the foot of this hill, after his long sojourn in the dark regions of Hell, is one of the most beautiful things in literature.

Almost Incredible. In Bombay there is a fair who spends all the hours of daylight of every day suspended head downward. Two fiber ropes attached to the limb of a tree constitute his support. Early every morning he takes hold of the handles at the ends of the two ropes, reverses the natural position of the body, and hangs there till sunset. He has been doing this now for three years.

Lemons. Many persons may not know that the scent and favor of lemon peel reside in minute cells, close to the surface of the fruit, and that by slicing it thin they will cut through these innumerable cells and thus obtain double the quantity of the essential oil that could be procured by anyone careless of this fact. The cells being cut through, it follows that a great part of the oil remains on the white of the lemon. This is easily abstracted by rubbing a lump of sugar over it.

Merely Stopped Counting. "It's Mabel's birthday and we're giving her a party." "I thought she had stopped having birthdays." "Not at all. She has merely stopped counting them."

Can't See It. "What do you think of New York?" "I'll tell you. I can't see for the life of me where those New Yorkers get their own opinions of themselves and their town."

CONDENSED CLASSICS

LORNA DOONE

By R. D. BLACKMORE

Condensation by Katherine R. Markward, Alliston, Mass.

Richard Doddridge Blackmore was born at Longwheaton, Berkshire, England, June 5, 1835. He was educated at Blunsell's school, Tiverton, and at Exeter college, Oxford, where he obtained a scholarship. His first publication was a volume of poems, which showed no particular promise, nor did a later health rendered it necessary for him to leave city life in London, and he determined to combine a literary life in the country with a business career as a market-gardener. He settled down in Teddington, and set earnestly to work. Several publications followed, the first novel being "Clara Vaughan," the merits of which were promptly recognized. But it was in 1860 that he suddenly sprang into fame with "Lorna Doone." This story was one of the first in the revival of the romantic novel, and appearing, as it did, at a time when the reading public was waiting and ready for a work of this type, it was a great success, and pronounced a novel of "singular charm, vigor and imagination."

Blackmore kept to his quiet country life to the last, and passed away at Teddington on Jan. 20, 1900.

IN EXMOOR in the county of Somerset, in the year of grace 1661, dwelt the outlawed Doones, who, huge and brutal, defied king and common, committed brazen robberies with impunity, and took refuge after every outrage in the well-known impregnable Glen Doone. On the nearby farm of Plover's Barrows dwelt John Ridd, a great limbed lad who had been summoned home from boarding school in his teens to learn that his father, a wealthy farmer, had been slain in a night raid by the Doones. John, blunt and honest, was kind to his mother and his two sisters, did his share of the farm work, and, as he grew to manhood, learned to ride a horse and shoot a blunderbuss with unflinching skill.

One day, while yet a boy, his fishing excursions in Bagworthy water led him to discover an entrance to Glen Doone, so secret, so remote that the robber band stationed no guard there, never dreaming that living soul would discover it. Following a little cascade, John emerged at last into a dell blooming with primroses and beheld with amazement a beautiful child of eight with hair like a black shower and eyes full of pity and wonder. Her name (pretty, like herself) was Lorna Doone and John often had her in his thoughts through the six years which followed. He was twenty, then and Lorna fourteen, and already John Ridd knew that he loved her, that fate had decreed it so and that all the world was naught when weighed against this girl.

To be found in Doone valley spelled death for any man, but the thought of Lorna "light and white, nimble, smooth and elegant," filled John with yearning and lured him to the hazard. Again and again he sought the maid in the primrose bower above the cascade and there one afternoon in the splendor of an April sunset John once more threw down the gauntlet which love ever casts at danger. To Lorna's tremulous, "You are mad to come; they will kill you if they find you here," John smiled and thought her fairer than the primroses amid which she stood. She lived in constant fear, she confessed, for the gigantic and passionate Carver Doone openly paid her homage and glowered with jealous eyes at any man who durst cast a glance at her.

"I care naught for him or his jealousy," cried John Ridd. "I have loved you long, as child, as comely girl, and now as full grown maiden. I love you more than tongue can tell or heart can hold in silence." Lorna raised her glorious eyes and, flinging her arms about his neck, cried, with her heart on his, "Darling, I shall never be my own again. I am yours forever and forever." But before he went she was in tears. "How dare I dream of love? Something in my heart tells me it can never be."

That fear of his beloved's spurred John to penetrate into Glen Doone one night at the risk of his life for word of Lorna. Once a guard leveled his gun at him but went off cringing at the thought that after all so huge a form could be only that of Carver Doone.

It was a real danger which threatened Lorna, for old Sir Ensor Doone, head of the robber crew, lay dying and he alone had been her protector

In addition, Liberian coffee thrives under the protection of vast coco-palm groves. Ten-foot pepper vines climb thickly up the trunks of small trees, and dead forsts of teakwood, planted in even rows, overhang and shade the road.

With rich alluvial soil, unflinching rainfall and tremendous natural resources, only the lack of labor and the deterrent influence of warring tribes has held Sumatra practically at a standstill.

against the brutal Carver. For John to play a desperate game and carry Lorna off would but incite the Doones to wreak revenge upon the countryside with fire and sword. At times he swore to smoke out this nest of rascals, but the timid farmers, overawed by their savagery, would promise no support.

Meanwhile an unparalleled winter had set in. Day after day the snow fell steadily and, blown by the wind, almost smothered the low-saved cottages. Desperate for some word of Lorna, John made his way on snow-shoes into the very heart of Glen Doone, unobserved in that feathery fog. John found Lorna's hamlet, stifled her exclamations of surprise with kisses, and felt his heart swell with anger on learning that she and her maid, Gwenny Carfax, were kept in confinement and deprived of food by the order of Carver Doone until Lorna should consent to be his wife. Not for aught was John Ridd a giant—and in love. Throwing discretion to the winds he carried Lorna and Gwenny away upon his sledge that very night to the warm refuge of his mother's residence.

The Doones, though so openly set at defiance, bided their time. With spring the roads were open and one moonlight night, with an arrogance worthy of Carver, they attacked Plover's Barrows in force. John Ridd, nothing daunted, defended his residence and bled ones with spirit, meeting the attackers squarely with a handful of men and putting them to speedy flight. A murderous attack by the Doones was had business enough, but to John's honest soul a worse trouble followed.

His Lorna was discovered to be no true Doone, but the niece of the great Lord Dugal, kidnapped as a child. To London and the protection of her noble uncle she was summoned, her heart as well as her lover's torn by the separation. The thought that he might never again behold his Lorna plunged him into misery.

"After all," he asked himself, "who am I but a simple farmer, who dares lift his eyes to the niece of an earl?" But this was no time for repining, for the ill-starred rebellion of Monmouth flamed out, catching John Ridd, innocent though he was, in its toils. But all came to a happy issue when John, summoned to London, frustrated the intended murder of Lord Dugal, captured the attackers, and turned them over for punishment to the terrible Lord Jeffreys. Events moved swiftly; his exploit made London ring, he was knighted by King James, and when the earl of Dugal died soon after, a well-directed bribe secured Jeffreys' permission to let Lorna, his ward in chancery, wed the redoubtable Sir John Ridd.

Back to Exmoor and Plover's Barrows went John Ridd, knight, to lead the farmers of the countryside who, infuriated by a new outrage committed by the Doones, took the law into their own hands and swept the robber stronghold clean with fire and sword. Only the scheming old "counselor" and his son, the brutal Carver, escaped a bloody death.

Now, on the great day dawned for John and Lorna and they made their way to the little country church to be wed while all the neighboring farmers came to applaud the event. Scarcely were the sacred words of the service pronounced when a shot rang through the church and Lorna, her dark eyes drooping, her wedding gown stained with blood, sank into her husband's arms. John Ridd never forgot the agony of that moment and yet he seemed strangely calm. Only Carver Doone could have done this dastardly deed and as John dashed off in hot pursuit he swore that the world was too narrow a place to harbor him and his enemy another day. For Carver on his jaded horse there was no escape. His pistol missed fire, and at last in a narrow defile flanked by a wood and a stretch of bog the two men came to grips. They spoke little and that grim duel was fought with neither knife nor pistol but body to body as became two giants.

