Ocean County Society of Philadelphia Will Hold First Annual Outing July 15th. Beach Haven and Long Beach Will Co-Operate in Making It a Big Ocean County Day.

The Ocean County Society of Philadelphia has set the date of their first annual outing for Saturday, July 15th, and the place will be Beach Haven with headquarters at the Engle-side Hotel.

This society, although not a year old, has 650 members. It is under the leadership of Lafayette Taylor, a former Cedar Run resident, and has already gained a wide reputation for doing things.

Their first annual banquet was held at the Adelphia Hotel last winter and was attended by residents from nearly every section of Ocean County. More than 800 people attended a theatre party held by the society last week.

The outing planned for July 15th will be known as Ocean County day and all residents of the county will be invited to attend and with the co-operation of the Long Beach Board of Trade and Beach Haven officials it will be a great day.

Mr. Taylor has informed the Beach that the Society will come from Philadelphia in a special train and will make brief stops at Barnegat and Manahawkin. They will be accompanied by a big band.

A. J. Cattell, the noted speaker, who addressed the society at the annual dinner, has promised to accompany the party. Governor Runyon and other noted speakers are expected, particulars of which will be given in another issue.

PRESBYTERIAN GENERAL ASSEMBLY NEWS

Local Presbyterians will be represented at Des Moines, Iowa, today when the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church will hold its annual session. This is the highest judicial and legislative body of the church and numbers about 900 men, half lay and half clerical.

Each Presbytery is entitled to a minimum of two delegates, with more in proportion to the membership of the churches of presbytery.

In accordance with the action of the General Assembly a year ago a special committee, headed by Dr. John Timothy Stone of Chicago, this year will bring in a report planning to reorganize all the 18 boards and agencies through which the national and international work of the church is done. It is expected that this report will suggest a radical reduction in the number of boards. If the report is adopted, it will constitute the most marked change in organization this church has ever had.

PURPOSE

This bank has one unalterable purpose—and that purpose, we hope, is your purpose—to help this County realize its maximum prosperity in such a way that all may share it

A bank is like a great power house. When it throws in the clutch, gets the community point of view, and goes out to accomplish things it becomes a great generator of public good. Thousands of people here have caught the spirit of this bank—have discovered that it is a public spirited institution with a public service Program. They have come in with their deposits so that we could work together. If you aren't one of them of course you will be sometime. That's why this is directed to you—we want your co-operation.

CEMETERY FENCE HAS BEEN SHIPPED

Letter from President of W. T. I. & C. Association

Tuckerton, N. J., ay 15, 1922. The last call to you is this letter, through the columns of the Tuckerton Beacon, that you may have a share and part in the new iron fence which is to be erected at Greenwood Cemetery. The committee has gone over the list of lot owners and find there are still a number of lot owners who have not responded, also a number who have stated they expect to own a lot in the cemetery and would contribute to the fence. We hope to hear from all of these. We feel you would regret not to have part in this enterprise and the committee feels sure that in a large number of cases, it has been due to neglect, for you have and do, intend to be a part owner in this fence. So, we ask you to act today, do not delay, but send your contribution to Jennie N. Pharo, Sec-Treas., who has kept you well informed of the very kind letters we have received and the contributors up to date, some of whom have given the second time, so well pleased are they with the project.

We have, at considerable expense, cleaned off the plot of ground owned by the Borough, known as the Potter's Field. Those who labored at this work very kindly gave us several days' work free of charge. We thank them. In this plot of ground there are some who had no one to care for them. Let us do our best to keep this part of the Cemetery clean of all rubbish waste paper, tin cans, etc. Some "Mother's boy" lies here perhaps far away from the home hearth. We have been very fortunate in receiving a gift of 15 feet of ground on Green street, south of the old Cemetery for a driveway, 465 feet deep, from Messrs. J. W. Horner and Raymond Jones. This much needed driveway will be found a very great convenience to the Cemetery grounds and we thank these gentlemen very kindly for their gift.

Friends, we need your financial aid for any contribution helps make the enterprise a success and after all, it belongs to no one in particular but to each and every lot owner and this work just makes the resting place of our loved ones a much more respectable place for you and me to visit from time to time. We know and feel sure you will do your part—then we all can feel justly proud of this fence and it will add dignity and attractiveness to our borough, because of our civic pride.

We are now assured that the fence has been shipped and we hope that it will arrive in a very few days, possibly before the Beacon goes to press. We are grateful to all who have encouraged and cheered us in this work and we trust that it will always give the committee a pleasant thought of the effort to make this enterprise a success.

Yours very truly,
(Mrs. S. N.) Margaret Lippincott,
Chairman of Committee.

MEMORIAL DAY PREPARATIONS COMING ON NICELY

Preparations for the celebration of Memorial Day (May 30th) in Tuckerton are nearing completion. The attractions will be sufficient to draw a large number from out of town as well as those at home.

A parade in the morning, including the G. A. R., the American Legion, Lodges and School children will decorate the graves of all veterans.

The work on the big new park and grandstand is going forward at a rapid rate and is nearly finished. Two games of ball, one between Tuckerton High School and Barnegat and one between Tuckerton Regulars and Hammonton will be played. The announcement that "Bumps" Ireland, "Skinny" Somers, Fred Brown and others will be in the line-up makes the attraction greater.

The Cemetery Fence has been shipped and the man in charge of erecting it is now on the grounds and expects to have it completed so that he can return by Memorial Day.

The American Band from Hammonton will be here and render music all day.

The Civic Association will serve dinner and supper at the Town Hall. In the evening a Movie Show "The Sheik," advertised in this issue, will be given in the Palace Theatre.

APPLEBY AFTER NEW LIFE BOAT FOR THE BARNEGAT CITY STATION

The inadequate equipment of the United States Coast Guard Station at Barnegat City has been the subject of frequent comment, and Congressman T. Frank Appleby has been endeavoring for some time to secure a more modern boat for its use. A few weeks ago at the solicitation of Senator Harry T. Hagaman he again took up the matter with the Treasury Department, and in filing a memorandum for the Department's consideration, stated:

"To my personal knowledge this Station has probably more to do than almost any other Station along the coast. It is the round up of a half hundred bank skiff fishermen who for six months of the year go to sea every day and there are times when for a straight month this Station is called upon daily to put out to help some of them who cannot weather the sea, have broken down, or many other things impossible just now to enumerate. It is only now and then that it is possible to get a big life boat out of the harbor and the smaller boat which they have to use is in no wise adapted to this work. Even while on a rescue mission the element of danger is very great because of lack of equipment. What they really need and would like to have is a surf boat that is built at Baltimore of the self-bailing kind with a twenty horse power Kermath engine. The cost of the entire outfit, I understand, does not exceed $1500, and it seems to me the Government should be willing to appropriate that much for this particular crew. Having considerable personal knowledge of the splendid work being done at this Station, I would deem it a personal favor if such equipment could be added at this time that they may not be handicapped in any way in performing the dangerous duties required of them from day to day."

To Congressman Appleby's great gratification he is just in receipt of a letter from the office of the Commandant of the U. S. Coast Guard advising that the matter of inadequate equipment of the Barnegat City Station as presented by him had been given the attention which it deserved, and they were pleased to state "that it is expected to send a new surf boat to this Station about July first."

SIMPLE COTTON FROCKS; PRETTY ORGANDIE DRESS

SPRING comes graciously along with an array of pretty morning frocks calculated to turn the heads of all women. They are beautifully and simply designed, of printed and other cottons and they justify the allegiance that American women have shown to them for generations. Designers seem to have outdone themselves in the cleverness and variety of these cheerful, everyday dresses, and the best thing of all is that every woman can have them; alluring materials for making them are broadcast everywhere.