John felt a lower rib crack beneath Carver's terrible embrace, but his iron hand ripped the muscles of his assailant's arm from the bone like an orange pulp and he flung him, crushed and bleeding, upon the ground. In an instant the black lips of the bog fastened upon Carver's huge limbs, swiftly, silently, and John Ridd had scarce time to get his own feet upon firm soil before his enemy was sucked down into those grim depths, his face distorted with agony, but his quivering lips uttering no sound.

Love's true course does not always run awry and both John and Lorna recovered, he to worship her and she to assure him through the serene years with eyes and lips all eloquent: "I love you, John Ridd."

PROFOUNDLY INDIFFERENT. "My friend," said the man with a serious cast of countenance, "do you know how the other half of the world lives?" "No," said Mr. Grumpson, "and I don't care. Furthermore, when I hear automobiles stopping at a neighbor's house late at night I don't even rise from my comfortable bed and peep out of the window to see what he's up to."

Odd Affliction. Druggists frequently have to listen to amusing things. Here are a few examples: "My little girl has just been operated on for egg noggs in her head." "What can you recommend for my sister? She has Vera Cruz veins in her legs."

Some Delay Evident. "What did you say your age was?" he remarked between dances. "Well, I didn't say," returned the girl, smartly, "but I've just reached 21."

You remember the story of the Pitcher— It made a good many trips to the well and it came back in good order. "I can take care of myself," it said—"they don't need to talk about risks to me." But it went once too often. After that it was only part of a pitcher, and they didn't need to talk to it about risks—it knew. A lot of people won't believe coffee can harm them until it does harm them. "Nonsense!" they say, "it never disturbs me." When it does disturb them, then they know. Often the disturbance which they then recognize is the result of irritations to nerves and digestion which have been going on for a long time. If you have to lie awake at night and count the clock ticks, after an evening cup of coffee, they know that it's better to be safe than sorry. The risk of coffee's harm is gone when the meal-time drink is Postum. Here's a delightful and satisfying table beverage, with charm for the taste and without harm for nerves or digestion. You know you're on the right road with Postum; there's never the possibility that you'll go once too often. Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. TWO INFORMAL FROCKS; BLOUSES GROW LONGER

IN SPITE of the slim silhouette—because of its success and popularity—frock for afternoon wear are addicted to panels, draperies, platings and other embellishments that rescue them from a too meager simplicity. Or, if they have none of these, they may look to sleeves for help. The season puts such emphasis on sleeves, presents them in so many styles and goes to such extremes in their decoration, that they may well assume all the responsibility of providing the only decorative features in even an important model.

In the two dresses for informal afternoon wear, shown below, the use of front, which may reach nearly to the bottom of the skirt. This lengthening of blouses indicates that they have become even more important in the wardrobe than they have been. They follow the lead of dresses in their sleeves and neck lines—sleeves are longer and often elaborated and neck lines are higher. There are some three-quarter-length sleeves and many full length, either flaring or gathered into a cuff at the wrist. The flaring sleeves require trimming and are brimming over with it. Beads, yarn and silk embroideries and applique work all make opportunity for the use of contrasting colors that en-of georgette sleeves in frocks of crepe or satin, with a happy choice of trimming, has resulted in practical and pretty models that are not too simple to be interesting. The slip-over style that was such a success in late summer has been carried over and appears in the straight chemise dress, at the left. It has wide sleeves of georgette, finished with rows of figured ribbon, and the same ribbon appears in rows about the dress, below the waistline. A narrow belt, made of satin like the

The peplum blouse pictured is made of dark satin, with a fitted bodice, imitation kimmer fur in the bust and ends at the bust line in front, with rows of close-set satin-covered buttons below them; they border the deep cuffs into which the full upper sleeves are gathered. Color combinations that are fashionable include blue in strong tones with black, gray with black, brown with flame or henna, green and black, and always black and white. CORN MEAL MAY BE SERVED IN DIFFERENT APPETIZING DISHES

Fish Balls in Which Corn Meal is an Ingredient Make a Hearty Dish.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Most persons who eat a noontime dinner like at least one hot hearty dish for supper. Those made largely of corn meal are not only nourishing but very appetizing as well, when made by a skillful cook.

When mush is called for in a recipe the following method of preparing it, recommended by the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture, is easier and better than the usual way—that of bringing water to a boiling point and then stirring the meal into it:

Lumpless Corn-Meal Mush.
Put the corn meal, cold water and salt together in the top of a double boiler. No stirring is necessary. Put the top of the double boiler into the lower part and allow the mush to heat slowly, cooking half an hour, or longer, if convenient. Many persons cook it for four hours. Just before serving remove the top of the double boiler from the lower part, and boil the mush for two or three minutes. In boiling it at this time there is no danger that it will lump, and this extra cooking improves the texture and the flavor.

Corn-Meal Fish Balls.
3 cups cold white fish
corn-meal mush 1 egg
1 cup shredded cod-1 tablespoon butter
Pick over the codfish and soak it to remove salt, if necessary. Combine the ingredients and drop by spoonfuls into hot fat. Drain on porous paper. These codfish balls compare very favorably in taste with those made with potato, and are prepared more easily and quickly. The mush must be as dry as possible. This makes 12 fish balls.

Corn Meal Mush With Pork.
1 pound lean pork, 1/2 teaspoon powder part meat and part lard
1 cup water
1 tablespoon salt
Cook the pork in water until the meat can be removed easily from the bone. Remove the meat, cool the broth and remove the fat. Reduce the broth to about a quart, or add water enough to bring it up to this amount, and cook the corn meal in it. Add the meat, finely chopped, and the seasonings. Pack in granite bread tins. Cut into slices and fry. Beef may be used in the same way. This serves six people.

Corn Meal Scruppie.
1 pig's head split in 2 cups corn meal
Salt and sage
Follow the foregoing directions for cooking corn meal with pork, but use double the amount of water.

Cheese Pudding.
1 quart boiling water 1/2 pound yellow corn meal
1 tablespoon salt 1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup cheese
Into the boiling salted water pour the corn meal slowly, stirring constantly, and allow it to boil for ten minutes; then add most of the cheese, and cook for ten minutes more, or until the cheese is melted. Add the milk and cook for a few minutes. Pour into a greased baking dish, and brown in the oven. This dish is improved by grating a little hard cheese over the top just before it is baked.

This pudding can be cut into slices when cold, and fried. This serves four to six persons.

MILK AS SOURCE OF ENERGY AND PROTEIN

Each Child Should Have at Least One Pint Each Day.

Digestive Organs of Healthy Adult Do Their Work Better With Some Solid Food—Value of Milk is Shown in Table.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is a commonplace that milk is a perfect food. This may be taken to mean, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, that it contains, first, materials that children need for growth; second, materials that young and old alike need for the upkeep and repair of their body machinery; and, third, materials that all need for fuel, to provide them with heat and with the energy necessary for work. Such a statement should not be understood to mean that milk has these ingredients in such proportions that it can serve satisfactorily as an exclusive food for a grown person or even for a child. To the growing child, however, no other food can satisfactorily replace milk as a part of the diet. Each child should take a full quart of milk each day if possible, or at least a pint without fail. While a healthy adult could live on milk alone for a considerable time, the digestive organs do their work better with at least some solid food. Too large a quantity of milk alone—at least four or five quarts a day—would be required. Nevertheless, milk is much more than a beverage. The following table shows that milk ranks high among our common food materials as a source both of energy and of protein.

Protein and Energy Value of Milk.

Protein Value	Energy Value
1 quart (32 ounces) of milk contains as much protein as:	1 quart (32 ounces) of milk contains as much energy as:
7 ounces of sirloin steak	11.3 ounces of sirloin steak
6 ounces of round steak	14.9 ounces of round steak
8.5 ounces of fowl	14.5 ounces of fowl
4.3 average eggs	3 average eggs

Milk and milk products can be used interchangeably with meats and eggs as a source of protein. A quart of milk contains as much protein as five ounces of dried beans or a twelve-ounce loaf of bread, and while the legumes and cereals are considered a cheap source of protein it should be remembered that their proteins are not so completely utilized for tissue building as those in milk, meat and egg.

Satisfactory Way of Serving Tender Parts is in Form of Sandwiches—Salt Lightly.

Young children may be given the young and tender parts of celery and lettuce, a satisfactory way of serving them being in the form of sandwiches. For this purpose salt lightly and chop or cut the celery into small pieces.

COMMUNITY SINGING SCHOOL

Secretary Wallace Says Music is One of the Good Things of Our Civilization.

Have you music in your home? Are you making an effort to supplement the splendid offerings of the phonograph record and piano player roll with home produced vocal and instrumental melody?

Will there be a singing school in your community this fall? "Good music in the farm home will contribute to the health, happiness, contentment and a happy family life."

Secretary Wallace recently wrote in response to a request for an expression on the subject.

"Music is one of the good things of our present civilization which, in common with other blessings, is as readily available to those who live in the open country as to those who dwell in the cities.

"In the old days music was an important factor in rural community life. Many of us remember the old-fashioned singing school.

"Community singing should be revived generally.

"The township music teacher should be working in every community."

WAYS TO SERVE VEGETABLES

Simple Methods Are Better for Children Than Complicated Ones Like Scallopings.

Vegetables may be served either quite simply seasoned with salt or with a little milk, cream, or butter, to improve or vary the flavor. Oil may be used to dress greens instead of butter. These simple methods are better for children than complicated ones like frying or scalloping. For the smallest children, chop finely such vegetables as greens, and if the tougher portions of other vegetables, such as the skins of green peas, are found to disagree with a child, remove them by putting the cooked vegetable through a sieve. Do not give small children such vegetables as raw radishes or cucumbers, which might easily be swallowed in large pieces and not digest well.

WARNS AGAINST THE "UGLIES"

Architect Gives Wise Advice to Those Contemplating the Establishment of a Home.

The architects have passed through six lean years. Had it not been for the "uglies" that were erected they virtually would have been idle. Remodeling "uglies" into beautiful homes is about all the architects have done. However, if these houses had been designed and constructed right at first the remodeling would not have been necessary.

"Uglies," like the billboards, are doomed to destruction; popular sentiment demands that they be destroyed. That the home must be beautiful, both interior and exterior, is readily recognized by every mother, as she realizes that it is the most essential element of the home and it is that which causes children to love and cherish it. That it should be furnished beautifully and should have good pictures goes without mention. Well designed furniture may be handed down through generations, and well planned and designed homes increase in value with age. We have houses in this country, built two hundred years ago, that are used today as samples of good work and architects look to them for precedent.

Young people who are about to build should consider it with great care, as building is a serious thing. They should invest in good magazines recognized for their good taste, study thoroughly every article, read also every criticism of these articles and then invest only in expensive things—in fact, those things they think they cannot afford to purchase; then buy one article instead of six that they think they need. In this way they will have established a nucleus from which they cannot depart. Moreover they will never desire a change, because beautiful things remain beautiful.

To those contemplating the establishment of a home I would say select your lot with a view to the future development of it. Do not invest in cheap additions that have been laid out on lines of the least resistance. Select a place surrounded by romantic conditions. Select a large lot, build a small house, add to it as you progress and be sure that the lot has sufficient restrictions to assure you that your investment will not depreciate and that your neighbors are of good report and intelligent.—Selby H. Kurfuss in Kansas City Times.

KANSAS CITY SHOWS WISDOM

Determined to Protect its Pleasantry Streets From Billboards and "Uglies" in General.

Among the things which critics of the Anti-Main street school leave out of account, in the supposedly objective statement of their case, are the many healthy little movements in towns of the Gopher prairie section toward making two blades of grass grow, so to speak, where none grew before. Do you know the things for which Milwaukee ought to be famous besides its one-time beer? They are worth looking up. Do you know Kansas City? It is one of the pleasantest places to live in these benighted "states," and it is so because its citizens have discovered that beauty pays.

Probably beauty, like honesty, is nobler when achieved for its own sake, yet it is something to achieve beauty even by the commercial route. And the parks, good streets, agreeable rather than ugly buildings, actually increase general real estate values.

They have coined a useful word in Kansas City—"uglies." They have an ordinance halfway through the city council—perhaps by this time it is all the way through—protecting the pleasant streets from billboards, gasoline-filling stations and "uglies" in general. How this particular ordinance fares is not particularly important. The important thing is that the public knows what are "uglies" and is determined to do away with them.—Leslie.

Urges Building of Fireproof Homes.

Fireproof homes, built to last, and standardization of plumbing supplies and builders' hardware were given as partial solutions of the housing problem by Dr. J. W. Stratton, director of the National Bureau of Standards at Washington, in an address to the New York building congress. Doctor Stratton said the greatest waste of housing was caused by fire, and this had an unquestionable effect on the shortage of homes.

"Recently I returned from a trip abroad, where I inspected the homes being erected there and which have been erected in the past for the laboring classes," he said. "These houses are of fireproof construction and are built to last. The construction which has been going on in this country has been almost entirely of wood. Such houses will disappear in a few years."

Good Pantry Is Necessary.

It is to be regretted that so many of the smaller houses have no proper pantry or cupboard for the storing of food. A dry and well-ventilated pantry should be a sine qua non if food is to be kept in a wholesome condition.

The Fourth Dimension.

The fourth dimension is merely a mathematical speculation. It is assumed to be the property of matter that should be to solids as solids are to planes. Mathematical investigations are made on the assumption of an indefinite number of dimensions.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble. Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions. Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store. However, if you wish first to test this preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. BLOW THAT SHOCKED DADDY

Old Gentleman Now Naturally Fears He Has Lost the Confidence of His Neighbors.

Susan was having her first beau, a youngster who drove a truck. And often when he came to Susan's home at night, since he lived in the other part of town, he came in the truck. The family continually twitted her about it, saying such things as "I suppose the neighbors will think we're having our coal hauled at night," or "our flour" or some other commodity.

But one evening even father was horrified when one of the ten-year-old boys in the neighborhood said innocently: "My pa said that your pa would get pinched some night if he didn't quit having so much booze hauled here after dark."

Investigation disclosed the fact that the truck that stood at their door one evening each week was an old brewery truck.—Indianapolis News.

An American and an Englishman were discussing the merits of their respective parents.

"Ah!" said the Yankee. "I guess my father was a clever man. He was a chimney-shaft builder, and made himself famous with the last shaft he erected."

"Sure thing," continued the American. "It was so high that when the weathercock got stuck, the man who went up to put it right had to take a week's rations for the journey!"

"Oh, ho!" laughed the Englishman. "That's nothing. My father was also a shaft builder, and the last one he built was so high that he had to go up every night and take the top off to let the moon go by."—London Answers.

As the Editor Sees It

"STAND UP AND BE COUNTED"
 "Every patriotic person should do his part to counteract foolish talk and insidious influences and should stand up and be counted," and the Republican Executive Committee of Tuckerton has taken this as its slogan in urging that all voters cast their ballots on Tuesday, November 8th.

Politics is the art and science of government. In a Republic like ours it is the noblest occupation of citizenship and he who withholds himself from its activities is a peacetime slacker.

The citizen voter of sound principles and good purposes and means well, who remains inactive in forming public opinion and shaping public policies, may not be a positively bad citizen but is far from being the good citizen he should be. He is properly characterized as a peacetime slacker.

There are no inactive citizens among the Socialists, the I. W. W., the Bolshevists. They are propagandists one and all, working in season and out of season to add converts to their ranks, and hasten the time when there shall be either a peaceful or a violent revolution for the overthrow of the United States Government. They are not afraid to "stand up and be counted."

What would any of us have thought of our boys, who went to the front in the great world war, if they had refused to do their duty? It is as much the duty of every citizen, in peace times, to show the same spirit at the polls as our boys did "over there."

Citizens of Tuckerton! Show your colors next Tuesday, cast your ballot, "STAND UP AND BE COUNTED."

INSTITUTIONAL BOND BILL WINS GENERAL SUPPORT

Senator William H. Bright of Cape May County and Mayor Frederick G. Melvin of Cape May City, speaking at the official opening of the Woodbine Colony for Feeble-Minded Males at Woodbine, New Jersey, urged the people of Cape May to vote for the institutional construction bond bill on November 8th.

"It is a remarkable record of economy that the State Department of Institutions has achieved," said Senator Bright. "New Jersey is justly proud of her great institutions. She is one of the leaders in institutional management. We must support the institutional bond bill to provide necessary funds to complete and round out each existing institution and to provide for the necessary additional institutions. It is one of the great needs of our state and we must not fall behind."