The minds of those who must see to the outfitting of the younger generation for its glorious summer. Everywhere in the stores there is almost no end of pretty cotton goods that entice the designers of children's clothes to make the most of their gifts. All the old favorites are here, some of them in new patterns, and the choice of fabrics is wide enough. Lawn, dimity, organdie, English prints, chambray, cotton crepe, gingham, and twill make up the bulk of little folks' outerwear.

past generation. One of the frocks shown here is of this material with a cross-bar in gray and white that sets off the gay sprays of shaded, pink flowers scattered over it. Dresses of such cotton fabrics must not be "fussy"; this one is, as it should be, simple and conservative, a chemise model gathered in on a loose removable elastic belt, at a low waistline. Patch pockets, cut on the bias of the goods, are extended at the sides into bands that form supports for the narrow belt, made also of a bias strip of the goods. The belt ties at the back and has sash ends. The collar bor-leal of summer styles. It is short-waisted and short-sleeved with a round neck slit about three inches down the front. The skirt portion has three wide bands of organdie, bound with a checked pattern in organdie, set on, and this same binding finishes the neck and sleeves. A similar band conceals the joining of the body and skirt. Colored cotton floss serves to make the needlework rings that are set on the sleeves and neck and they are used as a finish for the bands. The dress is pictured in white with red and white trimming, but it might be made in any light color with suit-

Capes for Children.
Capes are as popular for outer coverings for children as they are for grownups. Silk collars and ribbon ties end on those of cloth are for dress-up wear, while the practical models include light-weight sport plaids in light, gay colors, with buttons and strap trimmings. Some of the capes are lined, white others are merely bound, either with braid, ribbon or contrasting colored cloth. ## STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE MADE IN OLD-FASHIONED WAY IS PLEASING Individual Shortcakes Are Attractive in Appearance and Easy to Serve.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Perfect strawberry shortcake, made at home in the simple old-fashioned way, is more tempting than the most elaborate concoctions of bakers or hotel chefs. "Biscuit shortcake, by all means," is the masculine verdict; a little "shorter" than usual, perhaps, the housewife may decide, but otherwise simply biscuit dough, the lightest and best she knows how to produce, topped off with luscious whole berries, whipped cream, icing, or egg whites.

Double Instead of Split Biscuits.
Individual shortcakes are attractive in appearance and easy to serve. The dough may be cut out with a very large biscuit cutter or made into squares. Instead of splitting one large cooked biscuit, two thinner rounds of dough may be baked together, if the lower one is first buttered to enable the cook to slip them apart.

The strawberries, after washing and hulling, may be cut in halves and sprinkled with sugar shortly before the biscuit dough is made. A few perfect whole berries should be saved to decorate the top layer. The others should be merely cut, not crushed nor mutilated.

Hull and trim a few at a time, drop for a moment only into a bowl of clean, cold water, so that the sand sinks to the bottom while the fruit floats on top, then skim off into a colander to drain dry. If a whole quart of hulled berries is turned into a pan of water some of the berries become soft and lose their fine flavor before the entire quantity can be rinsed and taken out. The sand from the upper ones often settles on those beneath. The same is true when any fruit or vegetable is merely put in a colander and thrust under running water.

Putting the shortcake together at serving-time is a matter of individual preference. The dessert will be excellent if it merely consists of the split, buttered biscuit covered in the center and on top with berries from which the fragrant juice is beginning to spread. Whipped cream, sweetened and flavored with vanilla, is perhaps the most quickly prepared finish for the shortcake. If there is plenty of cream on hand, beaten egg-whites, sweetened as for a meringue, make an admirable substitute for cream.

and are preferred by many who think the whipped cream too rich. Another method is to use white cake icing, putting on each half of the cake first a layer of icing, then a layer of strawberries, and last a generous coat of icing.

Shortcake Not Merely a Dessert.
Strawberry shortcake for breakfast, made with or without plain cream, makes a delicious variant of the ordinary diet. With it should be served either a glass of milk or a dish of cottage cheese to make it a more complete meal. This is an ideal breakfast or lunch for children, as well as a very satisfactory change for Sunday night supper.

A shortcake of any description is so hearty a dessert that a somewhat lighter meal than usual should precede it. When there is a scant portion of potato or rice, some precooked meat to use up, or a meatless meal to consider, strawberry shortcake is an appropriate dessert. It should never be planned as the end of a long, heavy dinner, when the appetite has been fully satisfied before the sweet course is reached.

Any good biscuit rule may be used. The recipes given below have been tested by food specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture:

Biscuit Dough for Shortcakes.
1 pint flour. 2-3 to 3-4 cupful sugar.
4 teaspoonfuls bak- milk.
ing powder. 4 to 5 tablespoonfuls % teaspoonful salt. fat.

Sift the dry ingredients. Work in the fat with the tips of the fingers. Use enough milk to ensure a rather soft dough that may be patted flat rather than rolled. Bake in a fairly hot oven.

Icing for Shortcake.
Put into the upper part of a double boiler—
1 cupful granulated egg white.
sugar.
4 tablespoonfuls cold water.

When the water underneath is boiling, begin to beat with a Dover egg beater until the frosting takes definite shape, when the beater is lifted. Take from the fire and add one-eighth teaspoonful salt and one-teaspoonful of vanilla or other flavoring. Continue beating until firm enough to spread without running.

PRESERVE CHERRIES FOR USE IN WINTER

Unpitted Fruit Presents Most Attractive Appearance.

Department of Agriculture Gives Directions for Proper Canning of Delicious Edible—Be Careful of Rubber Rings.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Sweet white and large black cherries are usually canned unpitted, but acid cherries ordinarily are pitted before canning. Unpitted cherries present a more attractive appearance, and many like the flavor the pit gives to the product. The following directions for canning this delicious fruit are given by the United States Department of Agriculture:

If cherries are to be canned whole, plunge them for 20 to 30 seconds in hot water. This prevents splitting. A sirup for sweet cherries may be made of 3½ pounds of sugar to 4 quarts of water. Pack cherries, whether pitted or unpitted, to within one-half inch of top in jars which have been boiled 15 minutes. Fill jar with sirup and put on rubber, which has been for 15 minutes in a solution made from 1 tablespoonful of soda and 1 quart of boiling water. Remove top from water in which it boiled for 15 minutes and place on jar. Partially seal jar. (With glass top can, put one ball in place. With screw top jar, screw halfway on.)

If steam-pressure cooker is used, place jars in cooker and process quart jars 25 minutes. When a commercial hot-water bath canner or a home-made one is used, place the jars (after partially sealing) in the canner on a false bottom. Water should cover the jars. Do not start counting time until the water is boiling. Process quart jars for 20 minutes. When processing is finished, remove jars, complete sealing, test for leaks, and store in cool, dry place. If the jar leaks, remove rubber and put on new wet one and process 15 minutes more.

Cereal Cartons.
Save your cereal cartons in which to store quart and pint cans of fruit, berries, cherries, tomatoes, etc., that bleach when exposed to light. The boxes keep the cans from dust and help to preserve the contents.

Table Protection.
A piece of waxed paper placed under the centerpiece on a polished table will prevent the linen from adhering to the table in hot weather, as well as prevent a stain from cold water from an over-filled vase.

ABOUT VEGETABLES

Be sure you get a hard, heavy head of cabbage with crisp, white leaves and with the stalk cut close to the head.

Choose beets with dirty roots and fresh green leaves. This shows they have not been soaked to freshen them.

Winter squash should have no soft spots. Choose a medium sized one; the larger ones are seedy.

Cauliflower should be firm and white with fresh green leaves. Be sure that onions are hard and firm.

Buy the small carrots. Choose spinach with leaves fresh and dirty. If clean, they have wilted and been soaked to revive them.

All Around the House

In most English meat pies, sage has much to do with the savoriness.

A teaspoonful of salt will season a quart of vegetable soup.

To renovate a worn stair carpet, apply a good dye to the worn spots with a brush.

Beat cocoa with a Dover egg beater just before serving, and scum will not form on the cups.

The marks on your highly polished table, such as those made by heat, will yield to paraffin. Rub it on with a soft cloth.

Earthenware and stoneware heat evenly, are less noisy in use than metals, and are excellent for mixing bowls and baking dishes.

Just now, when apples are plentiful and fairly cheap, the home caterer should use them in preference to other and more expensive fruits.

Lamb is especially good in summer. It is as nutritious as beef or mutton, easy to digest and less heating than the fatter meats.

Sponge a black silk umbrella with strong tea, well sweetened. The tea restores the color of the fabric and the sugar stiffens it.

HAS FIRST WELL DAY IN 6 YEARS

Huntington Citizen Could Neither Sleep Nor Eat With Any Satisfaction Before He Got Tanlac.

"Before taking Tanlac I had not seen a well day in six years," said W. R. Peoples, 328 22nd St., Huntington, W. Va.

"It seemed like I had lost my health for good. I could neither sleep nor eat with satisfaction. I was badly run down, nervous, had no appetite and had to force down every mouthful I ate. Even then my food soured. I would fill up with gas until I had intense pains in my stomach and chest. Headache almost drove me mad, rheumatism in my arms, shoulder and hips kept me in pain all the time, and I had to force myself to work."

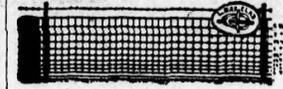

"Tanlac went right after my troubles. On four bottles I gained ten pounds and the rheumatism and stomach trouble soon left me. My wife has given a statement about the good Tanlac did her, and I am glad to add my endorsement of this wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

MATTER OF PROPERTY RIGHT

Negro Had His Own Good Reasons for Bestowing Care on His Headgear.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge said in a recent address in Cambridge: "Communism has proved its worthlessness in Russia. After Russia no tub-thumper will ever say again that private property is a mistake and it is better for us that everything should be owned in common."

"Private property! Why, that is one of our most hereditary instincts. A Southern planter once gave an old top hat of his to one of his slaves. He saw the slave returning from church the next Sunday in a rain-storm. The slave's head was bare. Rain bent on it and dripped from it in torrents. As for the top hat, he carried it carefully sheltered under his coat."

"Washington," called the planter, "why don't you protect your head from the rain instead of protecting that worthless old hat?"

"Wash chuckled.
"Boss, man," he called back, "hit's like dish-yere. Mah haid belong ter you, but de ole hat's mah own."—Detroit Free Press.

For 33 years he has occupied this hut from spring to autumn. For many years he has been the watcher of the Society for the Protection of Birds. Edwardson's long vigil in the absolute loneliness of hills, sky and sea, has been well rewarded. The stock of birds has increased notably, especially the skuas, great northern divers, fulmars and golden plover, while there are new colonies of gannets on the cliffs. The birds know the watcher, and the skuas even come to the door of his hut for food when they find it reopened each spring.

Help was scarce, and the packers had to be treated with great care to keep them from walking out. The foreman of the big apple-packing house had suffered almost all he could stand. "Here, you!" cried the foreman, glad to relieve his feelings on some one. "Cut that out. Put that paper back!" The girl's eyes grew larger as she meekly laid the paper on the table; but she kept them fixed on him, unabashed. "Put it on the shelf where it belongs," he ordered. She did so and with her wide eyes still fixed on his said gently, "You don't have to speak kind like that to me. I ain't sick or nothing."—Youth's Companion.

SUPERIORITY OF PUREBRED LIVE STOCK SHOWN BY RECENT INQUIRY

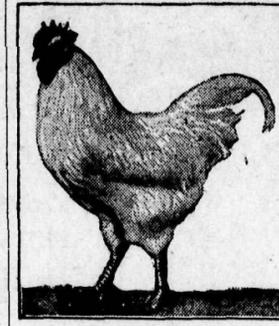

(By D. S. Burch, Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture.)

Purebred live stock has about 40 per cent greater earning power (apart from its breeding or sale value) than scrub stock.

The superiority of purebreds on a utility basis is due principally to: Better conformation and quality, increased production, more economical production, and earlier maturity.

When purebred sires are used to improve farm live stock the offspring is more salable than that of non-purebred sires and brings nearly 50 per cent greater returns.

The foregoing are a few results of a recent inquiry conducted by the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The figures are based on about 25,000 head of breeding stock owned by 525 experienced live-stock owners. Besides, the same persons own 80,000 fowls on which the poultry results are based. All of these stockmen have for several years—an average of nine—used purebred sires to head their herds and flocks. More than that, about 30 per cent of their female stock has been prompted him to acquire purebreds was the need for more income. He reasoned that ownership of purebreds was not the proverbial wealthy man's diversion, but the poor man's necessity. He obtained the best foundation stock within his means and gave it good care; it increased his returns 100 per cent.

While there are numerous similar cases and frequent greater successes, the general averages mentioned are presented as the best indication of profits to be reasonably expected. Briefly, good purebreds are more efficient than other stock, but their earning power in each case depends on two chief factors—(1) Their own quality, and (2) the human factor, especially skill in management. The evidence gathered by the Department shows that live-stock owners are becoming more and more insistent on records of production as a means of distinguishing desirable purebreds from those of less merit.

The inquiry shows that for the most part purebred animals of good type are readily obtainable. But special requirements or a desire for the less common breeds generally involve some difficulties and higher prices.

About 98 per cent of the purebred live-stock owners reporting to the Department were satisfied both with the purebreds themselves and the progeny, except when they expressed the desire for still better stock. As one breeder explained, the desire for improvement is necessary for progress. A few had unfortunate experience with purebreds of inferior quality and pointed out the need for making selections with great care. Practically all reports agreed on the principle that superior quality among purebreds themselves is invariably worth a higher cost.

Numerous sidelights on the raising of improved live stock under practical farm conditions and through different periods, including last year's period of depression, have been obtained from purebred. A small proportion of the remaining females are scrubs, the others being grades and crossbreds. Thus the persons furnishing the Department with their experiences were in a position to supply dependable information.

Figures Are Conservative. The figures mentioned were obtained during the last part of 1921 in a period of marked depression in the live-stock industry. Partly for that reason they are considered conservative even though pointing to an unusually high value of purebreds over common stock.

The purpose of obtaining this new information was to supply an increasing demand for facts of greater scope than single short-time observations. With the development of the Federal-State campaign for "Better Sires—Better Stock" the Department has received an unusually large number of requests asking what purebreds can do for the man who does not aspire to become a specialized breeder.

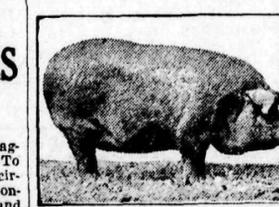

"What can I expect from purebred sires, or from both purebred sires and dams, as a utility proposition?" That is essentially what scores of thoughtful people want to know.

Superiority of Purebreds. The superiority, based on utility, of purebred over common stock is evident from the following figures:

Class	Superior Earning Power	Per cent
Dairy Cattle	.....	47.8
Poultry	.....	47.8
Swine	.....	35.3
Sheep	.....	37.8
Horses	.....	37.2
Beef Cattle	.....	36.8
Goats	.....	36.8
Average for all classes (weighted)	.....	40.4

The relatively high percentages representing the earning power of well-bred dairy cattle and poultry over scrubs are explained doubtless by the greater facilities for keeping production records of these classes of live stock, thereby contributing to their improvement.

A Profitable Investment. The average reported increase in financial returns from live-stock operations, traceable to the use of purebred sires, was 48.0 per cent. This result includes the returns from both the sale of breeding stock and of animals and products for market. The data appear to show exclusively that well-bred animals are good property not simply for the experienced breeder but for every farmer willing to give them the proper care and opportunity to prove their worth.