Mayor Melvin, representing the opposite political party, urged a favorable vote on the bond bill as one of the most essential things the state of New Jersey could do. "We must support these institutions anyway and it is much cheaper and better business to provide sufficient funds to build when it can be done cheaply. There is no question about the need. There is no question but what the plan offered is the best and safest one," said Mayor Melvin.

Dr. Katherine B. Davis, former Commissioner of Correction of the City of New York, speaking at the graduating exercises at the State Home for Girls also strongly commended the institutional bond bill and asked the people of New Jersey to support it. He said in part:

"Every girl who has ever had the advantage of this school ought to urge her parents, her father and her mother, to vote for the institutional bond bill. It is a question of giving the state sufficient money to build proper buildings in the state institutions."

tions, a school house here for example. You have to have your school scattered around in the different buildings and in different ways. Now it would be very much better in many ways, if you had a school building, just as they have in the city. You could have your books, classes and your industrial classes in a building with proper equipment. The graduates of this school, I hope, will prevail upon their parents and their friends to vote "Yes" on this issue. That will be an example of loyalty. There is another advantage in this also that it will give employment to a great many people.

SIX STATES BESIDES NEW JERSEY INCREASED FEES FOR LICENSES

New Jersey is not the only state which increased resident hunting and fishing licenses this year. Six others boosted them and the increases range from twenty-five cents in Vermont to $2.50 in Washington. Massachusetts and Minnesota each added $1 to the old figure and Montana and Oregon fifty cents each. Resident sportsmen will now pay $7.50 in Washington, $5 in Oregon, $4 in Minnesota, $2 in Montana and Massachusetts, $1.25 in Vermont, while we pay $1.65 beginning January 1 next.

The foregoing and other facts regarding changes in game laws are set out in Farmers' Bulletin 1235, issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. It is a summary of the provisions of federal, state and Canadian provincial statutes, prepared by Lawyer, United States Chief Game Warden, and Frank L. Earnshaw, assistant, Interstate Commerce, in Game as a contribution from the Bureau of Biological Survey. Copies may be secured by writing the Department of Agriculture.

Seasons were shortened and bag limits cut down in a large number of states, the bulletin shows. The open season for woodcock was cut down two weeks in New York, twenty days in Michigan and a month in Vermont. Maine, for the first time, prescribed a season limit on grouse, twenty-five. The Michigan game season was shortened twenty-five days. Colorado protected sage hens until 1924 and cut from fifteen to ten the number of prairie chickens and grouse permitted in possession at one time. In Oregon the season on grouse, pheasants and quail—the last named was reduced two weeks. Pennsylvania limited the up game season to one month, opening now November 1; New Hampshire established a continuous closed season on quail and in Kansas the bird may be hunted now only during odd years.

Open seasons on big game were shortened generally and hunting further restricted. Michigan, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont, and Washington (east of the Cascades) enacted buck laws. Maine protected spile bucks and West Virginia continued indefinitely protection on does and fawns, besides prohibiting the killing of bucks for two years. Seasons were shortened in New Jersey, New Hampshire, Idaho, Minnesota, Missouri and Montana. Bull moose were given five years' protection by Maine.

California sportsmen seem to have been up against the same sort of legislative effort that those of New Jersey have thrice confronted—an attempt to turn all the Fish and Game Commission's receipts into the general state funds. The situation was complicated for them by a move to abolish their commission and place the administration of the fish and game laws in the hands of the Department of Agriculture. Both efforts were defeated after a prolonged fight.

Sportsmen and other conservationists had a fight on their hands in Arkansas also. There the life of the State Fish and Game Commission was threatened by efforts to cut off its appropriations, and a strenuous time ensued before the foes of the board were overcome.

Authority was granted the Pennsylvania commission to revoke the license of or to refuse a license for five to any person violating the laws, destroying notices posted by the commission, destroying property or crops, carelessly firing live stock or causing forest fires. The same rights also were given the New Mexico and West Virginia commissions. Hereafter the Pennsylvania hunting license tag must be displayed on the outer garment between the shoulders.

On the whole the legislative developments of the year represent a marked step forward in conservation.

A Man for the Ages

A Story of the Builders of Democracy

CHAPTER XXIII—Continued.

About this time Miss Mary Todd, the daughter of a Kentucky banker, arrived in Springfield to visit her sister, Mrs. Ninian W. Edwards. She was a fashionably dressed, good-looking girl of blue-gray eyes and dark hair.

"Well, Mary, haven't you found the fortunate young man yet?" Mr. Edwards playfully asked the day of her coming.

"You know, my husband is going to be President of the United States and I hope that I would find him in Springfield," Mary answered in a like vein.

"There's great fishing here," said Mr. Edwards. "I know the very man you are looking for. He has come up from the ranks and is now the most popular member of the legislature. He can make a stirring speech and they say he is going to be the President of the United States. He's wise and witty and straight as a string, but a rough diamond—big, awkward and homely. You're just the girl to take him in hand and give him a little polish and push him along. His name is Abraham Lincoln."

Speed knew the Todds. When he called upon Mary she asked about Mr. Lincoln and said she would like to meet him.

"She's just the girl for you, Abe," Speed said to him that evening. "She is bright and well educated and her family has influence. She could be a great help to you."

This interested the member from Sangamon county, who was indeed eager to get along. The companionship of a refined young lady was the very thing he needed.

"Let's go over and pay our respects to her," Speed suggested. They went, Lincoln being carefully dressed in his first suit of black clothes. Miss Todd was a bright, vivacious girl of middle stature, twenty-two years old. She was fashionably dressed and carried her head proudly—a smart-looking, witty, well spoken girl, but not especially handsome. Honest Abe was deeply impressed by her talk and fine manners and general comeliness. He felt her grace and charm and spoke of it with enthusiasm. But to him and to her there seemed to be an impassable gulf between them. She changed her mind about that, however, when she heard him speak and felt the power of his personality and saw his face lighted by the candle of his spirit. It was a handsome face in those moments of high emotion. Hardship and malarial poison had lined and sallow his skin. The shadows of loneliness and sorrow were in his sculpturing. But when his eyes glowed with passion, one saw not the rough mask which the life of the pioneer had given him; his face took on a noble and impressive beauty. To quote his own words to the boy, Josiah Traylor, his character was speaking as well as his lips. Mary had the insight to recognize his power. She felt the strength of his spirit. She agreed with her friends that here was a man of great promise. She felt the need of him.

To one who loved beauty and respected women as he did, the grace and refinement of this young lady had a singular appeal, coupled, as it was, with the urge of his strong, masculine nature. It was a revelation. He was like a young poet going out into the open and seeing for the first time the mysterious beauty of the mountains or "the exquisite, delicate, thin curve of the new moon in spring." He began to seek and study refinement of thought, of manner, of dress, of expression. He knew that he needed Mary, but had the feeling that she was not for him.

A woman who lived near the Edwards' house had a small, hairy poodle dog. One day, as Abe and Mary were walking along the street, they met this woman, who asked if they had seen her dog.

"I wouldn't wonder if some one down the street had got him tied to the end of a pole and is using him to swab off his windows," said Abe Lincoln with a good-natured laugh. "I'll try to find him for you."

Mary enjoyed fun and this like sallies of the young legislator added a certain zest to their friendship. Women are like children in their love of humor.

The diminutive Douglas saw in Miss Todd an asset of much value and his attentions began to be assiduous. Mary was indifferent to his lofty manner and sonorous vociferousness. Abe Lincoln liked her better for that.

She encouraged the visits of the latter and invited his confidence. The fact filled him with a great joy. They went about together. In the Edwards' parlor he modestly told her of his and his life plan. She differed him on certain subjects which unfortunately fundamental. He did not love her as he had loved Ann. But her personality pleased and fascinated the young legislator. One evening under the spell of it he asked her to be his wife. She consented. Then he began to think it over.

It was like Lincoln in his relations with women to get the cart before the horse, so to speak. The points upon which they disagreed came up for consideration. She could not think as he did on the subject of slavery and the hundred one of state rights. His manners were not like hers. They grew naturally out of one's history and character. He could be kind and gentle in his way. But, mainly, his manners would have to be like the rugged limbs of the oak. The grace and elegance of the water-willow and the white birch were not for him. It saddened him to conclude that he would have to be for a long time just what he was—crude, awkward, unlearned in the graces and amenities of cultivated people. He rightly judged that his crudeness would be a constant source of irritation to the proud Mary. As their acquaintance progressed the truth of his conviction grew more apparent. This, however, did not so much concern him as her lack of sympathy with some of his deepest motives. He decided that, after all, he did not love her and that to marry her would be committing a great wrong.