The bureau has abundant evidence corroborating this belief. One farmer relates that the impelling force which the reports. Following is a brief summary of the study to be dealt with more fully in a circular which the Department is preparing for publication.

1. Based on utility alone (entirely apart from breeding or sales value) purebred live stock has an earning power from a third to one-half greater than scrub stock. The average superiority of purebreds over scrubs for all classes of farm animals is about 40 per cent.
2. Of the principal points in which purebreds excel other stock, the most prominent are: Superiority and uniformity in conformation and type, greater sale value, greater and more economical production, and earlier maturity.
3. Surplus purebreds are readily salable at satisfactory prices in a ma-majority of cases; but sales and prices depend largely on the quality of stock as shown by breeding and production records, also on the business ability of the breeder.

4. With rare exceptions, purebred sires are satisfied with the quality of the offspring obtained, except that the desire is created in many cases to further improve the quality.

5. The progeny of purebred sires has practically a 50 per cent greater sale value than the progeny of non-purebreds.

6. Purebred sires of good quality are readily obtainable in the experience of three-fourths of the breeders reporting. The principal difficulties are: Paying the price and finding the desirable type, but there is practically unanimous agreement that the results justify the cost.

7. The average increase in financial returns, from live-stock raising, traceable to the use of purebred sires is 48 per cent.

8. Each breeder of purebred live stock influences, on an average, about nine other persons to raise superior animals.

9. Of the chief influences which cause farmers to become breeders of purebred live stock, the three foremost are: Reading agricultural periodicals and bulletins, general observation, and county agents.

10. The principal methods by which breeders expect to continue to improve their stock are: Use of superior sires, careful selection and mating, and use of superior females.

Home Town Helps

TAKE TIME TO "BURNISH UP"

Just a Few Dollars and a Little Labor Can Frequently Work Wonders Around House.

Many a man is keenly concerned about his personal appearance before the world, and yet perhaps a bit negligent in a sense over both the outward and the inward aspect of his home or estate. This, however, is the season when everyone, even those who may be considered among the careless, turns a thought toward a bit of "burnishing up" around the home.

This thought of newness that is born when the pussy willows are beginning to carry their balls of fuzzy greenness, when the first robin is heard on the back fence, may even go so far as to evolve plans for a complete overhauling of the spot one calls home.

Be it remembered, however, that a great deal may be done oftentimes for a small outlay of money. A few dollars invested in paint, a necessary board or two, a small assortment of shrubbery, coupled up to a bit of varnish, wall paper, etc., may go a long way toward creating a more wholesome, cheery aspect whether one views his possessions from the exterior or the interior.

FLOWERS FOR GARDEN WALL

Excellent Effect Can Be Attained by the Addition of Plants That Droop or Trail.

No matter how very small the piece of ground attached to the house may be, it always has possibilities of attractiveness. All that is needed is a bit of thought, of work, and of loving care to make the tiniest garden a joy throughout the summer. In the little garden may be raised gay flowers to decorate the living rooms.

An unusual and beautiful little garden inclosed on three sides by a gray stone wall (four feet high) has acquired an added loveliness by flowers being planted in the crevices of the stones. Plants that droop or trail, and that do not root deeply are best for this kind of planting. Gay, old-fashioned petunias, sweet alyssum, blue ageratum, wild columbine, verbenas, forget-me-not, portulaca—with its rose-like flower—and Kennilworth ivy with its fairy-like pink blossoms will transform the commonplace stone wall into a place of magic and witchery.

Setting Out Plants.

Not all permanent plants can be set out in the spring, but most of them can be. That is the proper time to plant the whole glorious company of flowering shrubs, from golden bells to lilacs and philadelphus. It is the chosen season for setting out the royal family of roses, without which no garden is complete. It is the best time even to move most herbaceous perennials, meaning thereby plants which die down in the fall, but come up in the following spring. Iris, to be sure, ought to be set out in the late summer, shortly after they are through blooming, but a good many of them will stand planting next month with no harder protest than that of blossoming a little late. As for others of the perennial group, especially in inexperienced hands, they are much safer planted in spring than in fall.

Landscape Architect's Work.

Garden planting is the final process in creating a finished home picture. The landscape architect and engineer not only has colors at his disposal similar to the landscape painter; he also has plant materials, varying greatly in form, size, texture and habit. With the color of flowers and the bloom of trees and shrubs and their myriad shades of green foliage, he paints a garden of moods, thinking always of unified compositions, pictures in which each motif makes up one movement of a harmonious whole. With the cooperation of nature, always kind, patient and sympathetic when understood, he "aims at order and hopes for beauty."

Surface Renovating.

When your lawn has been established, you will find it to your advantage to lightly re-seed each season. As early as possible carefully rake off all dead leaves, etc., and give the lawn a dressing of pulverized sheep manure or pure bone meal, and rake in, after which sow lawn seed at the rate of one pound to about 500 square feet, according to the condition of the lawn; after sowing roll thoroughly or pat with the back of a spade.

BIBLE ASCRIBED TO SATAN

Evil One Declared to Have Assisted Monk to Perform Work, for a Fearful Price.

One of the most famous copies of the Scriptures in existence is the one which bears the curious title, "The Devil's Bible." It is an exquisite piece of workmanship, inscribed on 300 asses' skins, and was taken to Stockholm at the conclusion of the Thirty Years' war.

According to tradition this Bible was the work of a poor monk who was condemned to death for some defect, but was told that the sentence would be commuted if he would copy out on asses' skins the entire Bible in a single night. He agreed to try to do it but, finding the task too great, made a compact with the devil to exchange his soul for the required transcript. The devil kept his part of the bargain, and the work was finished on time. The monk's life was spared by his marvelous judges, but tradition is silent as to how he kept his end of the agreement.

For Women of Fame.

There will be a hall in the new home of the Women's National Foundation in Washington, where on columns, one for each state, will be inscribed the names of those women of the states whose memory is most worthy of perpetuation. The hall, which is the suggestion of Mrs. George Barnett, wife of Maj. Gen. Barnett, United States marine corps, will be called "The Hall of Remembrance." The choice of names will be left to the people of each state, and will be passed on by a local board. Living women are excluded.

As the Editor Sees It

Money, Not Morals
 Lady Astor, speaking eloquently and persuasively of her wish that America were at Genoa, predicted that "America will have to go to Europe yet." Whereupon the Chicago Tribune remarks that "she seems to have overlooked the fact that America has been to Europe once." Lady Astor talks about the world looking to America for moral leadership, but it isn't moral leadership that Europe wants as much as it wants Uncle Sam's money. Europe would be willing to take our gold without the moral leadership, if it could get its hands in our pockets.

That New Treaty
 A pretty good indication that this old world is still a long way from peace was had a few weeks ago when it cropped out that Germany and Russia are bound by a secret treaty. While other nations were engaged in trying to frame some kind of organization that would make war akin to impossible, these two were striving to form an alliance by which they hoped to force their unjust claims upon the remainder of the world.

People who follow the trend of world events in the newspapers are not surprised at Russia. It has long been apparent that she will stoop to most anything so long as Lenin and Trotsky are cracking the whip. But it did come as a surprise to learn that, still bleeding from a million wounds and burdened with war debt she will be fifty years in paying Germany should connive against the very nations that have tried to befriend her since the world war. It is a funny kind of diplomacy that secretly steals behind the backs of those whose friendship she knows she must have, to stab them through unwholy alliances with a nation that can never hope to be of much benefit as a friend.

We are lead to believe that Germany's statement that she regrets having been the cause of the world war is mere bluff. There is also enough evidence at hand to warrant the other nations, America included, can do no wises thing than to keep an eye open for trouble from her direction, and that at most any moment.