Some of the unhappiest days of his life followed. His conscience gave him no rest. He knew not what to do. He wrote a letter to Miss Todd in which he reviewed the history of his thinking on the subject of their marriage and frankly but tenderly stated his conviction that it would imperil her happiness to marry him. Before sending it he submitted the letter to his friend Speed.

The latter read it over and looked very grave.

"What do you think of it?" Lincoln asked.

"I would never send a letter like that to a lady," Speed answered. "If you feel as you say, go and tell her so, but don't put it in a letter."

Lincoln went to see her that evening and returned to his friend in a more cheerful mood.

"Did you tell her?" Speed asked.

"Yes, I told her."

"What happened?"

"She burst out crying and I threw my arms around her and kissed her and that settled it. We are going to be married."

What an illustration of the humanity and civility of Honest Abe was in the proceeding!

"I'm sure you'll get along all right together," said Speed. "Your spirit is jealous of any one likely to get in its way. But she won't. She'll fall in line and do what she can to help you."

Now, a little before this time, Henry Brimstead and other creditors of Davis had gone to Chicago in the matter of the satisfaction of their judgment against him. Henry had driven a wagon across the prairies and, returning, had brought him and her mother to his home and then to Springfield. It was while they were there that Harry had come down to Chicago out of the woods in a condition of health which had alarmed his physician. The latter had put him on a steamboat and sent him East. He was bound for the mountain country in northern New York.

Bim and her mother returned to Chicago on the stage, the former to and its courage and of good air had wrought a change of which the able doctor had had little hope in the beginning.

In his travels through the great forest Harry had met David Parish and Stephen Van Rensselaer, at whose homes he had spent many a happy summer day. Three years had passed since that fateful morning on the prairie. Through the winters he had lived in a comfortable hunter's camp on the shore of Lake Placid. Summers he had wandered with a guide and canoe through the lakes and rivers of the wilderness hunting and fishing and reading the law books which he had borrowed from Judge Fine of Ogdensburg. Each summer he worked down the Oswegatchie to that point for a visit with his new friends. The history of every week had been written to Bim and her letters had reached him at the points where he was wont to rest in his travels. The lovers had not lost their ardor. Theirs was the love "that hopes and endures and is patient."

On a day in June, 1841, he boarded a steamboat at Ogdensburg on his way to Chicago. He arrived in the evening and found Samson at the home of Bim and her mother—a capacious and well-furnished house on Dearborn street. Bim was then a little over twenty-five years old. A letter from John Wentworth says that she was "an exquisite bit of womanhood learned in the fine arts of speech and dress and manner."

The store had doubled in size under her management and with the help of the capital of Samson and Sarah Traylor. The epidemic had seized her toward the last of her nursing and left the marks of its scourge upon her. It had marred her beauty, but Samson writes, "the girl was still very handsome. She was kind of scared to meet Harry for fear of what he'd think of those little marks on her face, but I told her not to worry."

"You are the smartest and loveliest looking creature that I ever saw in my life," said Harry after he had held her in his arms a moment.

"But see what happened to me—look at my face," she answered.

"It is more beautiful than ever," he said. "Those marks have doubled my love for you. They are medals of honor better than this one that I wear. I want to marry you as soon as possible. I've been looking forward to that since I was sixteen."

"Then I think I'll take you and fight another duel."

"I don't hear anything but love and marriage," said Samson. "We've been ransacking down at our house to keep Josiah from running off and getting married. He's engaged already."

"Engaged! To whom?" Harry asked.

"To Annabel Brimstead. She's a little older than he is. She laughed at him and promised to marry him as soon as he was nominated for President by all his friends. She would now vote for him herself. He has become a good athlete and the best scholar in school. He has every boy and girl in the village working for him evenings and Saturdays."

"What are they doing?" Harry asked.

"Making those newfangled things they call lucifers. You can build a fire in a second with 'em. They cut splinters out of soft wood, dip their ends in brimstone—which Joe learned how to make—and put them in a hot oven until the brimstone is baked. Then a scratch will bring a flame. Joe puts them up in bundles and sells them to the merchants and calls them lucifer matches. He has invented a machine that will cut and dip a thousand splinters an hour. I tell you, Annabel is in danger."

He took a lucifer out of his pocket and scratched it on the bottom of his boot. The party looked with wonder at its flame which quickly consumed the slender thread of pine in his fingers.

"I have always thought that Joe would make a whale of a man," said Harry.

"We all seem to be threatened with immediate and overwhelming happiness," Bim exclaimed.

"The only thing in the way of mine is the national debt that I have accumulated," Harry remarked.

"I knew he'd think of something," said Bim ruefully. "If I wanted to abolish the noble institution of marriage I'd make him chairman of the ways and means committee."

"Harry, your credit is still good with me, and I'm prosperous," Samson began. "I want you to know that Bim's energy and skill are mostly responsible for my success. I guess we owe more to your sickness than you're aware of. If it hadn't been for that we would be plodding along at the same old pace. We would not have felt the need of speeding up. It was your misfortune that brought Bim into the store. If she wants to retire and marry you, I rather think she is entitled to do it. I don't want any more fooling around about this matter. Sarah and I couldn't stand it. She's kept me awake nights talking about it. The thing has worried us plenty. We rebel and demand action before anything else happens. We feel as if we had some rights in this case."

"I concede them and second your demand," Harry answered. "Bim must name a near day. I only need a week to get some clothes and go up to Milwaukee on a little matter of business."

"I don't know whether we'll give him a week or not," said Bim playfully. "A great many things may happen to him in a week."

Harry was three years in the wilderness trying to regain his health. Success came to him in the last year of his banishment.

Toward the end of it he received a letter from Mr. Lincoln. It was written soon after that curious climax in the courting of Mary Todd. In this letter he said:

"I am serving my last term in the legislature. I learn that you are in better health and I hope that you will have the strength and inclination to return soon and be a candidate for my seat in the house. Samson will not do it, being so busy with large affairs. You are young. You have won distinction in the service of your country. You have studied the problems of the county and the state. Samson and Baker and Logan and Browning agree with me that you are the man for the place.

"As for myself, I am going to be married in a year or so. I shall have to give all my time to the practice of the law. I am now in partnership with Stephen T. Logan and am slowly clearing my conscience of debt. I have done what I could for the state and for Sangamon county. It hasn't been much. I want you to take up the burden, if you can, until I get free of my debts, at least. By and by I may jump into the ring again."

Harry was glad to obey the summons. Soon after the arrival of Mr. Lincoln's letter his doctor gave the young man what he called "an honorable discharge." The magic of youth and its courage and of good air had wrought a change of which the able doctor had had little hope in the beginning.

In his travels through the great forest Harry had met David Parish and Stephen Van Rensselaer, at whose homes he had spent many a happy summer day. Three years had passed since that fateful morning on the prairie. Through the winters he had lived in a comfortable hunter's camp on the shore of Lake Placid. Summers he had wandered with a guide and canoe through the lakes and rivers of the wilderness hunting and fishing and reading the law books which he had borrowed from Judge Fine of Ogdensburg. Each summer he worked down the Oswegatchie to that point for a visit with his new friends. The history of every week had been written to Bim and her letters had reached him at the points where he was wont to rest in his travels. The lovers had not lost their ardor. Theirs was the love "that hopes and endures and is patient."

On a day in June, 1841, he boarded a steamboat at Ogdensburg on his way to Chicago. He arrived in the evening and found Samson at the home of Bim and her mother—a capacious and well-furnished house on Dearborn street. Bim was then a little over twenty-five years old. A letter from John Wentworth says that she was "an exquisite bit of womanhood learned in the fine arts of speech and dress and manner."

The store had doubled in size under her management and with the help of the capital of Samson and Sarah Traylor. The epidemic had seized her toward the last of her nursing and left the marks of its scourge upon her. It had marred her beauty, but Samson writes, "the girl was still very handsome. She was kind of scared to meet Harry for fear of what he'd think of those little marks on her face, but I told her not to worry."