Pigs
 Mail carriers on our rural districts have been taking a census of pigs, to find out how many there are in America, and we believe every shore citizen will be interested in the figures. Of course the two legged kind will not be included. Uncle Sam believes they will find about 57,000,000 head of swine on the farms. Along with these are some 36,000,000 sheep, 19,000,000 horses, 5,400,000 mules, 24,000,000 milk cows and 41,000,000 other cattle. Civilization advances, but animals are still doing a valuable service for us. For that reason it is never out of place to treat them kindly, remembering that in relation to them from a financial standpoint many of us are not to be counted.

Get It First
 Most worry, through which quite a few citizens pass comes from spending their incomes before they get it. You buy this article and that, feeling sure that within a short time you will have the money to pay for it, and perhaps you might be able to pay if the money comes when and as you expect it. But there are unpleasant expenses you sometimes do not figure on ahead. The worry you may have at present is the result of creditors pressing their just claims, and it might have been avoided if you had used better judgment in waiting until you had the money to pay before you bought. Also, you would not make so many needless expenditures if you followed the plan of having the cash before you spend. Think it over, you who have been accustomed to buy before you have the money to pay and answer yourself whether you got enough enjoyment to repay you out of the things you went in debt for and had to worry along to pay for.

Just a Minute
 You folks who like to read the paper, but who borrow it from your neighbor each week, should return the favor. Why not subscribe awhile and loan it to some neighbor who is not now taking it, so as to sort of even things up. It is true your neighbor is kind and lets you have his paper, sometimes before he has finished his family has remarked a hundred times about the way people borrow and they have wondered why, if the paper is worth borrowing at all it isn't worth subscribing for.

We merely offer this as a suggestion—tell your neighbor that as soon as his time is out you will subscribe for a year, and then you will loan him the paper every week. Go through a whole year of having to hunt up the a newspaper. When temptation shows a charming pair of ankles, man's only chance is to show a clean pair of heels.

We heard a man say that his idea of hell is a place where speeders eternally eat the dust of cars they are not permitted to pass.

HARRIET and the PIPER

CHAPTER XV—Continued.

He had met the widow of Joe Hopper a few nights ago; a faded little pleasant woman of fifty, pathetically grateful for his casual politeness in her strangeness and shyness. He had chanced, quite idly and accidentally, to make an impression on her. She had promised to come to the studio and look at his rugs.

Royal wondered why she dressed so badly; she needed simple materials and flowing lines. He heard himself telling her so.

Richard sat on, on the terrace, thinking, and presently his mother came out and joined him. Wasn't he, the old lady asked elaborately, going to the club? It was almost five o'clock, her son reminded her. Two or three of his business associates were coming to dinner; Hansen was to drive them all into the city later. Now, he just felt lazy.

"No tea today?" he asked, presently. People usually went to the club on Sunday, said his mother. She added, irrelevantly, that Harriet was asleep. Richard said that she had looked tired this morning; sleep was the best thing for her.

But suddenly life became significant and thrilling again; he heard her voice, her laugh. She came swiftly and quietly out to them, smiling at him, settling herself in the chair beside his mother. She wore white, transparent, simple; there were coral beads about her firm young throat. The dew of her deep sleep made her blue eyes wonderful; her cheeks were as pink as a baby's.

"Aren't the June days delicious?" she said. Richard studied her, smilingly, without answering. What would she say next, where would she move her eyes, or lay her white hand, he wondered. When she murmured to his mother in an undertone, he tried to catch the words.

"Did you have a good sleep?" Richard asked. She flashed him an eloquent look.

"Oh—the most delightful of my whole life! Eight hours without stirring!"

The Hoyts arrived; a handsome mother and two equally handsome daughters. Harriet went to them gracefully; Richard saw that she was accepting good wishes. She took the callers to his mother, and filled their cups herself.

"She certainly is wonderful!" Richard said. He perfectly realized his own suddenly deepening feeling for her, but he dared not analyze it yet. When Mrs. Hoyt hinted at a dinner, he took part in the conversation. "Thursday? Why not, Harriet? We have no engagement for Thursday?"

She flushed brightly, signaling to him that she had already indicated an excuse. They had never dined together away from home. He need not think, said Harriet's anxious manner, that he need carry the appearance of marriage so far.

"But—but aren't Nina and I to be in town Thursday?" she ventured.

"Shopping. You can make that next week!" Richard said. He loved her confusion.

"Then we surely will! Thank you," she said to Mrs. Hoyt.

"Thursday, then, at eight?" the caller said, departing. Richard sauntered with them to their car, and returned to find Harriet half-scandalized, half-laughing.

"But do you want to dine with them?" she asked.

"Why not?" His smile challenged her, and she laughed hardily.

"I suppose there is no reason why not, Mr. Carter?"

"You can wear"—he gestured—"the black and gold thing. They'll all be watching you!"

"Oh," she said, considering earnestly. "I have a much handsomer one than that. Blue and silver. You've not seen it."

"Blue and silver, then." Richard felt a distinct regret when the men he expected appeared. There was but one figure of any interest to him on the shady, flower-scented terrace, and that was a woman's figure in a white gown.

For two or three days he was conscious of a constant interest in her appearances and disappearances, a constant desire to please her. He was conscious of one mastering curiosity: he wanted to know just how Harriet regarded him. It seemed suddenly of supreme importance. He thought of it in his office, and smiled to himself during important business conferences, wondering about it. It seemed incredible to him, now, that his experiences of the past year had been so largely concerned with Harriet. His wife's companion, his daughter's governess, his own capable and dignified housekeeper, the woman he had so hastily married, all seemed a different person, a quite visionary person, with whom such business-like arrangements had been possible.

But Harriet was beginning to seem to him a stranger who possessed at once the most mysterious and child-like, the most beautiful and the most baffling personality that he had ever known. He made excuses to go home early, just to catch glimpses of this wife who was not his wife. That he had ever taken a fatherly, advisory tone with this woman was unbelievable; her mere approach made him catch his breath and lose his coherency. He had walked into her room—he had patronized her—he had asked her casually to marry him as if she had been fifty, and as plain as she was lovely!

Richard shuddered as he thought of it. He made constant efforts to engage her in personalities, but she evaded him. There was a real thrill for in the quiet dinner at the Hoyts.

Mrs. Carter, said slow old bewhiskered John Hoyt, was an extremely pretty woman. "My wife"—Richard in answering called her that—"looks particularly well in an evening gown." Indeed she looked exquisite in the blue and silver dress, laughing—still with that adorable mist of strangeness and shyness about her—with her neighbors at the table, and afterward in the drawing room, waving her silver fan slowly while Freda Hoyt, who quite obviously adored her, whispered her long confidences.

Coming home in the limousine they had neighbors with them, old Doctor and Mrs. Carmichael, so he might not have the word alone with her for which he had been longing all evening. But he stopped her in the wide, dim hallway when they reached Crownlands.

"Tired?" he said, at the foot of the stairs.

"Not a bit!" There was an enchanting vitality about her. She had slipped the thin wrap from her shoulders, and she turned to him her lovely, happy face. "Did you want me?"

"I wanted to say something to you," Richard said, feeling awkward as a boy.

"In there?" She nodded, suddenly alert, toward the library.

"Why in there?" he asked, with a little husky laugh. His one impulse was to put his arms about her.

"I thought—bills, perhaps?" Harriet said, innocently. It was the third day of the month; he had often consulted her as to expenses before this.

"No," Richard said, with another unsteady little laugh. "It wasn't bills. I was just wondering—if I had been very stupid," he said, taking one of her hands, and looking up from the fingers that lay in his to the face that now wore an expression a little frightened, despite the smile.

"Never with me!" Harriet said, in a low tone.

"Never so blind," Richard said, "never so matter-of-fact that I hurt your feelings? Nothing of—that sort?"

"Always the kindest friend I ever had!" the girl answered, unsteadily, and with suddenly wet eyes. "The—the most generous!"

He looked at her hand again, looked up at her as if he would speak. But instead, she felt her fingers pressed, and felt her heart thump with a delicious terror.