"You are the smartest and loveliest looking creature that I ever saw in my life," said Harry after he had held her in his arms a moment.

"But see what happened to me—look at my face," she answered.

"It is more beautiful than ever," he said. "Those marks have doubled my love for you. They are medals of honor better than this one that I wear. I want to marry you as soon as possible. I've been looking forward to that since I was sixteen."

"Then I think I'll take you and fight another duel."

"I don't hear anything but love and marriage," said Samson. "We've been ransacking down at our house to keep Josiah from running off and getting married. He's engaged already."

"Engaged! To whom?" Harry asked.

"To Annabel Brimstead. She's a little older than he is. She laughed at him and promised to marry him as soon as he was nominated for President by all his friends. She would now vote for him herself. He has become a good athlete and the best scholar in school. He has every boy and girl in the village working for him evenings and Saturdays."

"What are they doing?" Harry asked.

"Making those newfangled things they call lucifers. You can build a fire in a second with 'em. They cut splinters out of soft wood, dip their ends in brimstone—which Joe learned how to make—and put them in a hot oven until the brimstone is baked. Then a scratch will bring a flame. Joe puts them up in bundles and sells them to the merchants and calls them lucifer matches. He has invented a machine that will cut and dip a thousand splinters an hour. I tell you, Annabel is in danger."

He took a lucifer out of his pocket and scratched it on the bottom of his boot. The party looked with wonder at its flame which quickly consumed the slender thread of pine in his fingers.

"I have always thought that Joe would make a whale of a man," said Harry.

"We all seem to be threatened with immediate and overwhelming happiness," Bim exclaimed.

"The only thing in the way of mine is the national debt that I have accumulated," Harry remarked.

"I knew he'd think of something," said Bim ruefully. "If I wanted to abolish the noble institution of marriage I'd make him chairman of the ways and means committee."

"Harry, your credit is still good with me, and I'm prosperous," Samson began. "I want you to know that Bim's energy and skill are mostly responsible for my success. I guess we owe more to your sickness than you're aware of. If it hadn't been for that we would be plodding along at the same old pace. We would not have felt the need of speeding up. It was your misfortune that brought Bim into the store. If she wants to retire and marry you, I rather think she is entitled to do it. I don't want any more fooling around about this matter. Sarah and I couldn't stand it. She's kept me awake nights talking about it. The thing has worried us plenty. We rebel and demand action before anything else happens. We feel as if we had some rights in this case."

"I concede them and second your demand," Harry answered. "Bim must name a near day. I only need a week to get some clothes and go up to Milwaukee on a little matter of business."

"I don't know whether we'll give him a week or not," said Bim playfully. "A great many things may happen to him in a week."

Harry was three years in the wilderness trying to regain his health. Success came to him in the last year of his banishment.

Toward the end of it he received a letter from Mr. Lincoln. It was written soon after that curious climax in the courting of Mary Todd. In this letter he said:

"I am serving my last term in the legislature. I learn that you are in better health and I hope that you will have the strength and inclination to return soon and be a candidate for my seat in the house. Samson will not do it, being so busy with large affairs. You are young. You have won distinction in the service of your country. You have studied the problems of the county and the state. Samson and Baker and Logan and Browning agree with me that you are the man for the place.

"As for myself, I am going to be married in a year or so. I shall have to give all my time to the practice of the law. I am now in partnership with Stephen T. Logan and am slowly clearing my conscience of debt. I have done what I could for the state and for Sangamon county. It hasn't been much. I want you to take up the burden, if you can, until I get free of my debts, at least. By and by I may jump into the ring again."

Harry was glad to obey the summons. Soon after the arrival of Mr. Lincoln's letter his doctor gave the young man what he called "an honorable discharge." The magic of youth

Joseph Oklahombi: Choctaw War Hero

THE World war is not yet over—in the sense that the delving of the historian is ever bringing out details new and interesting. Ultimately, of course, full justice will be done to all phases of the great conflict; at present we are too close to it for clear perspective. One of the outstanding features of the World war was the part played by the American Indian. From one point of view there was no particular reason why the Indian should be eager to fight for the American government. On the other hand, the American Indian, by nature and training is a fighting man. The pursuits of the old-time Indian were war and the chase; the squaws did the work. And the white American, in his march across the continent, found in the American Indian the best natural fighter the world has ever known.

Anyway, the Indian volunteered with enthusiasm for the World war. The tribes sent over 17,000 braves to fight for the Stars and Stripes. They made good soldiers, more than 150 were decorated for acts of conspicuous valor in action.

It now appears that Joseph Oklahombi, twenty-six, a full-blooded Choctaw who lives near Wright City in McCurtain county, Oklahoma, is a war hero second only to Sergeant Alvin York of Tennessee. He was a private in Company D, One Hundred Forty-first Infantry, Thirty-sixth division, A. E. F. So far, however, his valor has not been recognized by the United States government.

Oklahombi was awarded recognition by General Petain of the French army. He wears the French Croix de Guerre. His exploit is as follows:

"Under a violent barrage dashed to the attack of the enemy position, covering 200 yards, through barbed wire entanglements. He rushed on machine gun nests, capturing 171 prisoners. He stormed a strongly held position containing a number of trench mortars, turned the captured guns on the enemy, and held said position for four days in spite of a constant barrage of large projectiles and gas shells. He crossed No-Ma's land many times to get information concerning his wounded comrades."

It is said that several attempts to secure a photograph of Oklahombi in uniform have been made by the War department through Gabe E. Parker, commissioner of the Five Civilized tribes. Then Czarina C. Conlan of Oklahoma City, "with all the pride and admiration another Indian has for a tribesman who has done daring deeds," decided that his portrait and some of his history should be preserved for Oklahoma's records. She says of her trip:

"Going to Idabel I found the secretary of the chamber of commerce getting out a pamphlet on the resources of McCurtain county, its interesting people and places. I told him by all means he should give some space to Oklahombi. All this sounded very well to him, but he could not speak the Choctaw language, and besides Oklahombi's home was 35 miles away over rough roads and across two streams. I told him I would get an interpreter, and the photographer. When we were ready to be off, the four men, including the driver, said they wanted me to know what to expect, for the roads were the worst in that part of the country. They were right.

"We had to go over almost impassable places. When we forded one of the streams the water ran into the engine of the car. At Little River we had to be ferried across in an old-fashioned ferryboat. The hill was so steep on the opposite shore that the men had to get out and push the car up the muddy embankment. After traveling the 35 miles we found that Oklahombi was not at home. He was, however, only a mile away at his uncle's farm, where he was helping to plant grain.

Sol Joel, the interpreter, volunteered to walk through the woods to the farm, get Oklahombi, and return with him to his home. After a time they came up smiling. The subject of our trip had been explained and Oklahombi was willing for me to take his picture in his uniform, and one of his home. And he was willing that his Croix de Guerre, his trench hat, and some of his other cherished relics should be placed in the State Historical museum."

Oklahombi (said to mean "Man-Killer") is twenty-six years old. He is a tall, brawny fellow, typical of his race. He returned, as he went to the army, a perfect specimen of manhood, having most miraculously escaped shot and shell.

He speaks English, but not very well. What he did over there is one of the last things he wants to talk about. When questioned about his experiences, his replies are invariably in as short sentences as possible.

His idea of settling the war was to annihilate the Germans as soon as possible.

When asked what he thought about the army he said: "Too much salute, not 'nough shoot."

When urged to tell something of his encounter with the Germans, the reply was "I sure give 'em hell!"

Oklahombi's comrades grew to expect him to kill every foe in sight. One day he brought a very large prisoner into camp. Being asked how it happened he said: "Well, I can take him back and kill him." This was told to the interpreter in his own language, and was the only incident that was got out of him.

He was raised in the mountainous part of the state, which is conceded to be the most beautiful section of Oklahoma. Here in his youth the clear streams that flowed through the Kiamita mountains were well filled with fish, and wild game roamed through the forests.

Such an environment was more appealing to him than the school room—consequently he has a very limited education. The only training he has was acquired at short intervals in old Armstrong academy near Caddo.

He married a full-blooded Choctaw girl before he enlisted in the army. When he went over seas he left his wife and a baby girl a few months old.

After he was mustered out it is no wonder he chose to go back to the beautiful old Indian settlement where he was wont to hunt and fish when a boy. A little cottage has been built on a small tract of land which he owns and is cultivating. Near the back door stands the ta-ful-la mortar.

"And now that the strife and turmoil is over," writes Czarina Conlan, "it is natural that he should want to return to the heart of nature, where he can look out in the cool of the evening and see the lengthening shadows of the old oak trees—trees that were in his ancestors' time when they came to the Indian territory in 1832."

Perhaps Oklahombi will get full recognition for his exploits in "The History of the American Indian in the World War," which is being written by Dr. Joseph K. Dixon, the leader of the Rodman Wanamaker historical expeditions to the North American Indians. In the course of which he visited every reservation in the country. He is the author of "The Vanishing Race," and the secretary of the National American Indian Memorial association. Between February, 1919, and February, 1920, he visited systematically all the camps and military hospitals on the Atlantic seaboard, interviewing officers and privates, studying, interrogating and photographing Indian soldiers who had returned, either sound or wounded, from overseas.

And now, as his final act of preparation for his historical work, Doctor Dixon has returned from an intimate four months' study of the entire western battlefronts of Belgium and France, in which he covered more than 3,500 miles of travel and took more than 1,100 photographs. Before he started he had been supplied by General Pershing with a large map, which showed that American Indians had fought in every one of the twenty-eight main battle sectors from the North sea to the Alps.

Oklahombi, it is reported, will be featured by Doctor Dixon in his book. Another of his Indian war heroes is Corporal Walter S. Sevilla, a Chipewya Indian of the Seventh engineers, Fifth division, upon whose breast Marshal Petain himself pinned the Croix de Guerre. Sevilla swam the Meuse, carrying a cable for a pontoon, under heavy machine gun fire. Later in the day he was severely wounded while repeating the same feat in the swimming of the broad and swiftly flowing Est canal, which parallels the Meuse, near Breutelles.

like the spitting of electric sparks. The shell contains a tiny grub, working for release. In many towns collections of the eggs are on exhibition. When laid on a table these eggs bound about and spring into the air, sometimes to a height of 16 inches. They are particularly active in the early morning.

Why Coins Are Milled.

The milling round the edges of coins. B. K. (Woolwich), was introduced just over two centuries ago in this country. Previous to that time quite a number of people made a considerable income by filing a little piece off each gold and silver coin that passed through their hands. Things became so bad that coins often lost a quarter of their weight within a few months of issue. Even the strictest laws and the most terrible punishments failed to stop the practice, and our coinage became hopelessly debased. Milling coins put an end to it at once, for you cannot clip or file a milled piece without giving the show away.

The daughters of the Martius family were called Marcia. Another spelling was Marsia. Reaching France, the name became Martie and of late years when Marcia returned to vogue she was used as the feminine of Mark.

Martina is another form of Marcia, the original Martina being one of the young Roman girls who endured the fiery trial of martyrdom under Zim-peror Decius. For some reason which history does not explain in the maiden-fern became identified with her and its prevalence in Roman gardens

Dough in Watch-Making

Two barrels of flour, or almost 400 pounds, are used every week in making watches at a well-known factory in New England, which turns out from 2,000 to 3,000 watches a week. Since a baker uses about three pounds of flour to five loaves of bread, it follows that for every watch the maker uses the equivalent of almost a third of a loaf. The flour is made into dough, and the dough is used to handle the screws, rivets and other small parts. Each man in that part of the business has a lump of dough always at hand; and when he wants to examine a screw he jabs the piece of dough on it. Then, turning it over, he has a good chance to look at it with his watchmaker's microscopic eyeglass. Many of the screws are too minute to pick up easily with the fingers, and many more, though large enough to be picked up, would be so covered by the fingers or the forceps as to be almost hidden from sight.

KITTEN'S NEW HAT.

MISS KITTEN could hardly wait for Sunday, so proud was she of her new hat, and she was quite sure she would not only be envied by all the other Pusses, but she would also be the handsomest Puss at church.

Miss Kitten had been working a long time collecting the trimmings for her hat and I am sorry to tell you that it was trimmed with wings and feathers.

Yes, Miss Kitten was not a friend of the pretty little bird that lived near her home and she had feathers of all colors with which to trim her hat, which proved how naughty she had been.

On Sunday she was up early, and as soon as her house was in order off she tripped dressed in her new hat for church.

It happened that she had to pass through the woods and Willy Bluejay, who was sitting on a limb of a tree near the road, saw Miss Kitten. "Chatter, chatter, chatter!" said Will, which meant in bird language, "You thief, you thief!"

"What's in a Name?"

Facts about your name: its history, meaning, whence it was derived, significance, your lucky day and lucky jewel

By MILDRED MARSHALL

MARCIA.

MARCIA has an ancient origin. In early Rome there was a famous gens of Sabine origin which gave a king to Rome and was called Martius. Martius in turn is said to come from Marcus, a name about which there is much contention among etymologists. However, the consensus of opinion seems to be that it was derived from Mars, the war god, and one of the chief of the old Latin deities.

Had Good Brakes.

Master Robert Morton is three years old and lives at Otwell, Ind. One evening he was watching his father milk the cow. Annoyed beyond endurance by the flees, the cow finally kicked over the milk pail and headed for the pasture.

Robert's father ran to head off the cow with the result that she stopped quite as suddenly as she started. That felt pleased Robert and he called excitedly: "Gee, dad, she's got good 'brakes, ain't she?"—Indianapolis News.

And off flew Willy Bluejay to tell all the birds in the woods that Miss Kitten was coming dressed in her new hat trimmed with the wings and feathers of their relatives.

When Miss Kitten reached the middle of the woods there on the trees and bushes, out of her reach, of course, sat hundreds of birds, chattering like mad.

"You're a thief, you wicked cat!" they shrieked at her, "you killed our children, you killed our mother, you killed our father, you killed our sister and you killed our brother."

At first Miss Kitten did not notice them, but as she walked along they flew over her, still screaming.

Just before she reached the end of the path out of the woods down flew Willy Bluejay and picked off a feather from her hat.

Seeing his darling, Tommie Sparrow grew bold and down he swooped and took the hat right off Miss Kitten's head.

"Pick out her eyes! Pick out her eyes!" cried all the other birds, flying around her, until Miss Kitten was so scared she ran.

But the birds followed, screaming and flapping their wings, and at last Miss Kitten had to take refuge under some old boards and stay there until dark.

Then out she crept, all her vanity gone, and never again did she bother the birds or have the least wish to trim her Sunday hat with feathers.

THE YOUNG MAN GUEST

Life is not so short but that there is always room for courtesy—Emerson.

STRICTLY speaking the invitation bidding a young man to be the guest of a household should come from the mother or wife, or whoever acts as hostess of that household. Actually one young man often invites a chum of his to be a guest for a day or two, and the mother does not send the letter of invitation that the strictest good form would demand. There is no great crime in this, only the young man who writes the invitation should word it so as to make it evident that his mother extends the hospitality, and in answering the invitation the one invited should be sure to bear this fact in mind and whether he has met the hostess-to-be or not he should express his gratitude to her for her kindness in wishing him to be a guest.

If you have visited in the house before it is courteous to take to your hostess, or have sent, so that it reaches her shortly before you do, with your card enclosed, a few flowers or some bonbons.

Never smoke without gaining permission of your hostess. If there are no other smokers in the family do not ask for permission.

If you see that others make a habit of smoking in the house then you may ask for permission to smoke even though none of the others are smoking at the time.

Do not plan to accept outside invitations or to leave the house when you are a guest without consulting your hostess. She may have something arranged for the same day and hour. If you are to have very important business engagements that cannot be broken during your visit you should make the fact known at once so that no plans will be made for the time involved.

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

Remember that while you are the guest of the family you should show many little courteous attentions to the women of that family. If there are young daughters it would be decidedly rude to devote yourself markedly to some other young woman whom you are especially interested in, unless in the young women of the family where you are visiting.

Remember that it is just as important and necessary for the young man to write a bread-and-butter letter to his hostess as it is for a young woman to do. This letter should be written within one or two days of your departure. A married man may leave this to his wife to attend to but the unmarried man must write for himself, even though perhaps he has a sister who has been a guest of the same household and is willing to include his expression of gratitude in her note.

CLOGGED BLOOD WITHERS THE BODY.