Bottomley came noiselessly, discreetly, across the hall. Instantly the woman in blue and silver was all the mistress.

"Is Mr. Ward in, Bottomley?"

"He dined at one, Mrs. Carter."

"Oh, thank you! You may lock up, then. Good-night, Mr. Carter! Good-night, Bottomley!"

She was gone. The blue-and-silver gown and the bunched folds of the furred coat vanished on the stairway landing. The tall clock that she passed struck eleven. And Richard, going into his library, realized that he was deeply and passionately in love. He could think of nothing else—he did not wish to think of anything else. Her face came between him and his book, her voice loitered in his ears, her precise, pretty phrasing, the laughter that sometimes lurked beneath her tones.

They were at the country club; Harriet chaperoning Nina, who was down at the tennis court with a group of young persons; Richard breathless and happy from a hard game of eighteen holes. He had encountered her on the porch, on his way to the showers, experiencing, as he did so, the thrill that belongs only to the unexpected encounter. Now they loitered at the railing, in the shade of the green awnings, as entirely oblivious of watching eyes as if the clubhouse were the library at home.

"Mrs. Carter," said a woman in bright yellow, coming up to them suddenly, "will you be a darling and come and talk to my French officer? The girls have all been practicing their Berlitz on him, and he's almost losing his mind! Dick," added this matron, who had linked her arm about Harriet's waist, "for heaven's sake go clean up! Can't you find time to talk to your wife at home? I've been watching you for five minutes, getting my arms burned simply black—will you come, Mrs. Carter? That's the poor soul, over there with Sarah. I don't know why I've had a French governess for that girl for seven years!"

"To save the life of a fellow creature—" Harriet said in her liquid French. She went off, laughingly, in the other woman's custody; Richard looked after them a moment.

He saw them join the group of smiling girls and the harassed Frenchman; saw the alien's face brighten as Harriet was introduced. A moment later a boy with a tennis racket dashed up to them, and there was a scattering in the direction of the courts. The girls surrounded the boy, and streamed away chattering. The matron in yellow came back to her card table. And Harriet, unfurling her parasol, deep in conversation with the captured soldier, sauntered slowly after the tennis players. The afternoon sunshine sent clean shadows across the clipped grass; the stretched blue silk of Harriet's parasol threw a mellow orange light upon her, tawny hair and saffron-colored gown.

Richard had a child's desperate wish that he was dressed, and might run after them.

But it was not at the tennis that he looked, twenty minutes later, when he reached the courts; although a brilliant play was being made, and there was a spattering of applause. His eyes instantly found Harriet's figure; she was still talking to the Frenchman, whose olive face was glowing with interest and admiration, and not more than eight inches, Richard thought, from her own. Harriet's own face wore the shadow of a smile, her lashes were dropped, and she was gently pushing the point of her closed parasol into the green turf. The chairs in which they sat had been slightly turned from the court.

Richard engaged himself in conversation with two or three men and women who were watching the youngsters' game, and presently found himself applauding his son for a brilliant ace. But after perhaps five minutes he walked quite without volition, straight to Harriet's neighborhood, and she rose at once, introduced her new friend, and with a glance at her wrist, announced that she must go.

"Ward said he would drive me home the instant it was over," said Harriet, clapping heartily for the triumphant finish of the set.

"I'll drive you home!" Richard said, instantly. "I've the small car."

"Friday night!" Harriet smiled. For Friday night was the night for a men's dinner and poker game at the country club, and Richard usually liked to be there.

"I can come back!" he persisted, suddenly caring more for this concession than anything else in the world. Without another word she agreed, bade her Frenchman what seemed to Richard a voluble good-by, and when the bowing officer disappeared turned with a reminiscent smile.

"And now what?"

"Where did you learn to chatter French that way?" Richard said, leading the way to the line of parked motors.

"Oh, we lived in Paris—old Mrs. Rogers and I." Harriet reminded him carelessly. And reaching the little rise of ground that lay between the clubhouse and the parking field, she stood still, looking off across the exquisite spread of fields and valleys, banded by great strips of woods, and flooded now by the streaming shadows and golden lights of the late afternoon. "What a day!" she said, filling her lungs with great breaths of the sweet air. "What an hour!"

"What I meant to say to you up there on the porch," Richard said. "When that—that woman interrupted—"

Harriet herself interrupted with a laugh.

"You say 'that woman' as if it was a bitter, deadly curse!" she said.

"Well—" They had reached the car now, and Richard was investigating the oil gauge and spark plugs under the hood. "Well, a woman like that breaks in—nothing to her!" he said with scorn, straightening up.

"Yes, but at a country club?" Harriet offered, placatingly, as she got into the front seat, and tucked the pongee robe snugly about the saffron-colored gown.

"I suppose so!" He got in beside her; there was a moment of backing and wrenching before they glided out smoothly on the white driveway.

"What I meant to say was this," he added, suddenly, with a sidewise glance from his wheel. "I—I want you to realize that I appreciate the injustice—the crudeness of my rushing to you in New Jersey that Christmas day. I realize that we all have imposed on you—we've taken you too much for granted! I was in trouble, and I couldn't think of any other way out of it. But for any man to put a proposition like that to any woman—"

They were driving very slowly. He looked at her again, and met a wondering look in her beautiful eyes that still further confused him. He had been uncomfortably conscious of an odd confusion in touching upon this subject at all. Yet his mind had been full of it all day.

"I wanted to say something to you," Richard said, feeling awkward as a boy.

"I never felt so. I assure you!" Harriet said with her liquid, friendly look. Richard felt that there was more to say, but realized that he had selected an unfortunate time for these confidences.

"I'm afraid I've been extremely stupid in the matter," he said, feeling for his words. "I've gone about it clumsily. To tell you the truth—What does that boy want?"

It was Ward who was coming toward them across the green, with great springs and leaps, like some mountain animal.

"Give us a lift!" shrieked Ward, flinging himself upon the car as its speed decreased. "Something is the matter with my engine—engine peccatoris is what I call it! Father, Mr.

Tom Grant expects you to dine at his table tonight, he said to remind you. And, Harriet, angel of angels, we will be about six or seven about the groaning board; is that all right?"

"I told Bottomley six or seven," Harriet said, serenely. "Ward, get in or get out," she added, maternally, "don't hang over the door in that blood-curdling way!"

She had put her arm about the boy to steady him; they began to discuss tennis scores with enthusiasm. Richard drove the rest of the way home almost without speaking.

He planned to see Harriet again that evening, and left the club at eleven o'clock, after an incredibly dull game, with the definite hope that the youngsters would dance, or in some other way prolong the summer evening at least until midnight. His heart sank when he reached Crownlands; the lower floor showed only the tempered lights that burned until the latest member of the family came in, and Bottomley reported that the young persons had gone upstairs at about half-past ten. It was now half-past eleven.

Richard debated sending Harriet a message to the effect that he would like to see her for a moment. The flaw in this plan was that he could think of nothing about which there was the slightest necessity of seeing her. He felt restless and anything but sleepy, and glanced irresolutely at the library door, and at the stairway. Suddenly uproar broke out upstairs; there were thumping feet, shrieks, wild laughter, and slamming doors. With a suddenly lightened heart Richard ran up the wide, square flight to the landing. His son, in pajamas that were more or less visible beneath his streaming robe of Oriental silk, was prouetting about the upper hall with a siphon of soda water. Subdued giggles and smothered gasps indicated that the young ladies were somewhere near, in hiding. Young Hopper, under Ward's direction, was investigating doors and alcoves.

"Amy Hawkes—Amy Hawkes—Amy Hawkes—come into court!" Ward intoned. "Drunk and disorderly!"

"Here, here, here!" Richard said. "What's all this?"

Amy and Nina, with hysterical shrieks, immediately forsook cover, and dashed down to him, clinging to him wildly.