Workers Sick and Weak From Exertion Take Gude's Pepto-Mangan.

Men and women who toil, either physically or mentally, use up energy. When they overwork they use up more energy, and sometimes the blood gets in a run-down condition. Without rest the blood cannot get back to normal, so that it becomes clogged with waste matter from over-exertion.

The clogged blood virtually withers the body. The strained looks on pale faces, the thin, bloodless arms, the sunken cheeks and necks, the deadened feeling, are the results of stale blood depriving the system of life-giving oxygen.

Workers go to the drug store and get Gude's Pepto-Mangan when they feel weak and run down. They take it in either the liquid or the tablet form. That makes the blood rich and red and drives out the poisons. Life-giving oxygen, carried by the little red cells, renews the strength and builds up the entire system. Look for the name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" on the package. Advertisement.

MARCIA has an ancient origin. In early Rome there was a famous gens of Sabine origin which gave a king to Rome and was called Martius. Martius in turn is said to come from Marcus, a name about which there is much contention among etymologists. However, the consensus of opinion seems to be that it was derived from Mars, the war god, and one of the chief of the old Latin deities.

Had Good Brakes.

Master Robert Morton is three years old and lives at Otwell, Ind. One evening he was watching his father milk the cow. Annoyed beyond endurance by the flees, the cow finally kicked over the milk pail and headed for the pasture.

Robert's father ran to head off the cow with the result that she stopped quite as suddenly as she started. That felt pleased Robert and he called excitedly: "Gee, dad, she's got good 'brakes, ain't she?"—Indianapolis News.

The Land of Wonders.

Shasta county, California, is the land of wonders. The latest is the dancing egg. It is laid by an as yet undetermined insect on the leaves of oak trees. Masses of these eggs cling to the under side of the leaf and as they advance toward maturity they drop to the ground and dance about. By holding an oak twig containing any number of eggs to one's ear a crackling sound may be heard.

"Crepuscular Rays."

The beams of light sometimes seen radiating from the sun when not far from the horizon are called "crepuscular rays." They are due to rays of light passing through breaks in the clouds and made visible by dust or fine drops of water in the air. Their apparent divergence is an effect of perspective. The phenomenon is popularly described as "the sun drawing water." Sailors speak of the "sun's back-stays," while Homer wrote of the "rosy-fingered dawn."

GREATEST MOTHER ON EARTH, GREATEST MANAGER

She Makes Every Red Cross Dollar Give a Good Account of Itself

No one can make a dollar go further than the Greatest Mother in the World!

Stretching the 100 cents she receives annually from each of her sons and daughters until nations and peoples in all parts of the earth feel her merciful touch, she sets a shining example in thrift.

Additional proof of her remarkable ability to find something in the cupboard to meet every appeal, no matter whence it may come, was evidenced recently in the announcement that she had contributed $1,250,000 for relief of the starving millions in China; $700,000 in medical and surgical supplies for famine-stricken Russia; $100,000 to the committee of distinguished Americans gathering money for the aid of homeless women and children in Ireland; $250,000 to help the thousands made destitute by the disastrous flood at Pueblo, Colo.

Dollar membership fees, to a considerable extent, make possible the humane and the educational work of the world.

From the moment it starts on its errand of mercy, knowing no sect, color or creed, the chief thought of those directing its course is that full value shall be received for every penny. That this aim is more than achieved is manifest when one considers the loyal army of volunteer Red Cross workers contributing their time and labor to Red Cross activities, thus giving the Red Cross its strength and high attainable by the ordinary dollar.

The life story of the Red Cross dollar will undoubtedly be interesting to many Red Cross members. In brief it follows:

Fifty cents of every dollar membership is retained by the Chapter which collects it. That half dollar remains right in the local community and is used by the Red Cross Chapter to promote useful activities which may include: Helping the disabled fighting men and their families, always the prime obligation of the Red Cross; co-operation with the authorities in fighting disease and making the community a healthier place in which to live; teaching first aid in factories, schools or railroad yards; teaching home hygiene and nursing, care of the sick and proper selection of foods; making over worn garments for the needy children of their own community and for the destitute children of Europe; financing and assisting a public health nurse in keeping the community well; making the community ready for disaster emergencies; co-operating with other organizations for the development of a better community spirit.

Foreign Relief

The remaining 50 cents is forwarded to National Red Cross Headquarters in Washington. This part of the dollar travels farthest, for, in conjunction with funds composed of voluntary contributions, it is at once put to work relieving distress in many parts of the world, teaching health rules and sanitation and establishing or helping to establish hospitals in others, helping to welfare organizations and government agencies everywhere the benefits of the organization's vast experience with human problems. Upwards of twenty-five European countries have received help in varying degrees from the American Red Cross since the armistice. In a number of these countries the organization is still active to the extent of providing medical treatment for millions of sickly and nourished children.

In addition to its work overseas, of the second 50 cents is kept in the United States rendering services to the thousands of distressed in hospitals, to the able-bodied, sailors and marines in camps, to the families of those who it provides the fund which is immediately available for relief work in case of explosions, forest fires, tornadoes and other disasters; it makes possible the close co-operation with the Federal Public Health Service and the strengthening of the country's nursing resources.

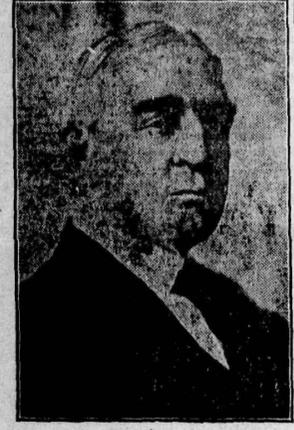

By this time the dollar is all but exhausted as a result of its world-wide activity.

Statisticians who have trailed it say it is something less than 4 cents at the end of its journey.

It is this three and a fraction that pays all the management expenses of the American Red Cross.

Where There's a Will, There's a Way

It got to get up every morning in the morning if you are going to get up at night with any satisfaction.

JOHN BARTON PAYNE,
New Chairman of the Central Committee of the American Red Cross.

NEWS OF THE BAZAAR, AND

CONTRIBUTORS

Anyone in town or distant towns, reading this paper, wishing to have a part in our Bazaar and supper by contributions of any kind, it will be greatly appreciated. This affair is for the benefit of the Coping fund and other cemetery improvements.

We were pleased and encouraged by a young matron living in our suburbs saying, she did not suppose she would be called on, living so far out of town, but wished to help and both she and her mother-in-law subscribed generously. They had read about the Bazaar in the Beacon and wished to do their part.

The Bazaar will be held November 17, 18 and 19, Supper on the 19th, for which tickets are now on sale at 75c. Good supper, ice cream and cake included. At the Masonic Hall, corner Church and Wood streets.

Customers like to come to the ARCOLA-warmed Store

ARCOLA is the most perfect heating plant yet developed for making the store, the restaurant, the garage, the detached office and the shop more inviting to the customer.

People dislike to enter a store made stuffy by a hot-air furnace or old-fashioned stoves. ARCOLA, connected with American Radiators, fills every corner with healthful, hot-water warmth—the same perfect warmth which our larger heating plants supply to larger stores, office buildings and factories.

You must see ARCOLA: it is so different. Not a stove once.

The red and yellow card at the right is the sign of a Heating or Sanitary Engineer (you used to call him Steamfitter or Plumber) who can show you ARCOLA. Look for it in his window. It will pay you to consult him twice a year as you do your Doctor or Dentist. To have him examine and report on your heating and plumbing costs little. It may save you a great deal.

Customers like to come to the ARCOLA-warmed Store

ARCOLA is the most perfect heating plant yet developed for making the store, the restaurant, the garage, the detached office and the shop more inviting to the customer.

People dislike to enter a store made stuffy by a hot-air furnace or old-fashioned stoves. ARCOLA, connected with American Radiators, fills every corner with healthful, hot-water warmth—the same perfect warmth which our larger heating plants supply to larger stores, office buildings and factories.

You must see ARCOLA: it is so different. Not a stove once.

The red and yellow card at the right is the sign of a Heating or Sanitary Engineer (you used to call him Steamfitter or Plumber) who can show you ARCOLA. Look for it in his window. It will pay you to consult him twice a year as you do your Doctor or Dentist. To have him examine and report on your heating and plumbing costs little. It may save you a great deal.