"Oh, Father! Make them stop! Oh, Mr. Carter, save us!" screamed the girls in delicious terror. "Oh, they got poor Francesca—she's locked up in your room! They climbed up our porch, after they swore to Harriet that they wouldn't make another sound—"

Harriet now appeared in the hallway, her hair falling in a braid over her shoulder, and the long lines of the black robe she wore giving her figure an unusual effect of height. She did not see Richard immediately, for she had eyes only for Ward, as she caught his shoulder, and took away the siphon.

"Now, Ward—look here," she said, sternly. "What sort of honor do you call this! Half an hour ago I thought all this nonsense was stopped. Shame on you! Those girls promised me—"

She saw Richard, and laughed, the color flooding her face.

"Aren't they simply shameless!" she said. "I had them all settled down, once! Nina, where's Francesca? You see, Harriet said, so that they could all be together, and this is my reward!"

The girls, entirely unalarmed by her severity, had deserted Richard now, and were clinging to her with weak laughter and feeble explanations.

"Francesca unlocked that door, and rushed into Mr. Carter's room!" Amy explained, wiping her eyes. "And then the boys locked her in there!"

The composed reappearance of Francesca at this point, however, added to the general hilarity.

"You did not lock me in, Smarties!" Francesca drawled, childishly. "They climbed to the balcony, and we were—well, we were undressing," she said to Richard, "and here they were hammering and yelling like—like Si-washes! We grabbed our wrappers, we wanted to—"

"We wanted to lock them out there!" Amy explained, laughing uncontrollably. "But—"

"And I snapped off the light—" Nina interposed, with deep satisfaction.

"And, mind you—" "And, Father—" "And the wonder was that we didn't die of fright—" "Now, look here," Harriet said, in the babel, "I'll give you all exactly two minutes to quiet down. Never in the course of my life—"

Richard thought her maternal indulgence delightful; he thought the young people who clung about her charming in their apologetic and laughing promises. Ward and Bruce

Richard went with the girls and Harriet to the rooms that had been atacked. Pilgrim, the tireless, was already there, replacing pillows, straightening beds, untwisting curtains. The girls, with reminiscent bubbles of laughter, began to help her.

After the last good-nights, Richard and Harriet had no choice but to cross the hall again, and they stood there for a moment, laughing at the recent excitement.

"After twelve," Harriet said, with a smiling shake of her head. "Aren't they young demons! However," she added in an undertone, "it's the best thing in the world for Nina! This sort of nonsense will blow cobwebs away!"

Richard was only conscious of a desire to prolong this intimate little moment of parental consultation.

"She doesn't speak of Blondin?" he asked.

"Not at all. The birthday came and went placidly enough," Harriet answered, suddenly intent after her laughing. And as he did not speak for a second, she looked up at him, innocently. "You don't think she's hiding anything?" she asked, anxiously.

"I—no, I hardly think so," Richard answered, confusedly. Their eyes met, and he smiled vaguely. Then Harriet slowly crossed the hall to the door of the guest room, where she was spending the night, and gave him an only half-audible good-night. Richard stood watching the door for a moment or two after it had closed upon the slender, dimly seen figure. Then he went to his own room, and began briskly enough to move about between the mirrors and dressing room, windows and bed. But two or three times he stopped short, and found himself staring vacantly into space, all movement arrested, even thought arrested for whole long minutes at a time.

Harriet, entering her room, closed the door noiselessly, and remained for a long time standing with her hands resting against it behind her, her eyes alert, her breath coming as if she had been running. There was only a night light in the bedroom; the covers were still tumbled back from her sudden flight toward the rioting youngsters in the hall. She got back into her bed and opened her book. But for a long time she neither slept nor read; her eyes widened at the faintest sound of the summer night; her heart thumped madly when the curtains whispered at the window, or the wicker chairs gave the faintest creak. It had not been only for Richard that the midnight hour of responsibility and informality shared had had its thrill.

One o'clock, Harriet closed her book and snapped off her light. But first she went to the window and leaned out into the sweet darkness. There was shadow unbroken everywhere; no light in all the big house was burning as late as her own.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Chess Known in Europe Before 1601. In 1601 St. Peter Damian wrote a letter to Pope Alexander, bitterly complaining that a certain bishop was wasting his time playing chess instead of attending to the affairs of the diocese. This proves that the game was known in Europe before the year given. The Spaniards are supposed to have been the first European nation to grow enthusiastic over it. They probably learned it from their Moorish dependents.

HAVE HIGHEST REGARD FOR LIFE

Brahmans' Ethics Do Not Allow Them to Destroy Even the Most Annoying Pests.

Mr. C. E. Tyndale Biscope, in his book, "Kashmir in Sunlight and Shade," gives the following entertaining account of the Brahmans' peculiarities: "It's very difficult to understand the Brahmans' ethics. Often in the summer time, when one is teaching a class, it happens that a mosquito or a fly settles on one's hand. By force of habit I end his life with a slap. At this the Brahmans jump and cry out, 'Oh, oh! you have taken a life! You have taken a life!' and suck their fingers hard and crack their knuckles, which is a sign of distress and horror. They have of late given up this custom of showing horror at the death of a fly or mosquito, for they hate the rector, 'Don't you eat mutton? They will not kill insects, and I have seen a boy pick a flea off of himself and then quickly put it in a place of safety down the neck of the boy next to him, for if he had put it on the floor it might have been trodden upon, or perhaps have returned to his own person. This belief of theirs in the preservation of pests is very unfortunate. It is the same with rats and mice, which abound. The furthest they will go in the matter is to catch them in traps and then carry them to the opposite side of the river and there release them. But as people on both sides of the river play the same game, the rats do not decrease greatly."

The Reason.

A negro was brought up before the judge on a charge of disorderly conduct. "This man," said his accuser, "was going on like a lunatic last night; cursing, groaning, blaspheming, kicking furniture, shrieking, wailing. Nobody in the neighborhood could get any sleep." "What have you to say, Sam?" asked the judge. "Judge," answered Sam. "Ah's gwine ter tell de truth. Ah done got a slight visitation uv religion. An' if Ah done talk loud 'n' mos' folks it am bekaise Ah sure am furdur from de Lawd dan odde men."

COFFIN IS HIS JOY AND PRIDE

Most Prized Article of Furniture in German's Home Is Made by Himself.

FEARED BURIAL ALIVE

So He Constructed Coffin Providing Means Whereby He Could Be Saved—Bell, Pipe and Saws—Which Are Provided.

Richard, N. J.—A coffin is one of the principal articles of furniture in the home of Christian Straube, a native of Germany, who points with pride to his last habitation which he built with his own hands and according to his own ideas.

Straube occupies a small hut in the woods between Richland and Milmay. The shack contains one room and the furniture consists of a stove, a small table, a cot, a chair and the coffin.

This coffin is Straube's pride and joy, not on account of its intrinsic value nor its expensive material, for it is made of boards sawed from trees in the surrounding woods, but because of its completeness.

The grim box contains complete paraphernalia to safeguard the occupant from unnecessary suffering in case he is buried without being really dead.

Fresh Air for "Corpse." In the cover, above the place where the man's nose will be, is a hole in which a pipe, ten feet in length, is set, which will extend above the surface of the earth, affording plenty of fresh air to the "corpse."

On top of the pipe is a large bell connected with a rope to be placed in the occupant's hand so he can ring for rescuers if he regains consciousness in the coffin.

Straube does not believe in embalming, and has from his youth thought with fear and anguish of the possibilities of being buried and coming to life when put snugly away under six feet of earth.

It was this fear that prompted him to build his own coffin provided with the necessary safeguards against such a calamity.

he placed in his hand immediately after death.

So some time in the future one may hear a bell ring in Mary's Landing cemetery, and they will know that it is Straube coming to life, breathing the cool air and eating his sandwich, waiting for some one to answer the bell and bring him to the surface and to the outside world.

MAN COMES BACK TO PRISON

Escapes From Institution in West Virginia, but Returns of His Own Accord.

Point Pleasant, W. Va.—When a man breaks out of jail it is usually with the intention of staying away from it, but the rule does not apply to Strother Colley of this county, who escaped from the Mason county jail here some months ago. He was sentenced to a four months' term for sending a threatening letter through the mails.

Sheriff John F. Lewis was aroused from his bed by the ringing of the jail doorbell. He responded and was surprised to find Colley standing there. Colley said he had come back to eat.

He had wandered over several states since leaving the jail, had been unable to obtain employment and was also unable to get "three squares" a day. Colley had three months of his sentence to serve, and he figured it was easier to eat by staying in jail than roaming the country.

The Sandman Story

FOX SPOILS THE FUN

When Toby Dog and Ikey Drake were tired of living in the barnyard they did not know that Mr. Fox was going to spoil all their fun, or they would not have set up housekeeping in a hut by the river close to the woods.

Ikey Drake said he was tired of having all his relatives quacking after him every time he went anywhere, and Mr. Dog said he was tired of sleeping with both eyes open at night to watch for the farmer, when in the daytime he was always chained up. So one night off they tramped and went to live in a hut by the river, and all went well until Mr. Dog growled over having so many worms for food instead of "a nice ham bone or something."

Ikey Drake began to quack loudly that bones were too hard to digest and that Mr. Dog would find his health much better if he made a diet of things such as he ate.

It was just then that Mr. Fox, strolling by in the woods, heard the noise and came that way to see what was going on. When he saw fat Ikey

Drake he forgot all about Toby, only that he was a young dog and might be fooled if necessary. He wanted Ikey very much for a dinner some night, so he set his wits at work to find a way.

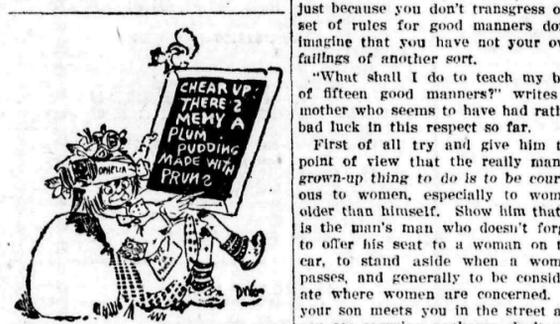

The next day Ikey went swimming on the pond and Mr. Fox, who was watching in the woods, strolled along to the hut and said:

"Ah, I see I have a neighbor. Mr. Dog! I do not live far from here, and you and I ought to have some fun hunting. Do you like chasing rabbits?"

"Rabbits?" repeated Toby, his ears sticking straight up, "I love nothing better. Show me one and see."

Mr. Fox knew just where to take Toby Dog, and it was not long before he was running through the woods after poor Mr. Rabbit, and Mr. Fox, knowing that Toby would be busy for some time, ran back to the hut to wait for Ikey Drake.

Now it happened that Ikey had met all his family on the pond, and because they were afraid he would leave them again followed him back to the hut, in spite of all poor Ikey could do to get rid of them.

FACTS about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

ROBERTA
ROBERTA, the charming boyish name signifying "bright fame," is one of the many examples of feminine names coined directly from the masculine cognomen, Robert. Though Robert can be clearly traced, there is no record of the evolution of the feminine and it can only be deduced that some parent, disappointed at the birth of a daughter, bestowed the family name upon the girl-child and added the final "a" as a concession to the sex.

Roberta has a charmingly poetical heritage. Her counterpart appears in the most famous passages of England's early history. The origin of the name was in "red," which accounts for the translation of "bright."

One of the wild dukes of Normandy brought it back to England and nu-

The Right Thing at the Right Time

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

THE BOY'S MANNERS
EVERY age has its own peculiar bad manners. The self-satisfied mother is most apt to show one type of ill breeding; the pretty girl is prone to be rude in another. The business man errs in this direction and the college boy in another. So just because you don't transgress one set of rules for good manners don't imagine that you have not your own failings of another sort.

"What shall I do to teach my boy of fifteen good manners?" writes a mother who seems to have had rather bad luck in this respect so far.

First of all try and give him the point of view that the really manly, grown-up thing to do is to be courteous to women, especially to women older than himself. Show him that it is the man's man who doesn't forget to offer his seat to a woman on the car, to stand aside when a woman passes, and generally to be considerate where women are concerned. If your son meets you in the street and you are carrying packages, don't say, "Bob, I want you to carry these things for me, do you hear?" Instead tell him that now that he is getting to be a grown man he must act as a man would act and that a man would of his own accord offer to take packages from a woman he met in the street.

It is especially hard to teach a boy good manners if his father is lax in this regard, for usually a boy thinks of his father as the embodiment of all that is thoroughly manly. In fact, usually a father has better luck in instilling a fondness for good manners in a boy than does a mother.

Perhaps we don't realize fully the importance of teaching boys the superficialities of good breeding. It is important because it is so difficult for a man to master these things once they have been neglected in boyhood.

HAVING FRIENDS

Be bright and jovial among your guests.
—Shakespeare.

AT THIS season visiting around is a popular diversion. And it is well. Most of the pleasure in life comes through associations of one kind or another. Without real friends to greet or to welcome one, no person could find much enjoyment in life. But it is essential that our guests be the proper kind and that those whom we visit welcome us because they like us and not because an ulterior motive is back of the hand they proffer us.

Unless those we would welcome to our hospitality are those we can welcome to our respect and esteem, if not our friendship, it is far better that the latchstring be not left out for them. We cannot be false in our greeting without feeling a keen resentment against ourselves.

And the same rule applies when we go visiting. For our own happiness and self-respect it is far better never to visit with people at all than to realize the welcome given us is hypocritical.

Someone has said: "First flay, a guest; the second, a burden; the third, a pest." Do those you invite to enjoy the hospitality of your own roof come under this category; or do you fit in to it when you accept the invitation of so-called friends? It is well carefully to consider this question before trying to be one of the jovial throng in your home or elsewhere. There must be sincerity or false greetings are certain to find one out.

Just as one's sins will find him out, will false friends deceive him and will his own hypocrisy lead him to a sorry route.

Why Castoria?

YEARS ago Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups were the remedies in common use for Infants and Children; Castor Oil so nauseating as to be almost impossible and the others all containing Opium in one form or another, but so disguised as to make them pleasant to the taste, yet really to stupefy the child and give the appearance of relief from pain.

It required years of research to find a purely vegetable combination that would take the place of these disagreeable, unpleasant and vicious remedies that from habit had become almost universal. This was the inception of, and the reason for, the introduction of Fletcher's Castoria, and for over 30 years it has proven its worth, received the praise of Physicians everywhere and become a household word among mothers.

A remedy ESPECIALLY prepared for Infants and Children and no mother would think of giving to her baby a remedy that she would use for herself without consulting a physician.

Just help baby out of its trouble tomorrow with a taste of Castoria. Watch the difference in the tone of the cry, the look in the eye, the wiggle in the tiny fingers. The transformation is complete—from pain to pleasure. Try it.

The following is an extract from a letter sent by a member of the New York Produce Exchange in New York to one of the highly esteemed mothers of West Creek:

"Please know, my dear Mother, that in all this world there is not one that loves and reveres his dear little Mother more than I. Youth never knows, cannot, but as the years round us out, we come to the normal view of things and the scales balance more evenly and easily. Not that I have not always loved you, you know I have, but as the skirmishes settle down to the steady battle, there is a subtle change in the nature of man which transcends ideals and ideas and forms a certain unexplainable and unexpressible Consciousness of that which is real. Included in this is a knowledge an appreciation, an understanding of what Mother love means and has always meant; but which was impossible except through experience and years."

Our landing road is being raised and gravelled. This is a big improvement and was greatly needed.
